Instead of a conflict of efforts between the state and federal authorities, or a contest on the part of the Telluride bank against the endeavor of the New York banks to recover their money, there ought to be the closest cooperation. It is not a time for playing into the hands of Waggoner, but of righting the wrong that he has done. Waggoner's concern for the depositors in his bank has no appeal when he undertakes to say that those who had no connection with the situation, should be looted in order to prevent any loss. He endeavored to shift the burden from Paul to Peter, his scheme was disclosed and now it is a case of restoring the money, which has been intercepted, to Peter where it belongs. His responsibilities to Paul are not discharged, but by no stretch of the imagination can it be made to seem that Peter should meet them.

WORKING THROUGH COLLEGE.

Evidently as the result of the experience of educational institutions, colleges in some instances and college heads in others are endeavoring to discourage those who would work their way through college.

From their statements their experiences show that the time that is required for the work and the time that is required for class room and study require so much of the day that the student is not able in many instances to give proper attention to their physical condition. The result is an injury to health and a lowering of the academic standing.

Without a doubt there are those who have gone through college by working at least part time who have experienced no harmful effects. On the other hand it has caused a recognition on their part of what is involved and a greater appreciation of what they were getting. They have made the most of their opportunities instead of frittering their time and money away. There are doubtless others who have been inspired by such cases, but who were not physically equipped to stand the strain. The spirit was willing but the flesh was weak.

Nevertheless it is still considered desirable by many institutions that there should be bureaus maintained for the purposing of aiding those who want something to do while going through college. It is of great advantage to many even though there is the possibility of regarding the effort on the part of some as being not much more than a fad. On the other hand there seems to be ground for the belief that many of those who work their way through college will make a greater record for themselves, through personal effort, than many of those who simply go to college for a good time and proceed to concentrate thereon.

Still if there are those who are injured by attempting too much there is good and sufficient reason for undertaking to discourage it. Institutions which are declaring such a policy apparently feel convinced that it is the wise course and are putting forth their requirements accordingly. This will also operate to reduce the number of students in many institutions where more seek to enter than can be accommodated, but it will always be apparent that many who do nothing in going through college might make better use of their time through a little work.

WATER SUPPLIES.

Many are the cities which are experiencing a shortage of water. This is directly due to the prolonged dry spell but it has nevertheless created a situation which cannot fail to make these particular communities sit up and take notice.

There is no telling when there is going to be a drought and the weather man doesn't indicate his plans long enough in advance to permit of hurried provisions to counteract it. It is necessary to create reserves that will suffice in case there is a shortage of rain and it is likewise necessary to check the wastes which are constantly going on whether there is plenty of water or a shortage.

Even without the use of the new reservoir Norwich is not worrying. From Middletown comes the information that that city is not fearing a shortage, is well supplied with reservoirs and another which is being gradually developed will give protection for the future. In addition it is noted that that city gets valuable water conservation through the use of meters.

When it comes to a water supply there is wisdom in providing for a supply beyond immediate requirements and against the possibilities of a drought. Norwich has had its experiences with depleted supplies due to lack of rain and it is hoped that they will be the last of that kind. But what was brought glaringly to our attention is now confronting many cities and towns.

While individuals must strive to provide against a rainy day it is the duty of cities to guard against the dry season. This can and should be done by providing the storage reservoirs where the surplus rainfalls can be impounded until needed and the failure to encourage these reserves leaves a community in a desperate situation when the rainfall is lacking. Every drought demonstrates that the city which makes no provision of this kind is following a shortsighted policy.

THE STRAW HAT SEASON.

Believe it or not tomorrow we reach the date when the straw hat is supposed to be relegated to the dark corner of the closet, if it is in condition to warrant preservation. Opinions will differ both as to the condition and the time when the changing of headgear should be made. Some have already made the shift and it is possible to find those who have been getting along without a straw all summer, but there is a general practice of putting it aside at this time of the year.

There is no law involved lest it be one advanced by fashion. Anyone has a perfect right to wear a straw hat all winter if it serves his purposes and tastes the best. There will be many who will cling to the straw for some days to come, and especially so if the remainder of the month proves warm and sunny. The weather can be expected to play a conspicuous part in reaching a decision for many.

With many people it is a case of not welcoming the changes. They get used to one style of a hat, it may be a felt, a cap or an iron man, and they dislike changing in the spring, but after they have been forced, as they claim, to put on a straw they are equally loathe to part with it. It gets to be a matter of habit with them as to what kind of a hat they wear and it is a habit about which not a few are disposed to display a liberal amount of independence.

Thus the ending of the straw hat season, the generally accepted ending, is going to be about the same as the other before it. The big decision will be made by the weatherman while everyone is entitled to that great American privilege of doing as he pleases.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

It must be clear to all intelligent observers that the labor element in this country is striving for higher standards. When the contest began, years ago, there was a great display of ignorance, crudity and selfishness on both sides, capital as well as labor. But it must be perfectly clear to all observers that now the question is handled with much more wisdom and conscience than formerly. It was once a battle which determined only which party had the greatest powers of endurance. There was no coming together to debate the question in the light of facts so as to settle the disagreement on the basis of right. But all this is a part of past history and today there is a much better understanding between the parties since there is an attempt on the part of both parties to treat one another with justice. The principle of The Golden Rule is now in evidence in all their discussions.

These lines are written just as the excessive heat wave is breaking, and this raises the question what is it that produces waves of high temperatures? Have they any particular value to vegetable or animal life? Do they conform to any known physical law to that extent that they can be predicted beforehand with scientific accuracy? These are questions on which we would like to have more light shed. As far as I can learn no competent scholar is willing to risk his reputation for learning by stating definitely just when and why the next wave will appear. What we know is that they cause great physical discomfort and apparently aggravate the drought conditions. Probably there is a purpose in all this, for we cannot reasonably say that, "He who holds the world in the hollow of His hand" makes His children suffer needlessly, but the question is what is the purpose? Is there something in this physical world that actually needs these heat waves?

A parallel question to the above is: Why do we have periods of drought? Are they haphazard, or do they come with a known regularity? If there is some fixed system about it certainly it is not sufficiently well known to scientists to make them very generous in expressing their views of the subject. There is a certain hypothesis afloat in regard to the matter of droughts that seems to be reasonable whether it is scientific or not. It runs as follows: It is the natural tendency of the ground to produce, and to that extent that it will be exhausted unless something occurs to check it. Now an extended drought has a tendency to do this very thing. That it virtually prevents this producing tapers off from over exhaustion. Whether this is the true explanation, or not it must be admitted that it contains a rational hypothesis. However it is evidence that some guiding hand is at the helm.

Questions like the above open to us a while continent of perplexing questions. Take, if you please, the great problem of suffering. I mean, of course, innocent suffering. There is a line of suffering that is readily explanable, because it is the result of wrong doing, either on the part of the sufferer himself or from others. That needs no comment, because it follows the law of cause and effect. But how about that class of suffering to which a cause cannot be imputed, as far as human knowledge extends? While these lines are being written a little unfortunate babe is being born in Canton, and another one not so unfortunate is being born in Boston. The latter will have the best scientific care; will be in the best possible atmosphere for normal development; will in time be educated at Harvard, and will make a name for himself. The other little fellow is born in abject squalor. He will be half fed, will grow up puny, will grow up in slum life, and possibly will die of starvation. Now why should this be? Does it occur to you that an after life is demanded that these things be adjudicated?

In one of the above paragraphs reference is made to the broader outlook that both labor and capital take on many of the human phases involved. And among these broader outlooks may be cited the protest against the inhuman and wastefulness of child labor. This has not been so much of a problem here in New England as elsewhere in the country. In the eastern states—thanks to our Puritan inheritance—emphasis has always been put upon the importance of education. We have always been willing to have the boys and girls when quite young enter the schoolhouse rather than the cotton factory. We have been willing to be taxed to support common schools. But in some parts of this great land little children have been committed to the factory. But indications now are, thank God, that this custom, like other forms of slavery, will soon be a dead nightmare. Both labor and capital are now opposed to the exploitation of little children.

The school bell has been ringing and the army of young folks has responded. It is a good sign of healthy community conditions when the percentage of attendance in our common schools has the upward trend. We cannot escape the logical trend of this fact. The people from other nations are here in great abundance. The average number of children in these families is much greater than in the families of the native born. The question is shall these children grow up ignorant and become a menace to our national life, or shall they grow up to be intelligent citizens and appreciate the much greater opportunities they have than what their parents had in their home country? It is not the number of people that will make us great—China shows that very clearly—but the quality of our people. No country can make a better investment of money than by putting it into the improvement of its citizens.

It doubtless seems to many taxpayers in these days that the demand is greater, and this is doubtless true in the aggregate, but is not this offset by the fact that there has never been in the history of the world so much wealth upon which the taxes are levied? There was a time in this country when we spoke of $1000 in subdued tones: it was such a colossal amount, but now we are very flippant in the use of the word "million" as we apply it to money. To be sure living expenses have greatly increased during the last 25 years, so also have wages and other income. There never was a time when the average man owned so many stocks and bonds as now. One of the pathetic conditions of our present life is where families are trying to live on a 19th century salary. Then in a small place a minister with a $1000 salary, with house rent free, could get along quite well, but to give him no more today is equivalent to starvation.

Wasn't there just a tinge of disappointment when September arrived and as we came back from our annual vacation and had no local agricultural affair to go to? It was certainly one good opportunity to make the most possible out of Labor day. Probably there are very best of reasons why those who stood back of the agricultural fair felt that it ought for financial and other reasons to be discontinued. But somehow we do miss those fat hogs and fakirs that made these fairs so colorful. There is, however, some consolation in the thought that while many of these county fairs have been compelled to suspend the state fairs have been improving. The one they usually put across at Springfield is worth making a journey of more than 60 miles to see. Long may such fairs live!

SLAVES STILL BEING EMANCIPATED IN REMOTE WORLD AREAS

Persia, land of Omar Khayyam and the Peacock Throne, has abolished slave trading by act of the Majlis, the Persian national assembly. According to a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic society, this edict reveals that slavery is yet rife in many Asiatic and African countries.

"Inland China with its huge population has perhaps the largest number of slaves of any country," the bulletin states, 'but Chinese slaves are seldom accorded the harsh treatment once given the African Negro. In China the slaves, mostly girls, are 'adopted' when very young, and are trained in the cares of the household. Slavery is nominally abolished and very little of it is apparent near the coast but in some of the more inaccessible parts slavemarts do a thriving business. In such places the foundling hospitals are the chief sources of supply for the purchase of girl slaves.

Slaves in Arabia

"The Arabs were historic slave traders of the past but modern disapproval has limited their trading. There are still slaves in Arabia, but the majority of them were born into bondage. They regard themselves as better than the ordinary tribesmen. Usually they are found in the household of some emir or tribal chief, well fed, well protected and loved by their masters.

"Slavery is regarded in a varying light in different parts of the Arabian peninsula. In the great desert districts of Jebel Shammar and Nejd any household of any pretension has its slaves. They are reckoned in the wealth of a shiek along with his horses and his camels. In the Hadramaut slaves follow the professions of their masters and often rise to positions of honor and trust.

"Some slave trading is still carried on in Hasa, now a province of the Sultan of Nejd. Before the war the trade flourished there under Turkish rule and it is dying out gradually. The many Negroes to be found in Hasa, Koweit and Oman, the Arabian provinces on the Persian gulf, are survivors of the days when the Gulf was filled with boats bearing Negroes brought from Africa by the Arab traders. Slaves in Arabia may ride to any British outpost and obtain their freedom but few avail themselves of this privilege.

"Gone are the days when Morocco, Tunis and Algiers were slave marts, not only for Negroes but for fair-skinned Circassian and Georgian beauties. The famous slave trade of the Barbary Coast is a thing of the past. There are still slaves but the buying and selling of human property is frowned upon. In southern Morocco where some trading yet exists, women are favored of the market. They are more expensive because they are useful in the household and can attend the women of the harems. Many boy slaves are given their liberty when they grow up.

"Slaves may be bought on many of the oases in the north African desert. In Kufra, in the Libyan desert, blacks are smuggled in from Sudan and sold for goodly sums. In the Saharan oases, the Tuaregs practice slavery. These Tuaregs are an adventurous, warlike people, scornful of domesticity, so they obtain slaves from Hausaland, in the southern Sahara, to do their menial tasks. Even here slave raids and slave caravans are growing fewer. The Tuaregs make exacting masters but they allow their slaves the freedom of the household and the serfs appear to enjoy their lot.

Sudan, Once a Market for Africa

"Slave traffic for hundreds of years centered n ithe area which is now Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. It was from here that the 'splendid Nubians' of ancient times were procured. Sudan also supplied the giant eunuchs, guardians of the harem from time immemorial. Until recent years, Omdurman, a large city of mud-built structures, was the principal civic market as the White Nile was the principal slave route. Slavery is disappearing in the Sudan and it is only in remote parts that it still exists.

"In Egypt slaves may acquire enfranchisement by asking for it. There are not many slaves left in the country and trading has ceased altogether. In households of the wealthy slaves remain of their own volition.

"In all the lands under British dominion or protection, attempts have been made to wipe out slavery. In Sierra Leone, on the west coast of Africa, nearly half a million slaves have been liberated since the World war. It was from Sierra Leone that many Negroes were brought to America in colonial days.

A Stronghold of Slavery

"The great surviving stronghold of slavery in Africa is Ethiopia, which lies southeast of Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Here the king, Ras Taffari, is trying to abolish slavery. Time is needed to educate the Ethiopians to regard slavery as an abominable practice. Slaves are so plentiful and cheap in Ethiopia that even servants have their personal attendants. Many slaves escape through the Sudan border and these the Sudanese government helps by lending them money or offering them freedom and work. It is estimated that there are still more than two million slaves in Ethiopia.

"European Turkey was the last European country in which slavery existed. Importation of slaves has been illegal for many years but the very rich for a time held those they had long possessed. Many of the Negroes, who formerly did menial tasks as slaves, formed servants' guilds and have acquired economic independence.

"Some of the more progressive Asiatic rulers have become conscious of the evils of slavery and have liberated their slaves. Last year the Maharajah of Nepal, a small country northeast of India, emancipated 53,000 slaves."

A YANKEE ABROAD

"Schenectady" A Mouthful

LONDON—The death in California of Julius Zancig has brought out many glowing tributes in the British press to this "King of Wizards." He was widely known in this country and was a prime favorite of King Edward VII.

For a generation he amazed and puzzled British savants, who tried to discover the explanation of his uncanny skill in what appeared to be thought transmission. Many scientists put the thing down to telepathy, but Zancig merely smiled and held his peace. His secret died with him, so far as the general public here is concerned.

I caused the great magician a few moments of anguish a few years ago in a London theater. He and his wife were giving a performance. She sat on the stage blindfolded, and not only identified objects which her husband secured from the spectators, but readily gave names and addresses which had been turned over to him. I handed Zancig a slip of paper on which the name "Schenectady" was written.

Zancig encountered difficulties. His wife couldn't pronounce the name, and she started to spell it out laboriously. She finally got through it all right, but the sweat was pouring from her husband's face when the job was finished. If it was a trick, it was superbly done, but this wouldn't account for the perspiration, because that isn't as easily available as the glycerin tears of filmland. Zancig had worked mighty hard.

I often have wondered in my unscientific way whether Zancig employed hypnotism. I have seen similar things done in this way, when the e was no effort made to conceal the power. Hypnotism is responsible for some of the astonishing magic one sees in the Orient. Ventriloquism also is brought into play, as well as sleight of hand.

Among the most extraordinary magicians in the world are the Hindus, and the Tibetans in the mystery land to the north. The least of their art is exceedingly clever prestidigitation.

That is common to all fakirs, and I never got tired watching these chaps at work in the streets of Indian cities. Their quickness of hand is startling, and it is an ordinary thing to see an Indian snake-charmer tantalize a cobra into striking at his bare hand, only a foot or so away. The fakir moves his hand with such lightning rapidity that the fangs of the cobra are caught in his sleeve.

But to get back to hypnotism, perhaps the most astounding performance of the eastern magician is the rope trick. I have never seen this myself, and indeed it is a rare sight, because it takes a master to perform it, and he must work under exactly the right conditions.

The magician tosses a rope into the air, where it hangs, suspended from nothing. Then a small boy climbs up the rope. Finally both boy and rope vanish.

What happens is that the magician hypnotizes his spectators. They think they see the rope suspended, and the boy climbing up it. Obviously this trick couldn't be done successfully before a great crowd. The master must be able to get all h's subjects under control. He is at his best with one or two spectators only.

This and similar tricks account for many of the religious phenomena of some parts of the Orient. Ventriloquism also is used frequently by fakirs with remarkable results.

A Washington Bystander
By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 13 — It is a pity in one way that former Senator Luke Lea of Tennessee found himself unable to accept appointment to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator Tyson.

The Bystander rather likes the notion of direct descendants of senate or house members of the early days of the country coming to fill the same posts.

There have been many cases of that in the history of congress, that of Senator Freddy Hale of Maine being a notable example in the present congress.

Luke Lea was the second of that name to come to congress from Tennessee when he was elected in 1911. The first Luke was his great grandfather and sat in the house as a "Union democrat" in the twenty-third and twenty-fourth congresses.

Lost Second Term

Young Luke—and he was the youngest senator, 32 years old, when he took his seat in 1911—attempted to come back to the senate for a second term in 1916 and failed.

Perhaps Luke II felt the same way about his defeat for renomination in 1916, when Senator McKellar beat him out in a tough race, that Pryor Lea felt about his defeat for the twenty-second congress.

Pryor Lea moved to Mississippi a few years after that political disappointment and never went back to Tennessee. He finally settled in Texas in 1846 and took a prominent part in the Peoples' congress in that state in '61, which adopted the "ordinance of secession" and carried Texas into the southern confederacy.

Pryor Lea died in Texas and his brother Luke—Luke II's great grandfather—in Kansas, where he went as Indian agent at Leavenworth under appointment of President Fillmore after conclusion of his house career. He died in Kansas.

All Fighters

One thing you notice about all three of these Tennessee Leas on reading of them in official records is that they were good fighting men.

Luke senior was a colonel commanding a regiment of Indian fighters under Jackson in the Creek and Seminole wars.

Pryor Lea also fought in the Creek war and 40 years later had so much fighting fire left in him as to help put Texas into arms against the north.

Young Luke also is a colonel, having commanded a regiment of artillery in France during the World war. His disappointment as to his political hopes must have been promptly salved by the opportunity for war service, which came within months after he was lifted out of his senate seat.

One story Washington recalls of the young Tennesseean when he first came to Washington had to do with the grave illness of his wife. Her life was despaired of during that first year of their Washington senatorial experience, 1911.

Mrs. Lea was hurried to a Washington hospital and young Lea submitted to a blood transfusion of unusual severity to save her. You find long press dispatches telling of this in the Washington files for that year, all emphasizing his place as "baby senator" in age.

It was several days before he was able to resume his place in the senate due to weakness from loss of blood in the transfusion. It was several weeks before Mrs. Lea was pronounced out of danger.

YOUR HEALTH

More Don'ts For Reducers

By HORACE W. SOPER, M. D.
St. Louis, Mo.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

The evil consequences of undernutrition have been pointed out to many of us who need such counsel, but I am sure that it is of utmost importance to an equal number that the subject of overnutrition or the bad effects that follow too much food intake be given atention.

The growing child requires relatively a larger amount of food particularly the protein such as meat, eggs and milk. Children should be taught the principles of a well balanced diet but it is not wise to restrict them as to quantity. The adult requires a smaller amount of protein. A safe rule is to eat flesh food in moderation once daily, whether it be fowl, fish, pork, mutton or beef. As age advances the food protein should come largely from milk. Excessive eating of flesh foods throws too great a strain on the organs of elimination and kidney and arterial disease results.

Few people eat too much fat. The body fat is produced largely by sugars and starches. The quantity of sugar consumed by the American people is considered far too large by many and is believed to be responsible for many cases of obesity. Overweight may be caused by glandular disturbances that may require special treatment, but by far the large majority of cases of obesity are produced by eating too much food. Joslin and other eminent authorities have pointed out that the obese individual is especially prone to develop diabetes. The excessive use of sugar also causes digestive disturbance.

A moderate amount of body fat is essential to good health but one should watch against excess fat. The waist measurement should never exceed that of the chest. The chest figures should be about four inches in excess of the waist line.

When the weight increases unduly, restrict the amount of sugar and starches in the dietary. Do not stop them entirely and do not stop cream and butter, but use less of them. It is found that many patients assert that they eat no sugar but upon investigation it is learned that they eat freely of stewed fruits and jellies that contain a large about of sugar.

Cultivate a habit of correct posture and deep breathing. Take abdominal muscle exercises. Swimming is a wonderful exercise to produce a smooth and equal distribution of body fat. The ideal objective in a rational weight reduction system is to maintain a good state of health and at the same time take off the excess fat. The reduction should be gradual. Try to strike a balance between physical exercise and the quantity of food ingested. If undue fatigue follows exercise your food is insufficient. When attempting to reduce weight, rely upon food reduction and physical exercises. Do not resort to drastic sweating and the use of purgative drugs.

Sunday Morning Talk

Christ Our Friend

God is love, God is wisdom, God is power. How well we can afford to trust Him to plan all of life for us. The real secret is to yield ourselves to Him. If in all our ways we acknowledge Him, He will direct our paths.

It is said that once Medelsshon came to see the great Freiburg organ. The old custodian refused him permission to play upon the instrument, not knowing who he was. At length, however, he reluctantly granted him leave to play a few notes. Mendelsshon took his seat and soon the most wonderful music was breaking forth from the organ. The custodian was spellbound. He came up beside the great musician and asked his name. Learning it, he stood humiliated, self-condemned, saying: "And I refused you permission to play upon my organ!" There comes One to us and desires to take our lives and play upon them. But we withhold ourselves from Him, and refuse Him permission, when if we would yield ourselves to Him, He would bring from our souls the most heavenly music.

God has a right to be thus honored by us. It is implied that God as our maker, preserver, and saviour, has a right to be thus honored. In yielding ourselves we include all that we have and are—our faculties, our thoughts, our words, our deeds. "In support of a good cause," said one, "I give myself." That was the greatest possible gift. There are many possible gifts which do not include the whole, but when I give myself I give all. Ourselves, our all, is due to God.

It should be an absolute and full surrender. In yielding ourselves to God we must not qualify the agreement. No stipulations as to degree, time or place must be made, and no reservations. The English landlord lets his farms, reserving certain game rights to himself. Our covenant with God must not be like that. It must be more like the true marriage covenant, for better and for worse, for time and for eternity.

It must be a voluntary act. Of course, not in the sense of being independent of divine grace; for we love Him because He first loved us. But it must be voluntary so far as our wills are concerned, so far as the willingness of it is concerned.

The unyielding life is the citadel of self. God will not force it. But when its key, the will, is voluntarily handed over to Him, then He floods the life with fullness of blessing. Would you know His "I will bless thee?" Then absolutely, unreservedly, and confidingly, yield yourself, your life, your all over into His hands for time and for eternity. How much must God be grieved by our poor attempts to bribe Him by giving Him everything else except the one thing He wants—ourselves. "My son, give me thy heart."

God's planning for our lives does not prevent our planning, but merely guides it. "In all thy ways acknowledge Him, and He shall direct thy paths."

Is your child undernourished?

Surprising results disclosed by New York survey

A SURVEY of one million school children conducted by the Department of Health of the city of New York, disclosed that 20% of the children were seriously undernourished and in need of a physician's care. More than 60% were reported "on the border line" of malnutrition. Only a trifle more than 17% were found to be normal. This survey was not limited to the so-called poorer classes. It was representative of the entire city. It indicated that four children out of every five are in immediate need of a more carefully selected diet.

Mothers should see that their children eat sufficiently of milk, fruit and vegetable foods. The important step is to make these foods so enjoyable that children will eat them.

Authorities recommend a little sugar used judiciously to assist mothers in making foods appetizing. A small sprinkling of sugar on cereals, as one eminent food scientist phrases it, takes the "fight" out of eating cereal. Citrous and other fresh fruits, berries, stewed fruits, are made more appetizing by a dash of sugar. Wise mothers make junkets, blanc-mange, custards, and other milk desserts to encourage the eating of milk.

Note this: If you want to improve the taste of healthful vegetables just add a dash of sugar to them while they are cooking (preferably in little water). Try it and you will be amazed how much more tasteful the vegetables become. Candy, ice cream and cookies are recommended for dessert. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

Stories That Recall Others

Lost Its Voice

Beth, age six, went in to see Mrs. Smith, a next door neighbor, and Mrs. Smith asked her: "What is your mother doing today, Beth?"

Beth replied: "She was talking to the piano man when I left home. You know our piano lost its voice and mamma called the piano man to come fix it for her."

He Knew How

Little two year old Rollo is very fond of roasting ears. Recently his mother placed some on the table steaming from the kettle. Rollo received his. He tried to take it in his hand several times, stopping each time with the word, "hot". Finally he slid down from his chair, scurried to the kitchen and soon returned with a tea towel. He clambered up onto his chair, grasped the ear of corn in the tea towel as he had often seen his mother handle hot things, and then calmly began to eat.

SPENT $1500 TRYING TO GET WELL

Then Kellogg's ALL-BRAN Brought Relief

This startling letter from an ex-service man will interest everyone who suffers from constipation:

"I was discharged after the World War with heart trouble and bad stomach. I had saved about $1500. Since then I've spent that sum and a lot more on doctoring and operations and medicines. I always was bothered with constipation.

"I told my wife to get some kind of light breakfast food and I would try it. She came home with a small package of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. I ate it for breakfast, lunch and dinner, about a common tea-saucer full with milk at each meal. I have been doing this for about a month. I have stopped taking dope (medicines). I work 9 to 12 hours. I have a good appetite. And now I am gaining flesh and believe I am getting well."—GEORGE C. O'CONNELL, Barker, N. Y.

DEMOCRATS IN CAUCUS ELECT COMPLETE NEW TOWN COMMITTEE

An entirely new democratic town committee was named Friday evening at the party town caucus at the town hall, the new committee to take office January 1st. The caucus, recognizing the long and faithful service of the retiring committee, tendered that committee a rising vote of thanks. With over 100 men and women present the caucus was called to order at 8 o'clock by William H. Callahan, chairman of the retiring committee. On motion of Nicholas J. Spellman, Thomas J. Kelly was chosen moderator of the caucus and took the chair amidst applause and stamping of feet. On motion of Martin Keough, N. J. Spellman was named clerk of the caucus, and at the request of the moderator, read the warning.

Nominations for candidates were then called for and selected, by unanimous votes, without nominating speeches, as follows:

Town clerk and treasurer, Henry A. Congdon, nominated by Frank H. Quinley.

Town Committee Selected

This completed the selection of the party's ticket for the coming town election. The moderator announced that the next matter of business was the selection of a town committee. L. E. Millea, in nominating a new committee, spoke of the long and faithful service of the present committee throughout the years past and announced that the committee now feel that they should turn the reins over to some one else. Mr. Millea then submitted the following list of candidates as the new town committee:

First district—Jeremiah A. Fitzgerald, Mrs. James A. Casey. Second district—Oscar Silverman, Anna Connell. Third district—William H. Bowen, Anna Chimelewski. Fourth district—Walter P. Moran, Mary D. McNally. Fifth district—James Hanlon, Joseph R. LaRoche. Sixth district—Andrew J. Boyens, Frances Donohue.

The election of the above committee was unanimous, and they will assume office January 1st.

Martin Keough moved that the new committee be empowered to add to their membership as they see fit, and the motion prevailed. Mr. Gebrath moved that the present town committee be empowered to fill any vacancies that may occur on the ticket between now and the date of the election, and the motion was adopted. Edward Kirby offered a motion tendering the retiring committee a rising vote of thanks in recognition of their long and faithful service during the last score or more years, the motion being adopted unanimously. This completed the business of the caucus which then adjourned after a session lasting about 20 minutes.

This is the first time for many years that the democrats have nominated their own candidate for town clerk, as the practice has been to endorse the candidate on the republican ticket and the republicans reciprocated by putting up no candidate for the office of tax collector which was held by a democrat.

Now that this neutrality has been broken by the democrats, the prediction has been made that the republicans will have a candidate to run for the office of tax collector.

WHISTLES FOR FIREMEN IS COMMISSIONERS' PLAN

The board of fire commissioners, which consists of Alderman Amiel Brosofske, Councilmen Herman Steizner and Peter Sellas, is at work on a plan to install signals to summon the call men of the department when they are needed to respond to a fire alarm.

It is the idea to have tappers placed in several of the larger manufacturing plants in different parts of the city, which will ring like the bell in police headquarters, and there will also be whistles located on the outside of the buildings which can be blown from the central station when it is desired to call in the men who are off duty. These whistles would be so located that they would reach all parts of the city and make it possible for the firemen to hear the signal no matter where they were.

WILL MAKE PROTEST ON SIGNALS AT EIGHTH STREET

Considerable opposition is expected to develop in connection with the hearing scheduled before the public utilities commission at Hartford on Friday next, Sept. 20, at 10:30 o'clock in connection with the proposed move by the New Haven railroad to install electric flashlight signals at the Eighth street crossing instead of the present flag protection. The New Haven railroad desires to get rid of the flagman or flagmen which they now maintain at this crossing. In their petition to the public utilities commission, it is alleged that the flashlight signals will furnish improved and adequate protection at the crossing for the safety of the public using the highway. Notice of the hearing was received this morning by First Selectman William S. Murray.

The Eighth street crossing is considered the most dangerous railroad crossing in this city and one of the most dangerous in the state. It forms part of the highway leading from Greenville to Preston and also to the present county home. The approach is a sharp decline of about 100 feet and the view at that point is practically obstructed. The belief is held that the signals would not adequately take care of the necessary protection of this crossing. It is expected that the city will be represented at the public utilities commission hearing as well as other organizations and individuals interested in the protection of life and property.

The hours of the duties of the flagman at that crossing were increased about five years ago, following much agitation here after a killing at the crossing.

In their petition to the public utilities commisson, dated Aug. 24, the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company, through their counsel, W. L. Barnett, states:

1. Your petitioner is a railroad corporation organized and existing under the laws of the state of Connecticut and owns and operates a line of railroad in and through the town of Norwich, county of New London, in said state, which line of railroad is known as the Groton-Webster branch of your petitioner's New Haven division.

2. Said line of railroad is crossed at grade by a highway in said town, known as Eighth street.

3. At a hearing held by your honorable commission on Dec. 19, 1922, in Docket No. 3960, upon a petition for greater protection at said Eighth street crossing, your petitioner agreed to extend the hours of duty of flagman at said crossing from 7 o'clock a. m. to 6 o'clock p. m. on week days and from 11 o'clock a. m. to 1 o'clock p. m. on Sundays, to from 7 o'clock a. m. to 11 o'clock p. m. daily, Sundays included.

4. Your petitioner desires to install, maintain and operate at said Eighth street crossing, in lieu of said flagging protection, electric flashlight highway crossing signals of the type approved by your honorable commission on Nov. 1, 1923, Docket No. 4191, except that the warning boards to be maintained at said crossing will be attached to the support of said flashlight signals and of the type approved by your honorable commission on Oct. 1, 1926.

5. Your petitioner alleges that said flashlight signals will furnish improved and adequate protection at said crossing for the safety of the public using said highway.

Wherefore your petitioner prays that your honorable commission will inquire into the allegations of this petition, and pursuant to the provisions of Section 3660 of the general statutes as amended, change or modify the aforesaid order by prescribing that said electric flashlight signals be installed, maintained and operated by your petitioner at said crossing in lieu of said flagging protection.

BANK OF ENGLAND ORDERS GROCERY NOT TO USE NAME

BURNLEY, England — (AP) — The Bank of England has taken steps to stop the use of the words "Bank of England" carved in stone upon a little building here.

Long, long ago, before it was occupied by grocers, the building housed a "pub" called "The Rog and Rat"; and it may be that prior to that time it sheltered a drinking establishment dubbed "The Bank of England." The recollections of the oldest inhabitants are vague on this point, but they all are sure there never was a branch of the real Bank of England here.

Nevertheless no one connected with the Bank of England saw fit to object to the sign for the first 25 years, and even 50 years went by without protest.

But the stone words have been there more than 100 years now, and the great bank apparently feels it has been patient long enough. The present owner of the building has been notified he must take down the offending title without delay.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Although organized 13 years ago the Alaska Federation of Women's Clubs has never held a meeting, says Mrs. John F. Sippel, president of the General Federation of Women's clubs. She has returned from a visit to Alaska.

This was the first visit there of a general federation president since Mrs. Percy V. Pennybacker went to Alaska in 1914.

"Distance and climate have prevented a meeting of the federation," says Mrs. Sippel. "Yet the women are accomplishing much. No group works harder for better laws for women and children. Alaska women seem more deeply concerned with the spiritual side of life than we do. They are near to nature. They have fewer distractions. The rector and priest have a conspicuous place in community life."

HONESTY OF BOOK READERS MAKES LIBRARY SUCCESS

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Open air libraries are an institution in the parks of Malaga, Spain, says Miss Elizabeth Shirley.

She has returned from the Ibero-American exposition where she went as a representative of the children's bureau of the department of labor.

"The book shelves are placed in the parks and left there without any supervision whatever," she says.

"People come and help themselves, then sit down on the benches and read. The books are not to be taken from the parks. In the several years the park libraries have been operating not one book has been lost. Boys and girls as well as grown people patronize the book shelves."

MARTINS TACKLE UNIQUE HOUSE OF DAVID CLUB SUNDAY AFTERNOON

One of the best attractions in baseball will be at J. B. Martin field Sunday afternoon when the original House of David club crosses bats with the Velvetmen. If there are any fans in this town or city who think that the House of David team cannot play ball because they don't believe in cutting their hair and shaving off their beards, they will be surprised when they see the visitors in action. They are a curious lot, the House of David team. From the neck down they don't look any different than any other team. But from threre up, they make Smith Brothers look like a pair of selling platers for hair.

The barbers' union or butchers will not compose any part of the personnel of the reception committee for the House of David ball players, as the Whiskers do not need the former and are vegetarians. The athletes are human but they have their own peculiar belief and the wearing of beards is one of them. These draperies do not interfere with the diamond work of the athletes and it will be a formidable club that will appear in the role of the opposition to the local team on Sunday at the J. B. Martin grounds.

The idea of wearing a beard on the baseball diamond, as the House of David players do, might revolutionize baseball if generally adopted in all parts of the country. Equipment dealers are not in favor of it as it might cramp their style in the matter of selling masks, chest-protectors, etc. If a catcher could grow an extra long and heavy beard, it would enable him to dispense with a heavy chest-protector and if the whiskers were long enough he also might discard his shin guards.

J. B. Martin baseball club will sure have to travel to overcome the Bearded Giants. Morin and Simcox will officiate.

H. N. S. CLAIM E. CONN. AMATEUR CHAMPIONSHIP

The Holy Name team of Jewett City lay claim to the amateur championship of Eastern Connecticut, by virtue of their season's record of but six defeats as against 29 victories against the leading teams in this section. The H. N. S. were to open a series Sunday with the Taftville American legion team for the championship but for reasons unknown, Taftville has suddenly called off this series. No real reason is given for cancelling the first game of the series, the only excuse being given is that Taftville is unable to gather together their team. One cause might possibly be that three of the Taftville legion mainstays this season are members of the H. N. S. team and of course they would be playing with the Jewett City team in this series, leaving Taftville rather weak. In event any amateur team in eastern Conn. disputes the claim of the H. N. S. they may communicate with the manager of the Jewett City team at Jewett City, thereby possibly making arrangements for a three game series. It so happens that the H. N. S. played the legion team a brace of games on July 4th, swamping them 9 to 1 in the opener and losing a close 2-1 game in the afternoon. However, as Taftville refuses to play the H. N. S. again, claim is laid to the championship.

SECOND GAME OF SERIES FOR DUSTY TITLE SUNDAY

The second game of the series between the Smoke Shop of Norwich and the Socony team of New London for the Industrial baseball title of New London county will be staged at Mercer field in New London on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The first game was played Sunday at Hollyhock Island with the Socony team winning by a score of 13 to 5.

The local boys are out to even the count in tomorrow's encounter and if they are returned winners a third game will be played either in Norwich or New London. Manager Bill O'Brien has announced his team as the same as last week with Lefty Lucier starting on the mound but there is strong rumor that the crafty manager has an ace up his sleeve. Manager O'Brien refused to be tied down to a definite answer as to the truth of the report that an Eastern league battery was to perform for him. All that he would say was that if the Socony team won Sunday they would be absolutely the best club in eastern Connecticut. He would neither affirm nor deny any rumors but said that he did not intend to lose the second game. He did intimate that the fans have a surprise coming to them on Sunday.

SIMMONS PROVES TO BE STAR OF BIG SIX

Al Simmons provided most of the action in the Big Six yesterday by clouting two lusty blows against Chicago. Besides winning the ball game, Al took the lead among the American league hitters and assumed fourth place in the Big Six standing with a one point increase in his averages. He displaced his teammate, Jimmy Foxx, who lost three points by going hitless four times. Rogers Hornsby also gained a point, going to .374, by getting two hits out of four tries. Frank O'Doul held his mark at .396 with two out of five. Ruth was kept idle by rain while Herman was out of the Brooklyn lineup.

SIMMONS' HOMER PUTS A'S WITHIN TWO WINS OF FLAG

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 13—(AP)—Al Simmons clubbed the Athletics to within two games of pennant certainty here today when he hit his thirtieth home run in the eighth with two on bases. The blow broke a 2 to 2 tie, and enabled the A's to defeat young Ed Walsh and the White Sox by 5 to 2.

Walsh was close with his hits, surrendering only six, but two of the drives were triples by Simmons and Bishop and two were home runs, Joe Boley hitting for the circuit in the third.

Howard Ehmke redeemed recent indifferent showings by holding the White Sox to seven blows before giving way to a pinch batsman in the eighth. An error by Dykes in the fifth paved the way for the Chicago runs. Bob Grove pitched the ninth for the A's. The score:

ROBINS TAKE ADVANTAGE OF STRIPP TO BEAT REDS

CINCINNATI, Sept. 13—(AP)—The Robins saved the last game of the series by taking advantage of Joe Stripp's mental lapse in the fourth inning here today to win by 4 to 2 after dropping the first two engagements to Cincinnati. With nobody out and runners on first and second, Stripp fielded Moss's blow, and instead of touching third and trying for a double play at first or second, tossed the ball straight to first. A single and two sacrifices following gave the Robins three runs and the ball game. Kolp and Ash opposed Moss. The score:

INSILCOS UNABLE TO PLAY MERIDEN CLUB TODAY

Owing to unforseen circumstances, the local Insilcos club will be unable to play the Meriden Insilcos this afternoon at Meriden. The game will probably be played at a later date.

The day of the real old country fair may be over in some localities but it still thrives up in Pachaug.

Remember the old days 20 or more years ago when the county fair was the event of the year to the folks of the rural district?

Remember how you would see them coming in almost before daylight with old Dobbin hitched to the carry-all and the family having a grand time.

Remember how the wagon floor was packed with the lunches, the pie and cakes and under the seat resposed the cider jug. They made a day of it then.

It was a real get-together for the country folk and they'd meet their friends who they hadn't seen for six months or more and some not since the last fair.

Remember how they'd gather around an exhibit and comment on its good and bad qualities. How they'd point out their own products with pardonable pride. And then at the awarding of premiums how serious they were and what a real honor it was if the blue ribbon was pinned on their exhibit.

Well those days are gone forever. With the advent of the automobile, the organization of the granges and the 4-H clubs the day of the fair as a social gathering place is over.

However one finds a decided flavor of the old time fair at the Pachaug fair this week. There is that spirit of get-together that prevails up there.

It's not a large fair but what there is of it is the best. And those folks up there are putting on some mighty fine entertainment for the patrons. They're real cordial folks too.

And if you listen carefully you'll get an earful of real original humor, and good natured but sharp joshing. I heard one yesterday that was a real gem.

Two of the men were repairing a fence around the race track. One of the men was carrying a hammer and holding the boards while the other was driving nails with a stone.

One of the wits looking on saw the humor of it and says to the fellow holding the hammer, "Why doncha use that hammer instead of letting the other fellow drive nails with a rock?"

The feller with the hammer gives the wit a withering look and says "Say if I could use this hammer as well as you do your mouth we'd have this fence built in no time."

Then there was an impromptu chair act which had a strange ending for the stranger who put it on. It gave the crowd quite a laugh.

It's these little things that make it worth while attending but what impressed me most was the spirit of cordiality.

PHILS AGAIN TAME THE MIGHTY CHICAGO CUBS

CHICAGO, Sept. 13—(AP)—Philadelphia postponed Chicago's clinching of the National league championship by defeating the Cubs by 7 to 6 here today in the final game of the year between the two teams. Rogers Hornsby set 30,000 fans into an uproar in the ninth with his thirty-sixth home run, but Claude Willoughby saved the game after the Bruins had rushed the tieing run to third and the winner to second.

Sheriff Fred Blake was finally driven from the mound in the eighth after pitching indifferent ball for seven rounds. He was found for ten hits and gave out seven passes.

The Cubs drove "Ace-in-the-Hole" Elliott to cover in the fourth with a four-run onslaught, but Phil Collins stopped them with one hit, until the ninth when he blew up following Hornsby's homer. After the Cubs placed men on second and third with two out, Willoughby passed Tolson, more or less intentionally, but caused Taylor to hit an easy grounder on which Tolson was forced at second.

ACADEMY HAS ONE OF LARGEST GRID SQUADS IN HISTORY WORKING OUT

One of the largest football squads in the history of the Academy reported this week to Coach Courtland C. Whitney and is now working out daily. About 65 are numbered in the turnout, which includes four lettermen.

The local mentor will get right down to business for but a little over two weeks remains before the opening game, that coming with Chapman Tech at the campus, Saturday, Sept. 28. There are three veteran linemen available, Capt. Chet Berghinzo, at end, Hertz, a tackle, and Cruickshank, at center, with Sherry, at halfback. Those lost by graduation included Fox and Mish, guards, Taylor and Tombari, ends, Kahn, tackle and Jack Marks, Buck LaCroix and Red Fagan and Archie Brock in the backfield.

Bulkeley

Bulkeley, ancient rival of the Academy will tackle the Wildcats in New London this year, the annual game coming on Saturday, Nov. 23 and closing the schedule of both elevens. Bulkeley has nine games scheduled as follows:

Saturday, Sept. 28—Meriden at Meriden.
Saturday, Oct. 5—New Haven Hillhouse at home.
Friday, Oct. 11—Stonington at home.
Friday, Oct. 18—Westerly at Westerly.
Friday, Oct. 25—Windham at Willimantic.
Saturday, Nov. 2—Hartford Public high at Hartford.
Saturday, Nov. 9—Manchester at home.
Saturday, Nov. 16—Chapman Tech at home.
Saturday, Nov. 23—Norwich at home.

Bill O'Brien, after turning out several championship aggregations at Stonington, has brought hope to Bulkeley supporters that Tiger gridiron fortunes will rise this coming season. Coach O'Brien is drilling an ambitious squad daily, pointing towards the opening game with Meriden at Meriden in two weeks.

Chapman Tech

Chapman Tech, with over two weeks' practice under its belt, is already pointing towards its opening game with the Academy here at the campus, Saturday, Sept. 28, two weeks from Saturday. Jack Conway, head coach, a newly appointed director of athletics, is being assisted by Jack Smith, also a graduate of the University of Vermont. Tech is extremely well fortified with backfield material, having Captain Cupello for fullback, Fred Hewitt, baseball pitcher, Joe Gaetano, Bill Keenan and Lloyd Church for halfbacks. Joe Quinn and Joe Zito are after the quarterback berth. The line will also contain much experienced material. Tech is looking forward optimistically toward the coming season and has more hope than for many years of winning the league title.

Tech's schedule follows:

Saturday, Sept. 28—Norwich at Norwich.
Saturday, Oct. 5—Windham at home.
Saturday, Oct. 12—Middletown at home.
Saturday, Oct. 19—Plainfield at Plainfield.
Saturday, Oct. 26—Killingly at home.
Saturday, Nov. 2—Stonington at Stonington.

Windham

Windham high has seven football games scheduled for the 1929 campaign, its smallest list in years. The season opens Saturday, October 5, with Chapman Tech at New London, a previous engagement with Putnam at Willimantic Saturday, Sept. 28, having been cancelled by the Putnam management.

The schedule: Oct. 5, Chapman Tech at New London; Oct. 11, Westerly at Willimantic; Oct. 19, Stonington at Stonington; Oct. 25, Bulkeley of New London at Willimantic; Nov. 2, N. F. A. at Norwich; Nov. 9, Bristol at Willimantic; Nov. 16, Manchester at Manchester.

Westerly

Fifty-two boys are working out at Westerly high this week under the football coach, Dr. Harold Rogers for the largest turnout in the history of the school. Ev Green, flashy halfback, has been declared eligible.

Other Schools

Naugatuck high, which last year seemed to the logical state grid champion, will open its season Friday, Sept. 27, with Danbury high. Naugatuck is having plenty of trouble in booking games, no less than 13 high school managers having answered Naugy's plea for games with "all scheduled."

Torrington high, which made a great showing last year, has nine veterans available and will be a strong contender for the mythical championship this fall.

Coach Billy Schofield, former mentor at Killingly high in Danielson has a squad of 60 working out at Crosby high in Waterbury. Crosby's first game is with Hartford high at Hartford, Sept. 28. Coach Jimmy Lee of Wilby has a squad of 27 out.

CARDS HANG TWO MORE DEFEATS ONTO BRAVES

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 13—(AP)—The Cardinals were victors twice today, taking a double bill from the Boston Braves by scores of 3 to 2, and 5 to 3. Frank House, hurling for the Red Birds in the opener, fanned four men. Hallahan pitched for the Cards in the nightcap and Chick Hafey gave the Cards their first score in the second inning with his 25th homer of the season. Percy Jones, southpaw, pitched for the Braves. SERIES FOR COUNTY TITLE WILL START TODAY

BATTALINO-ROUTIS BOUT IS ATTRACTING WIDE INTEREST

HARTFORD, Conn., Sept. 13—Connecticut is making ready to play host to the first world's championship bout to be held within the confines of the Nutmeg state since the Kid-Kaplan-Bobby Garcia featherweight title bout staged in Hartford three years ago.

Andre Routis, the aggressive little Frenchman who took the world's featherweight crown from Tony Canzoneri last year, will put his title at stake here on September 23 when he meets Bat Battalino, Hartford's sensational featherweight, in a fifteen-round battle at the same arena where Kaplan knocked out Garcia to retain the same championship which will be in dispute as Routis and Battalino come to cross purposes.

Promoter Ed Hurley, Connecticut's premier promoter and, in fact, the only Connecticut promoter who is doing things on the grand scale is hard at work on the hundred-an-one details which intrude as plans for a championship bout go forward.

General headquarters have been opened in one of the big business buildings in the center of the city and a flag has been thrown to the breezes proclaiming the forthcoming bout; over on the banks of the Connecticut river a big force of workmen is hard at work making alterations in the big Velodrome; Battalino is training feverishly to be ready for his golden opportunity and fight fans in all sections of the east are flooding the promoter with requests for ringside tickets.

Promoter Hurley makes the prediction that more than 18,000 persons will see the bout and that the gate will go to $70,000, a record for Connecticut.

The biggest gate in the annals of boxing in this state of steady habits was that at the Kaplan-Babe Herman bout in Waterbury; that gate was short of $60,000.

Battalino is doing his training at a local gym and each morning finds him hitting the road for a hard drill. He will be in perfect condition for this big test and that statement means something since the Hartford knockout king is one of the most faithful of boxers in this business of training and has never gone into the ring for any of his scores of battles as an amateur or as a professional in anything but superb condition.

The champion says the non-title bouts in which he has engaged since beating Canzoneri did not mean anything.

But this one is for the championship and that he will be in the pink when the bell sends him out against the challenger on the 23rd.

TILDEN AND HUNTER GO TO THE FINALS TODAY

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 13—(AP)—A series of heart-breaking drives plucked out of the past when his racquet shots were heard around the world carried Big Bill Tilden into the final round of the National Singles championship tournament today after the hardest battle any young American has ever forced him to wage on the West Side stadium turf.

Johnny Doeg, California tennis star, forced Big Bill into the shade of defeat when he took a lead of two sets to one but lost out in an epochal five-set battle decided by scores of 4-6, 6-2, 3-6, 6-4, 6-3.

The old guard triumphant on every hand, Francis T. Hunter of Newrochelle, N. C., came through in the other semi-final, battering young Fritz Mercur of Bethlehem, Pa., into submission with his famous fore-hand drive by scores of 6-4, 6-8, 6-4, 6-3.

BILLY PETROLLE IS THROUGH WITH BOXING

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 13—(AP)—Billy Petrolle, of Fargo, N. D., who took a decisive beating at the hands of King Tut, of Minneapolis, last night in a ten-round bout, is through with boxing, according to his manager, Jack Hurley.

Hurley, who piloted Petrolle to a leading place among the lightweights, announced the Fargo's retirement after last night's bout. "He's all through," said Hurley. "He has agreed to it. There is no use in his sticking to the game and getting punched around. I always said that as soon as he started losing to fighters who had no right to beat him, he would quit, and he has."

In another ten-rounder, Paul Swiberski, Syracuse, meets Lou Barba, New York.

OLD GOLD said...
"write whatever you please, Floyd Gibbons"

"... go out and watch New York's famous 'Old Seventh' Regiment take the concealed name cigarette test. We will publish your eye-witness story word for word"... So here it is.

By Floyd Gibbons

CAMP SMITH, Peekskill, N.Y., Aug. 17th.—I have shared the soldier's cigarette in pretty nearly every corner of the world, and I know how set in his ways an army man can get when it comes to knowing what smoke he likes. So frankly the idea that a two year old cigarette—even if it did have the name OLD GOLD—could win this test over three old time brands seemed unbelievable.

But the thing worked out. At Camp Smith, where I witnessed the test, OLD GOLD put the bee on 506 Yanks of the Old Seventh New York regiment

Mrs. Lillian Richardson, of Vermont has been a guest this week at Mrs. C. A. Mell's.

Although Miss Belle McArthur, seventy, of Pleasant Hill, Mo., can see the lights of Kansas City from her home, she never found time from her chickens and garden to make a visit there. Having yielded once and impressed most with the traffic and talking pictures, she plans to go often.

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week the old time volunteer fire department was making plans for its annual fall parade, which was scheduled to be held the following month. Independence Hose Co. was also completing plans for a regatta picnic at Thames grove, and the New London County Agricultural society was preparing for its annual fair. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of September 1879 are as follows;

Monday, Sept. 8, 1879—Lovers of music will learn with pleasure that Mr. Woodman, the organist at Christ church, purposes to give a series of eight free organ recitals, the first of which will occur next Friday afternoon at 5 o'clock. The recitals will be preceded by the reading of evening prayer by Dr. Giesy at half-past four o'clock.

The Broadway Sunday school opened yesterday, after a vacation of several weeks. The superintendent, Mr. W. R. Burnham, made a brief opening address, and then the school performed the feat of reviewing the international lessons omitted during the vacation. The session was unusually interesting.

The steamer Favorite went to Harbor View yesterday to convey to this city Mr. Courtland Webb, who is very ill. Mr. Webb has been sick at the summer residence of his father.

The whole number of deaths in Norwich during the month of August was 35.

The veterans of the 26th regiment have voted to go to Hartford in a body on the 17th inst., and have chosen Col. Joseph Selden of this city commander.

Tuesday, Sept. 9, 1879—The city hall has been engaged for a meeting of all the veterans of this neighborhood, this evening, at 8 o'clock with a view to completing arrangements for a large representation from this city at Hartford, Battle Flag day, September 17th. The veterans should all rally tonight.

The steamer Ella has made her last Sunday trip for the season. She took 40 passengers from New London and her load with a party of 500 Rhode Islanders on the steamer Day Star, made Block Island look lively last Sunday.

The arrangements for the coming exhibition of the New London county Agricultural society are nearly, if not quite perfected. The fair takes place Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, the 23rd, 24th and 25th.

Chief Engineer J. Bacon Carrier is making arrangements to make the fall parade of the firemen this year, one of the best that has ever been made by the department.

Wednesday, Sept. 10, 1879—The funeral services of the late Hiram Crosby were largely attended, yesterday afternoon at the residence of Solomon Lucas, Esq., Laurel Hill. The Rev. Mr. Taylor of the East Main St., church officiated, assisted by the Rev. William S. Palmer of the Second Congregational church. The remains were deposited in Yantic cemetery.

The Mt. Calvary Baptist society of this city made an excursion on the barge Bela Peck to Shelter Island, on Saturday last, and were ordered not to land there, which necessitated their departure for Greenport where they spent a pleasant day. The refusal has been construed by several state papers to have its foundation in the prejudice existing there against the colored race.

It was very hard work to find a greenbacker in the city yesterday. The latest news from Maine does not seem to encourage devotees to paper money principles to speak up.

Thursday, Sept. 11, 1879—The grand regatta picnic of Independence Hose Co., is to take place at Thames grove on Tuesday next. Plenty of music is engaged. Mr. J. P. Murphy assures us that he has letters of acceptance from all parties named in the advertisement. Low fares prevail. All trains stop at the grove.

It appears from present excavatins and probings, that Long hill, on the east side of Latern hill, for a distance for 3-4 of a mile, and to a depth immeasurable, is one perfect mass of decomposed silex. The supply therefore is seemingly inexhaustible.

A blue heron was shot at Voluntown last Sunday, that stood four feet and four inches high and measured five feet and five inches from tip to tip of wings.

Friday, Sept. 12, 1879—The steamer City of Norwich of the Norwich and New York Transportation company's line, returned to the city yesterday morning after having been out of service for several months, and was moored at the new railroad wharf, where she will lay for a while longer.

Mr. Amos Andrews, while at work on a loaded revolver at the Bacon Arms company's shop, last Saturday, accidentally exploded one of the chambers. The ball entered inside the left hand near the first joint of the second finger, passing through the hand, fracturing the bone and causing a bad wound.

The schools of the city are unusually full this fall. The Broadway school still has more applicants than it can accommodate and the Norwich Free Academy has but one vacant seat.

Saturday, Sept. 13, 1879—The number who have bathed in hired suits at Watch Hill, this summer, is 8,000.

The fall parade of the firemen is to take place on Wednesday, October 15th.

Mr. Thomas B. Woodworth contemplates erecting a large building on the corner of High and Main streets, West Side.

The Powers property, opposite Hopkins and Allens on Franklin St., is to be put in thorough repair.

EARLY LOSSES OF 3 TO 15 POINTS WERE REGAINED BEFORE CLOSE OF MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 13—(AP)—The stock market, staggering under the weight of a top-heavy speculative position, tripped over the unexpected increase in brokers loans today and floundered about wildly for a moment, only to regain its footing and rush forward with renewed bullish fury. Early losses of 3 to 15 points were regained, and prices were irregularly higher at the close.

Trading was at a feverish pace, the days turnover once more crossing the 5,000,000 share mark, and control of the market shifted between the bears and the bulls with confusing swiftness. During the first hour of trading the market appeared to ignore the brokerage loan figures, but when selling appeared in increasing volume, pool operators withdrew support and let prices sink until early afternoon, when a drop from 3 to 7 per cent. in the call loan rate prompted short covering, and bulls seized the occasion to renew their operations with violence.

Interpretations placed upon the loan figures were varied, some traders pointing to the increase of $120,000,000, during a week of sagging prices, as indicating that stock was passing from strong to weak hands, while others explained the increase as largely attributable to new financing and regarded with satisfaction the reduction of loans by New York banks, and the paying up of borrowings at the federal reserve. It was rather generally agreed, however, that the market's sensitiveness to this increase in loans, after it has been able to ignore several successive increases lately, indicated an overbought condition in need of a corrective shake out.

Aside from the overnight federal reserve loan and condition statements, there was little in the days news of a character to influence the market. The sag in call money was regarded as reflecting the piling up of funds here against the mid-month settlements, rather thany any definite improvement in credit. Bankers' are still predicting firmer money next week. Market operations remained largely professional and commission houses generally advised their clients to curtail commitments until conditions become more settled. The weekly trade and industrial reviews were generally pleasing, reporting a marked upturn in wholesale and retail trade, and further speeding up of activity in some of the lighter manufacturing industries.

The morning break carried such representative issues as American Telephone, General Electric and Westinghouse Electric down 8 to 6 points, but these losses were practically wiped out later. American Machine and Foundry dropped 10 points, practically all of which was regained, and Midland Steel Products preferred dropped 15 and rallied 10. American Can and U. S. Steel sank about 2 and 4 3-2 points, respectively, but rallied. The latter closed fractionally higher.

Bullish operations during the afternoon centered in the automobile, railroad equipment, radio and some of the utility issues. May Department Stores was hurled up more than 24 points in what appeared to be a driving in of shorts. R. H. Macy jumped 9 points, but closed only 5 higher. In the equipments, Pullman was a conspicuous performer, rising 6 points to a new peak at 95. Grigsby Grunow rose nearly 4 points to a new high for the present stock, and Radio closed moderately higher.

Columbia Gas and United Corp. displayed simultaneous strength, giving rise to rumors that United will increase its holdings of Columbia, which rose more than 13 points to a new high price. United was heavily bought, closing a couple of points higher. American and Foreign Power rose about 10 points to a new peak in response to its earnings statement.

A few of the rails were in fair demand, Chesapeake and Ohio selling up more than 5 points. In the oils, Royal Dutch was again strong, and Sun penetrated further into new high ground, but Standard of New Jersey closed barely steady. Worthington Pump and Otis Elevator were buoyant, rising 19 and 14 points, respectively.

In the commodities, cotton rallied about $2 a bale on short covering influenced by reports of too much rain in the south, and relatively steady Liverpool cables. Wheat, corn and sugar futures moved in narrow ranges.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. The sterling demand rate sagged to $4.84 1-8, a new low for the year, and the Canadian dollar dropped to a discount of more than 3-4 of a cent. French francs, however, were firm.

THE SOCIAL CORNER

KIND WILL FOLLOW
DO THAT WHICH IS RIGHT, THE RESPECT OF MAN-

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
Too Successful

When I was young my mother read
The doctors of the day,
And I was regularly fed
The subtler sorts of hay;
As, cabbage, lettuce, celery, chard,
And beat and turnip tops,
And spinach by the cubic yard,
And other grassy crops.

Then, too, I tippled orange juice
And took tomato tods,
And turned to my persistent use
Hepatic oil of cods.
Nor did I lack for prunes and bran,
And oh, but I'd carouse
The finest milk provided man
By superplacid cows.

Thus did I largely stow inside
Vitamins A to Z,
And salts and acids specified
For growing lads like me.
And was my mother right or wrong?
How fare her precious lamb?
Oh, am I big and tough and strong?
I am, my friends, I am!

I'm six-foot-ten and weigh a ton
And fit in nothing made,
And people cry, in ceaseless fun,
"Here comes the Big Parade!"
Ah, would I'd passed my childhood hours
In less vitamined scenes
So I'd not prove the awful powers
That lurke in milk and greens!

DEATH OF A SOCIAL CORNER MEMBER

Dear Editor: Many thanks for yellow slip and am thankful to the weather man also, for better weather.

Marigold: Was disappointed in not seeing you at the picnic of Aunty No. 1. Letters do not take the place of a face to face visit, but we have to be content with them for a while. Oh! how sorry I am to see the good old summer gone for nine months again, also so many of our old friends and neighbors and one from the Corner, that I didn't learn of until recently, an old school and church chum of long ago, "Patience," Mrs. George W. Rathbun of this city. I met her a year ago apparently in perfect health. In the early summer I learned on the telephone she had gone to a hospital and did not hear of her return home. She was a woman of sterling qualities and will be sadly missed in her home and neighborhood. I'm so sorry for her children.

Well, the melancholy days have come and I wonder how many of us will be gone before the return of another summer time.

Many of my little bird friends are gone to winter quarters already and I miss them.

Bo Peep: My idea or object of a bird club is to increase and protect our local wild birds and gradually establish a bird sanctuary. Let me suggest that there is no better way in which the average person can be so helpful to the cause of bird protection as through membership in a local bird club. You will be in a stronger position to help in work for benefit of local birds or in the passage of a federal law for bird conservation.

There should be a bird club in every village and town and one or two in every city and all should unite in providing for native birds in the public parks and private gardens. Similar clubs should be started in private and public schools and academies. The results should be most interesting.

If each school will do its share in a few years we will have a race of men and women who will know their duty to our wild birds and know how to perform it.

I will say a club is stronger than a few independent bird lovers. Am I right?

Is there an Audubon society in Norwich? If so, let's hear from you.

Yours Cornerwise.
CANTERBURY BELL

A BETTER WAY

Dear Social Corner Friends: I was very much interested in Pandora's good letter and her topic, "Outside School Work". The trouble with our school system and with all our work for human development is that it does still have to be only a matter of experiment, and that the most of it is still done the wrong way.

This has come about just naturally because it has had to be planned for and done by those who have not yet had any chance or experience or interest in understanding children. Finely educated men and women in all other subjects, but who until very recently had never thought of the necessity of studying the school child in his infancy and in that way to discover and understand the principles that govern the child and to understand human traits and know how to develop them to the best advantage.

But now nearly all colleges have their "human relation" courses and are doing research work in mental infant development and already it is easy to know and to make use of their discoveries in this line.

So what we need most to do now is to read and write and discuss and work at this subject until we get an up-to-date and efficient elementary school system.

The change from the age of all hand work to this electric machine age of course means that the mental and social training of the child must be revolutionized too.

This we have failed as yet to do, so human development is still far behind and out of date.

Every child should have regular teaching as soon as he can talk, and where those in the home are too ignorant or careless to do this, it should be done by the nursery school or by the school home worker, but in some way it should be compulsory for every child now.

When the child is old enough and is mentally and socially prepared to enter school, the school slogan, "Every child, learn every lesson, every day," should be enforced.

Until the school system adopts the principle of adapting the amount of work in each study to the individual child, it will be necessary for children to do some out of school study work. For no two children would ever naturally do exactly the same amount of work in each study in exactly the same amount of time.

One of the great mistakes in educational work has been this enforced uniformity, while every reason is for individual freedom of accomplishment. If we could succeed in making school accomplishment uniform, it would only result in making more adult misfits with more bad mental habits to overcome before they could be efficient in anything.

But so long as it is permitted to exist, so long each child will need to do some out of school studying in the subject he is more backward or slow in.

What we need for the lower grades is to have them spend more of the regular school hours out of doors in the sunshine of pleasant weather.

In out-door study periods on the school grounds and in longer and more recreation recesses in fine weather. No young active child should ever be imprisoned in the school room nearly all of the best part of a pleasant day.

Too much of the child's time and attention in the school room is taken by the teacher as now required.

Instead the teacher should be expected and required to train the child to study and learn his lessons quickly and the teacher should confine her duties more to the teaching of the right social and mental ideas in her direction of activities on the playground and during the outdoor study period.
MARJORY.

FREAKS OF NATURE

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: The letter written by Fourscore in last week's paper concerning boulders was quite interesting. There are many of these ancient rocks here and there that present odd shapes and positions. In going from Glastonbury, on the state road, towards Marlborough, in the vicinity of Ten Curves, you will see what appears to be a large head of a fish (and a little more) projecting out from the side of the road, from among the bushes. On closer examination, it is a pointed portion of a huge boulder and some one has added with paint and brush a large eye and outlined a mouth. It looks very unique at a little distance, and as though this member of the shad family was quite a way from home.

Another freak of nature may be seen by the side of the highway after leaving Higganum going north. There are three large rocks in such a position and shape as to resemble a partly opened book, and this has been known as Bible rock for many years.

I remember when I was quite a little child of going to the old homestead of my grandmother in Ellington, Conn., and seeing a stone sink in her kitchen. It was a fine quality of brown stone, nicely cut out for its purpose and a drain pipe connected to it. About five years ago I had opportunity to visit this old house again, where I found it all modernized, with electric lights and furnace heat, also I observed a new sink in place of the old stone one, of long ago. I ventured to inquire of its whereabouts and was shown the peace of its later usefulness. It was inverted and lay on the ground for a stepping stone at the back door. I have seen one other stone sink in an old house in Westford and it is still in use. Now who next has seen stone sinks? Best wishes to all.

TELL OF THE CLUB MEETINGS

Dear Editor: We hope many of the members will write an account of the various meetings of the Social Corner and not depend on one or two to do this reporting. The editor can then choose the account that seems to cover the activity best if he cannot print all. We cannot all attend every meeting and we want to hear of all the good times.

Club 4 held a very enjoyable gathering last Thursday at the Congregational church parlors in Danielson. We were glad to greet Theoda and Alfara from Club 1 and Clarissa Lyle from Club 6, also all other present.

Twice Twenty, Primrose, Daisy Dean and Paisley arranged tables and eatables. We missed the members who were unable to attend because "the more, the merrier" is the rule at these gatherings. After dining, a programme was arranged. I missed this part, as I left to go to a dentist.

Amly: Has anyone guessed for what your pen name stands? I bet its "Amelia", meaning "busy, energetic".

De True: Your honey was lovely on bread. Am sending a swarm of B's for the Corner.

SURPRISE FOR ROSALIND

Dear Social Corner Friends: We are just having a nice rain, the most we have had for a long time.

I just want to tell you of the nice big surprise I had given to me. My heartfelt thanks goes out to the Social Corner, No. 4, for the beautiful remembrance and I shall buy something with it to remind me of their kindness.

There are many times in our lives when we cry for joy and that is just what I did when I opened Daisy Dean's letter and found the check.

Primrose told me how it all came about and I am so glad our Social Corner is so prosperous.

I want to thank Prairie Chicken for sending in the 12 decipies' names in rhyme.

I am going to write some of the names of famous songs of the Bible: Lamech's Sword Song, Gen. 4:23,24; Noah's Song, Gen. 9:25-27; Moses' and Miriam's Song, Ex. 15-1:19:21. Moses' Prophetic Song, Deut. 32:1-43; Song of Deborah and Borak, Judg. 5:2-1; Samson's Riddle Song, Judg. 15:16; Hannah's Magnificent, I SAM 2:1-10; David's Song of the Bow, II Sam. 1:19-27; David's Song Over Abner, II Sam. 3:33-34; David's Thanksgiving Song, 1 Chron. 16-18; Hezekiah Song, Isa. 38-10-20; Jonah's Prayer Song, Jonah 2-28; Habakkuk's Prayer Song, Heb. 3:2-19; and the four original songs in the new testament: Luke 1:46-55; Luke 1:68-80; Luke 2:14; Luke, 2:20-28.

With best wishes, ROSALIND

A TRIP TO BLOCK ISLAND.

Dear Sisters and Editor: First I want to thank the editor for the yellow slip sent me. It went towards a trip to Block Island which I will tell about later. Since writing last I attended E. L. M.'s Larkin picnic at Atlantic beach where we had a very nice time and such an enormous amount to eat. It was impossible to sample all the delicious food but there was macaroni and chicken and some sandwiches with cherries in the filling that were especially good and I wish the recipes could be sent in to the Corner. Sandwiches are especially interesting now when school lunches have to be packed.

School started last Monday and the twins went for the first time. They had no dread of it as they have heard Wilfred talk of it so much but I went with them Monday as they have to go on the bus and I was rather worried about how they would make out. The bus driver is exceptionally good I think, knows where each one has to get out (there are five that come home at noon time). He gives them plenty of time and warns them about crossing the road. I hope he is on at that time all year. It was interesting to watch the reaction on different ones starting in, some were unconcerned, some were nervous and some crying but the teacher talked to each one and tried to comfort them. When we left she had her arm around a little girl who wanted her mother, while trying to register names of other children. Those teachers of the kindergartern certainly have patience, more so than in the higher grades. It is surprising to know how well they remember the children from year to year, too, and are interested in their progress. There is one teacher, the first teacher that I went to school to, to whom four of my children have been so far. Mrs. Crandall, the principal, is certainly a wonderful woman, and has such a big responsibility on her shoulders and especially so as many of the parents do no cooperate with her. If only parents who do not approve of her methods would only go to her about it instead of discussing before the children, matters would be straightened out so much easier.

About my Block Island trip I think the least said the better. Pyrethum, her daughter, Stella, my daughter Ruth, a neighbor, Mrs. Sharples and myself, started Tuesday morning for Stonington where we boarded the Elizabeth Ann, all in high spirits planning a lovely day. (It was for a while.) We decided it would be nicer to sit up in the bow of the boat so we could see all there was to see. We were enjoying it immensely until a wave came over the rail and drenched the whole of us. That didn't dampen our ardor enough to make us move so when we arrived at the island we were all rather bedraggled. Mrs. Sharples had been on many big boats, having gone from England to Africa and back and then to this country and a year ago went back to England again. When she came back she came on the Leviathan, which she says is no comparison to the Elizabeth Ann by the way. We took our lunch with us and after taxiing across the island we ate to out on the breakwater. It was a lovely place to eat, but here we made a fatal mistake; we should have never eaten. The boat was late in leaving Stonington and it took so much of the time to go up and down when it should have been going ahead that we were even later arriving so we didn't have much time over there. As soon as we had finished eating we started back. The Samoset and Mount Hope came in from Providence while we were there and as the Samoset docks right beside the main street there was quite a congestion of traffic. Trucks with boxes and barrels, horses and wagons, cows and pigs were all there. There seemed to be more boats and autos than people. The Elizabeth Ann was taking on a load of fish when we arrived but we soon left and when we got outside the harbor found it rougher than when we went over. Pyrethum, Stella and Ruth decided to again sit up in the bow but Mrs. Sharples and myself sat amidship. We were off Watch Hill when I parted company with my dinner. I wasn't the only one though, as the cabin was full of people worse off than I, as some of them were unable to sit up. Mrs. Sharples followed my suit, then Ruth. It certainly was rough as sometimes when the boat rolled we were looking down into the water and then we would look up at the sky. One young man waited until he got into smooth water in Stonington harbor before he was sick. Pyrethum and Stella were not sick at all but they were soaked with salt water. One young man of the crew was as good as he could be to those who were sick, getting drinks and ice and helping wherever he could. We were mighty glad when we got to Stonington and Stella had her car nearby so we didn't have to wait long before we were home. Of course there was the hungry family waiting for supper but it wasn't long before I was in bed. I couldn't sleep though for a long time because every time I closed my eyes I felt as though the bed was rocking back and forth. Mrs. Sharples threatens dire things to the next person suggesting Block Island to her and I'm sure the only inducement that would appeal to me would be the chance to stay a week over there. The rest would go again to morrow. Good luck everyone.
SUMAC, (No 6)

CLUB NO. 5 OPENS INDOOR SEASON.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Friends: Social Corner members, friends and guests met at Buckingham Memorial Sept. 3 (first of the season) with a goodly number present, considering the weather. It was not simply warm, it was boiling. Olga suffered with the extreme heat, but after removing her pretty beads was more comfortable. The Friendly Voice distributed poems written by The Little Spinster which we were allowed to take away with us and think we will enjoy reading them. We gave her a rising vote of thanks.

We regret that Alta could not be our efficient leader any longer, but trust Bay State to keep the record good, as with her helpers she served a delicious dinner of salads, rolls, pies, cakes and fruit, after singing "Blest Be the Tie That Binds Our Hearts.

Say, did you ever sit on the soft side of a rock at the shore and eat your supper there? Then watch the moon rise from the other side and cast a silver lane across the glistening waves?

"Backward, turn backward, Oh, Time in your flight
And make me a child again just for tonight."

Best wishes to all.
WURDY BELLE, (Club 5)

ENLARGES ON CAPRICORN'S IDEA.

Dear Editor and Social Cornerites: I have now met so many wonderful and unusual people in the Social Corner that I am convinced this is the best unique unorganized society in the world. Praise be, to the editors of The Bulletin who devote space for our communications and consequent sociability.

Twice Twenty, Daisy Deane, Primrose and Paisley: I can never tell you how much I enjoyed the Club 4 dinner in Danielson last week. It was certainly a red-letter-day for me, and my deepest regret was that I couldn't stay till the last gun was fired; I wanted to hear it boom.

Capricon: ..ow indeed, you had a bright idea and perhaps have started something of lasting benefit to many a sister (and perhaps brother) Cornerites. Why not, indeed, introduce at least some of the excellent customs of the county fair to our Corner social meetings? For instance, a table whereon every one may display something they would like to sell. One Cornerite may have raised a wonderful double sunflower and have seeds which she would gladly sell at five cents a dozen. Why not place them in tiny envelopes, marked with her pen name and the price? Someone else makes dainty place cards or attractive trims for pillow slips which they gladly sell. If some were just finished at the time of a Social Corner meeting and easer customer might easily be found; going farther, orders for more might be placed which would be of mutual benefit and so on ad infinitum. Every one has something which is needed by others and now that Christmas is coming, there might be sale for many of the bits of handicraft which busy fingers develop and the extra sales might spell comforts for some who have leisure for work but limited clientelle. Equally it might be just the chance that many want to buy the pretty, hand-made things they have not time, or perhaps talent to make. I believe even a dressed broiler or half a dozen of the freshest eggs would sell at a Corner social. I am sure some sister would see that the proceeds of sales reached the right person and it might even be worked out on a co-operative basis, the sellers contributing 10 per cent of the receipts to the committee for the privilege of using their meeting as a place to find patrons. What does everybody think o this lead? If it seems good, give the credit to Capricon—if not, blame me. At least let us hear if any club wants to try it out as a plan open to development.

RECIPES BY NOGO.

Dear Editor and Social Corner: As my name is added to the Corner hope some one of the writers will try these recipes:

Tomato Conserve: 1 quart tomatoes, fresh or canned, 2 lemons, 1 pint diced tart apple, 4 cups sugar 2-3 cup sliced English walnuts. Cut the lemons in small thin slices, cover with water and cook until tender; add tomatoes, apple and sugar. Cook until thick and clear. Put the walnuts in a strainer, pour over them boiling water. Rub well in a towel and slice. Stir. Turn into classes. When cool seal the nuts into the hot tomato mixture. with paraffin. One cup of raisins may be added instead of nuts or both be omitted.

Carrot and Watermelon Rind Marmalade: 1½ cups of ground watermelon rind, 1½ cups ground carrots, 3-4 cup of sugar, 1½ lemons. Water to cover. Cook carrots and watermelon rind, lemons quartered lengthwise and cut in thin slices, and ginger root if desired, until tender. Add sugar and cook thick. Do not stir. Pack in hot jars and seal, label and store.

INTERESTING FAIR ATTRACTIONS

Dear Social Corner Sisters and Editor: Such fine letters as we are having, though I wish the page might be full and running over. I am so far away that if I don't write more often, am afraid you will forget I am a member. Have had just enough rain here in New York state to keep gardens and lawns in fine condition. August was cool with day after day of absolutely clear weather, when one could see for miles and miles, but September so far has been hot, with several rainy days.

I spent one day at the state fair in Syracuse, and the time was all too short. I believe it is said to be about the largest and best state fair in the country. The buildings are wonderful, especially the coliseum. I could have spent a whole day in the domestic science building, and only wish all the sisters could have seen the lovely hooked rugs, one must have been a 9x12. It was in squares about a foot square, tan and a light shade of brown, with flowers and leaves in each square. One beautiful rug was made of silk stockings ,none of them dyed, but the lady in charge said rugs made of that material could not be used on the floor, as they would not stand hard wear. Then the lovely old quilts in applique, red poppies and roses, with green leaves and vines running all over the white background, and such beautiful quilting! I have a friend here in Preble who has one nearly 100 years old and as good as new. I think if I could have had my choice of anything in that room I would have chosen one of those lovely quilts.

The floral display was large and beautiful. Inside one of the buildings was a log cabin built in sixteen something, looking perfectly firm and in excellent condition, and fitted out exactly as they were in those days, cord bedstead, hand-woven linen sheets and pillow slips, lovely old blue and white coverlet, old cradle, spinning wheel, etc., fireplace and crane and all the things that went with it.

What would we think today if a large family had to live in one room, with no conveniences, as they did in those days? I am afraid we spend more time longing for something we haven't got, than we do in being grateful for all our blessings.

We were also much interested in the live stock. The horses were beauties, also the Jersey cows, quite a number of the latter from Rhode Island.

The Indian village was also very interesting and their needlework was lovely. Wish I had time to tell you more about it. Some were dressed in their war paint and feathers, and I was glad to find they still speak in their native tongue.

We forgot how old we were and rode on the little toy train around the fair grounds, though perhaps we remembered it later when we had reached home, got supper and the work done.

We had a delightful visit in July when some dear friends from William street, Westerly, came to see us. It will long be a pleasant memory.

American Girl: Have worn out the road to the mail box looking for that letter. Have you lost that good right arm of yours? Our trip is still in the future, but hope to make it about Oct. 1st.

Sumas: I enjoy your letters in The Bulletin so much.

Kind regards to all.

NEW YORK'S AQUARIUM

Dear Social Corner Friends: I visited one of the most interesting buildings in New York, if not the entire United States. At least it was of interest to some 7,000,000 individuals who passed through its portals to all parts of this country, there to seek contentment, fame or fortune. At any rate, it seethes with historical interest, and calls to mind many momentous occasions.

Nearly 125 years ago, the government erected this building as a fort, and called it "West Battery". Hence the name of the surroundings today, "The Battery", or "Battery park". The gun embrasures are still there in the outer wall, a wall which is nine or ten feet thick. The old ammunition rooms are surrounded with walls of masonry 15 feet thick.

In 1823 congress ceded the building to New York city. It was then converted into a fort of another sort. A fort given over to the muses, instead of the gods of war. Would that could happen to all fortifications in this world. War lords please notice. A paying proposition, too!

Here were received Lafayette, President Jackson, President Tyler and Louis Kossuth. Here also Mr. Morse demonstrated the feasibility of his marvelous invention, the telegraph. In 1847 the building was transformed into an opera house. On its stage, under the management of P. T. Barnum, Jenny Lind began her career in America. President Van Buren and the prince of Wales were also received there.

Next, the building was made the immigration depot of New York. During the years 1855 to 1890 the afore mentioned millions of individuals passed through its doors, many of them balancing huge bundles on their heads, and hopes and fears in their hearts.

Today fish occupy it. It is supposedly the largest aquarium in the world. There are seven large floor pools in which all sorts of aquatic creatures, mostly of the larger varieties, can be seen. Their antics amuse thousands daily. All the walls, upstairs and down, are lined with tanks in which all sorts of fish are swimming. Some have the most exquisite opalescent shades. I never knew fish could be so beautiful.

As one comes out, walks through Battery park, looks around at the tall buildings, sees the hurrying crowds, notes the chaos of noise, it is hard to realize that less than 300 years ago it was only a sleepy little Dutch settlement on the edge of a virgin forest. A quaint wind-mill a spinning in the wind, perhaps where now the tallest building stands. It is as Tarkington says, "This world does move."

A street urchin punctured my musings with:

"O-o-o, look it, the fish who looked at the fish!"

ELLY JAY.

TOMATO SOUP CAKE

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Am very glad to send recipe, but I like to call it surprise cake. We like it so much. I hoped some sister would try it when I sent it before.

Quite a few people have told me they "thought it would be horrid." I'll try anything once, and I often do it again and again.

Surprise Cake: 1 cup sugar 1 tablespoon lard, 1 tablespoon butter, 1 can tomato soup, 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in soup, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 teaspoon nutmeg, 1-2 teaspoon cloves, 1 teaspoon salt, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Nuts if you like. Mix as written. It will keep a long time and be moist.

Whispering Pines: Please try this one also:

Fudge Cake: 1 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cocoa, 1-4 cup butter, 1 egg, 1 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda in 1-2 cup sour milk, 1 1-2 cups flour, 1-4 cup boiling water. Flavor with vanilla and put together as above. I use frosting on both cakes.
SUSANNA.

TOO LATE'S PICNIC SEPT. 18

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Don't forget the picnic at my home in Pleasant Valley, Willimantic, Wednesday, Sept. 18. All clubs are welcome. Bring soup plates, cup, knife, fork and spoon and something good to eat.
TOO LATE.

SECOND DAY OF PACHAUG GRANGE FAIR SUCCESS IN SPITE OF RAIN

The second day of Pachaug grange fair Friday was well attended, in spite of the occasional mist showers. The first day, it was reported at the gate that the attendance receipts were twice as much as last year. More concessions had been leased and there was more business on the midway until late afternoon when rain fell steadily.

The health tent was one of the points of interest in the afternoon. Here, Miss Winifred Erskine and Mrs. Nickerson, from the state board of health, Dr. G. H. Jennings, assisted by Mrs. P. W. Chase and Mrs. F. E. Newton, examined a number of babies. The first prize went to Charles Parkhurst, Jr., 2nd, to Alvin Eichelberg, Jr.; 3rd, to John Peterson; 4th, to Dolly Richards; 5th, to Dorothy Maynard, and 6th, to Eugene Raymond.

Popular Entertainment

The entertainment consisted of songs and dances by Charles Lewis and Albert Perrin, of Norwich. Mrs. Grace Manning, of Norwich, gave several humorous readings. The Glowacki sisters, of Jewett City, furnished a fine exhibition in the musical line. Little 8-year old Adelaide toe danced in her charming character sketches in dainty costumes, her sister Stella at the piano, and Helen, on the violin.

Thursday evening, in the competitive plays between Pachaug and Preston City granges, the latter won the decision being made by popular applause.

Saddle Horses Race

Five saddle horses from Mrs. Chapman's Riding school in Norwich Town raced in the afternoon, as well as Lucy Culver, on Blazeworthy, her own horse. There were five races. In the first, there were three heats run between Lillian Konickio, on Atta Boy, and Lucy Culver on Blazeworthy, the former winning. In the men's class, Rankin, on Chestnut Queen, won over Makin, on Colonel. In the second race, Rankin on Otta Boy beat out Stephens, on Major. In the third, Chestnut Queen won from Minta's Black Beauty. In the fourth heat, Frank Stephens, on Blaze, came in ahead of Rankin, on Pony. In the fifth, Rankins on Atta Boy won out over Stephens, on Major.

CITY TO SERVE INJUNCTION TO HALT THOMPSON'S PIER
(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 13—The city is determined that Clarence W. Thompson, former alderman, shall not be permitted to erect a pier off his water front property, Pequot avenue, opposite Keeney lane, in spite of the fact that the police court earlier in the week found him not guilty of violation of the city's building code in causing work on construction of the pier to be started without first having obtained the approval of Building Inspector William Gunn. Since Thompson's acquittal in the police court, together with the discharge of Contractor Richard C. Davidson, Thompson filed a new application to build the pier, the permit having been tendered the building inspector yesterday. Like the previous permit, Gunn would not approve it. Today Thompson instructed Davidson to resume the work on building the pier and when Inspector Gunn was notified, he placed the matter before Director of Law Thomas E. Troland with the request that the work be stopped and that such construction work as has been performed, which consists of the installing of piles be removed. This afternoon after Director of Law Troland had investigated the situation, he started to prepare injunction papers, which will temporarily cause the work of building the pier to stop. The papers were completed this evening and Saturday Director of Law Troland will go before a judge of the superior court and request that the instrument be signed and when that is done, it will be served on Thompson and Davidson. A hearing will then take place to determine whether the injunction shall remain permanent, and if the court so rules, the work performed in connection with the building of the pier will have to be removed at the expense of Thompson.

Thompson is equally insistent that the pier shall be erected and contends that he has not violated the city's laws. He claims that he owns the waterfront property and that he has obtained permission from the United States government to erect the pier, insofar as it does not, when completed, interfere in any manner with navigation. He claims that the city's building code has not been violated and that he has caused the work of building the pier to be started the same as any other construction work.

It is Thompson's plan, provided the pier is erected, to have tanks close to the pier to use in supplying boats with gasoline throughout the year. Thompson has retained counsel in Hon. McGuire & Hull and intends to fight the case and is confident he will defeat the city in the civil court as he did in the police court.

The New Haven railroad has had a series of five-ton aluminum motor trucks put into service for freight-carrying purposes and two of them make trips to New London nightly, picking up and delivering freight between points along the shore line route. The operation of the trucks, it is believed, will cut into the business heretofore handled by independent operators, who delivered freight, especially fish, between points in Rhode Island and Massachusetts and New York.

Rev. T. Lawrason Riggs, former resident of Ocean avenue, now Catholic chaplain at Yale university, is winning much attention in the literary world for his translation of the great work of the Abbe A. Lugan, "The Social Principles of the Gospels."

Before Judge Daniel M. Cronin in the police court today, Corinne Roberts, colored and with a long police record for offenses of a various nature, was there charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. She was fined $5 and costs. The Roberts woman was arrested on North Bank street last night by Patrolmen Frank Philopena and Edward Skoczylas when she created a disturbance by boisterous behavior.

Fred Marshall and Joseph Francis were charged with breach of the peace, the men having engaged in a fight on North Bank street. They were arrested by Patrolman Frank Philopena. The fight was not one in which either participant was injured, so a nolle was ordered.

Charles Nathan and Lewellyn Minchell were charged with breach of the peace and intoxication. The charge against Nathan was nolled and Minchell was given suspension, for he was considered responsible for a trivial fight in which the men were engaging in on North Bank street when arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey, Sergeant John Courtney and Patrolman George McCaskey.

Once Did Not Teach Him.

Willis Miner, employed at the Mystic Oral school, was charged with intoxication and was fined $15 and costs. He did not have money to pay his fine and an additional $8.23 costs, but an employe at the school came to New London and paid, thereby preventing Miner from going to jail. Miner was in court yesterday on the same charge, when he was fined $5 and costs.

The building on Potter street, for many years owned by Michael O'Connell who sold the two-story structure to Frank Danesi of Norwich, who in turn sold it to George Marquardt, of Groton, has been razed. It is understood that Marquardt will have a modern tenement house erected on the site within a short time.

Miss Dorothy Andrews has resumed her duties in the office of City Treasurer Herbert G. Huntley in the municipal building, after a fortnight's vacation.

Mrs. Harry Mather, of Blackhall; Miss Jessie Croski, 24 Golden street; Benjamin Barber, 264 Colman street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, were discharged today.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater.

"The Broadway Melody," said to be the most successful all-talking, all-singing, all-dancing picture yet made in the realm of synchronized films, will open at the Breed theater tomorrow night, with Bessie Love, Anita Page and Charles King in the featured roles.

The new film, a Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, represents the combined efforts of a number of theatrical experts. The story of the film was written by Edmund Goulding, who won success as a playwright before setting his mark in the directorial field, while the dialogue in the picture, which is a 100 per cent. "talkie," was written by James Gleason and Norman Houston.

"The Broadway Melody" is a combination of musical comedy effects and a straight dramatic story. It may be called the first orixinal musical comedy composed for the screen, but at the same time it has every element of a revulation comedy-drama. The story is one of Broadway stage life, with the attempt being made to paint Mazda Alley as it actually exists.

The music for the new production includes "Broadway Melody," "You Were Meant For Me," and "I Love You.' These were written by Arthur Freed, with music by Nacio Herb Brown, who composed "The Boy Friend," and "The Doll Dance.'

The story of "The Broadway Melody" is of two sisters who came to New York to seek stage work and their subsequent adventures. A full musical comedy chorus is used in the film, which contains some elaborate Technicolor scenes and is said to represent the clearest and most natural vocal reproductions yet heard in a picture.

Broadway Theatre.

Everybody knows George M. Cohan —and everybody knows Ring W. Lardner, the great master of American "slanguage"—when these two get together on a film story, it must be a "home-run"—and that's just what "Fast Company," the all-talking, all-American picture opening at the Broadway tomorrow, proves to be. Jack Oakie has the role of Elmer (Hurry) Kane, Lardner's favorite character, the small town wise-cracking baseball star who attempts to "crash" into the big league, and finally does so, joining the New York Yankees just in time for their famous "world's serious" against Pittsburgh. Both big league teams take part in the picture, and plenty of baseball is played, with Oakie doing his bit as a pinch hitter. His ready tongue and side-splitting wise-cracks furnish a lot of fun, as well as his misdirected love affairs. Evelyn Brent and Gwen Lee divide honors as Elmer's "girl", Richard "Skeets" Gallagher is his fiery tongued manager, Sam Hardy and Arthur Houseman, both film favorites, having prominent roles, also. Language a la carte is served in spicy, peppy style, and the fast action of the picture is equally as smart, combining as it does, hearty humor with thrilling drama—the drama of a near-crooked world's series, thanks to the plot of some hard-losing gamblers. Lardner is the creator of the "You Know Me, Al," character, this being Hurry Kane's favorite expression, and it is safe to say that this picture will bring that phrase back into common usage soon. The surrounding program includes the latest Paramount Sound News, the Talking Collegians in "The Varsity Drag," a fast-stepping chapter in the bustling life at Calford, and an all-talking comedy, "Oft in the Silly Night," one of Octavus Roy Cohen's side-splitting stories of colored high life in Birmingham. Tomorrow (Sunday) evening two complete shows will be given.

Jane Paris Shops Open

Jane Paris Shops, Inc., with stores everywhere, introduce themselves to the Norwich public today by opening their store at 191 Main street where the latest fall models in dresses and hats will be found. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

The reopening on Saturday, September 21, of the Palace theatre under Warner Brothers' ownership will inaugurate a new era of the motion picture in the history of this city. Under the management of R. B. Hamilton, who recently resigned as manager of a large Hartford theater to join the Warner organization, the Palace will join that select list of theaters in the United States which is to enjoy first pick of the finest screen dramas filmed in Hollywood—namely Warner Brothers and First National talking pictures.

In order to bring the Palace theater up to the standard of other playhouses in the Warner chain, between $40,000 and $50,000 is now being expended in renovations, redecorating and modernizing the house. At a cost of approximately $10,000, every one of the 1350 seats in the theater will be scrapped and replaced with the latest and most comfortable type of upholstered theater chair.

For some time a score of decorators have been busy within the playhouse laying out the new color patterns and arranging the novel lighting system which has been ordered for the place. Workmen are now padding the entire interior of the theater so as to remove the last vestige of echo, this will insure perfect reproduction of sound within the house. When padded, the walls will be covered with beautiful silk damask in keeping with the other appurtenances. Eight thousand, five hundred dollars is the amount that is to be spent on a new typhoon fan system for the Palace, the latest thing in theater ventilation—a device that sweeps 165,000 cubic feet of cool, fresh air into the playhouse every minute, at the same time drawing out the other air. Its operation is noiseless.

Accoustic experts from the great Warner laboratories for a long time studied the sound properties of the Palace, in order to design an interior that would permit the voices of the actors to carry without a vibration into every corner of the house. The most delicate of instruments were used in this research work, and as a result, any defects which the theater may have had in the way of imperfect accoustics, will now be absolutely rectified.

New draperies in soft, pleasing colors, elaborate decoration work and other innovations of good taste now in process will, when finished, make the Palace a theater in keeping with the magnificent type of screen entertainment which is to be presented there.

Mr. Hamilton, the new manager of the Palace, is a man of wide experience in the theater field. Prior to joining the Warner organization he was commissioned by a large film organization to take charge of the Majestic theater in Hartford and bring that playhouse up to the highest standard. This he accomplished during a few months, and is now turning over an up-to-date and successful playhouse to his successor.

Before going to Hartford, Mr. Hamilton was for years associated manager of the Palace theater in New Haven, one of the most successful of the Poli enterprises. During the four years previous he was director of publicity for Eddie Cantor, and prior to that had a successful career in the production of stage plays and light drama. Early in his career he took important roles in a number of motion pictures, and for some time was in vaudeville.

The first picture which Mr. Hamilton will bring to the Palace is "Say It With Songs," starring Al Jolson, the world's greatest entertainer, and Davey Lee, child idol of Hollywood. Cast as Joe Lane, ex-prizefighter, song writer and radio entertainer, Jolson gives even a greater performance than in his previous success, "The Singing Fool."

The story of "Say It With Songs" leads naturally to a wide selection of songs. In the role of song writer and radio entertainer the one and only Al, has a chance to sing many numbers, new ones and several old favorites. He is seen singing at broadcasting stations at home to his Little Pal and (played inimitably by wee Davy Lee) and from prison where he has been sent as the result of the accidental killing of a man who tried to break up his home. It is considered rare good fortune by a song writer to have Jolson choose one of his songs for that alone stamps it with later public approval. Most of Jolson's songs are either written by himself or in collaboration. In a picture that has as many musical hits as "Say It With Songs," however, a staff of qualified Tin Pan Alley musical experts were engaged to do the songs.

Born Asa Yoelson, son of a Jewish cantor, of St. Petersburg, Russia—became Al Jolson, master entertainer of the world—This is the outline of his personal history.

High spots in the spectacular progress are many—the most outstanding would include: The day he ran away from home to escape a career as a cantor in the Jewish synagogue. The day he joined a circus as ballyhoo man. The day he started his vaudeville career with his brother and one other. The night he first donned black-face make-up and stole the show. The night the Shuberts saw him and realized his possibilities. The day he signed with Warner Brothers to make the first full length talking, singing Vitaphone picture, "The Jazz Singer."

Fabulous stage salaries were earned by Al Jolson. The screen made offers but he could not be weaned away from the stage. Then came Vitaphone pictures and the opportunity to be heard as well as seen from the screen, Jolson consented to try one picture for Warner Brothers.

They called it "The Jazz Singer" and it made motion picture hsitory. It was the first full length talking picture ever made and it revolutionized the entire industry. Jolson followed this with "The Singing Fool," a picture which broke attendance records in all parts of the world. His third and greatest picture to date is "Say It With Songs," soon to be shown at the Palace theater, here.

And after Al Jolson will come a host of other marvelous screen dramas. The following week Manager Hamilton will present at the Palace, Joan Crawford in her latest success, "Our Modern Maidens." Thence after, in order of their completion at the studios will come such superb films as "Disraeli," and "The Green Goddess," both of which star George Arliss; "The Gold-Diggers of Broadway," starring matchless Ann Pennington, and that greatest of the great, "The Show of Shows," a picture which has swept Hollywood bare of talent while it is being made—a picture that has enrolled dozens of the greatest stars, including Al Jolson, John Barrymore, Myrna Loy, George Arliss, Georges Carpentiers and a legion of other great names in the show world.

Truly the reopening of the Palace will mark a new era in motion picture entertainment for Norwich. Warner Brothers aim at nothing less than to make the Palace theater an institution of which Norwich will be justly proud.

B'NAI BRITH AUXILIARY DISTRICT CONFERENCE TO BE HELD IN NORWICH

Arrangements have been begun by Rose of New England lodge, No. 898 Independent order of B'Nai Brith, and the Ladies' auxiliary, No. 40, to entertain the conference of the Ladies' auxiliaries of District No. 1 of the B'nai Brith, consisting of New York state, Connecticut and the Dominion of Canada, which is to be held in this city in November. The preliminary plans were gotten under way at a joint meeting of the men's and women's lodges, which followed the meeting of Rose of New England lodge Thursday evening in its rooms in the Uncas-Merchants bank building and at which President Oscar Silverman explained that Norwich is greatly honored by being designated as the place for the district conference and asked the members to help welcome the out of town delegates so as to do credit to Norwich hospitality. By a unanimous vote the members of the Ladies' auxiliary No. 40 were invited in joint meeting to lay plans for the coming district conference.

Mrs. Alexander M. Pasnik, president of the auxiliary, presided at the joint meeting. Mrs. Pasnik outlined a tentative program for the coming conference and told the members that the Ladies' auxiliary, No. 40, is determined to make the district conference an outstanding event, so that the visiting delegates will remember the fine treatment accorded to them on their visit to the Rose of New England. The following committees were appointed to help in welcoming and entertaining the conference delegates. For the men's lodge: Josiah Greenstein, chairman, Rabbi Joseph N. Rosenberg, Rudolph Henschel, Abner Schwartz, William Trachtenberg, Dr. Paul Schwartz, Maurice Meyer, Herman Bruckner, Samuel Florman, Abraham Bruckner, David Trachtenberg, Saul Rothstein, Jack Rabinowitz, Alex Pasnik, Irving Eisenstein, secretary, and Max Hanover, publicity chairman.

For the Ladies' auxiliary, No. 40: Mrs. Nathan Gilman, chairman, Mrs. David Trachtenberg, Mrs. Abraham Curland, Mrs. Abraham Bruckner, Mrs. David Cohen, Mrs. Caspar Graff, Mrs. Herman Bruckner, Mrs. Rudolph Henshel, Mrs. Philip Silverman, Mrs. Charles Jacobson, Mrs. Fred Herman, Mrs. Abraham Levine, Mrs. Samuel Miller, Mrs. Harry Rosoff, Mrs. Frank Goldstein, Miss Sarah Novick, Miss Rose Rubin, secretary; Mrs. Paul A. Schwartz, chairman of entertainment.

Mrs. Pasnik informed the members that the New London B'nai Brith Ladies' auxiliary volunteered to help Norwich in the arrangement of the district conference. The offer was accepted with a vote of thanks.

The season's activity for the B'nai Brith in the city was inaugurated by the meeting of Rose of New England lodge at which President Silverman presided and was assisted by Vice-president Rudolph Henschel, Max Hanover, in the absence of Secretary Irving Eisenstein, took care of the records of the meeting. An important phase of the meeting was the discussions and reports of the recent serious situation in Palestine where a number of Jewish pioneers were killed and plundered by riotous Arabs under the instigation of ambitious leaders who were trying to bring about a religious war. Rabbi J. N. Rosenberg, Norwich chairman of the Palestine emergency relief committee, reported that Norwich Jewish people have contributed more than $2000 towards Palestine relief and that a check for $2000 was forwarded last week to David Brown, general chairman of the Palestine relief at New York, and that additional funds will be forwarded in the near future. Rabbi Rosenberg also reported that several voluntary contributions were received from local Gentile citizens accompanied with expressions of sympathy for the unfortunate Jewish sufferers in Palestine.

Josiah Greenstein, in an impassioned address, praised the generosity of the Norwich contributors and urged those who have not as yet donated to the Palestine relief to send in their contribution to Rabbi Rosenberg.

Maurice Meyer spoke of the great loss sustained by the Jewish people owing to the death, at Zurich, of Louis Marshall, one of the foremost patriotic and philanthropic Jewish citizens in the country. Mr. Meyer said that the death of Mr. Marshall is a great loss to the country as Mr. Marshall was champion of right and a friend of those in need irrespective of creed, race or nationality. In answer to a demand of President Silverman, the members observed a period of reverent silence as a token of sorrow for the death of Mr. Marshall.

BAPTIZED IN BLANKET THAT HELD FIRST NORWICH BABY

A blanket in which Christopher Huntington, Jr., the first white child born in Norwich, was baptized by Rev. James Fitch in 1660, was worn by Catherine Stafford Chase, infant daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Eugene Chase of Easton, Pa., when she was baptized Wednesday at St. Peter's Episcopal church in Hebron by Rev. Benjamin H. Bissell, Ph. D. The blanket was loaned for the baptism by its owner, Miss C. E. Kellogg.

This baptismal robe is alluded to in a manuscript copy of the history of Connecticut now in the Saybrook library, as the "sacred blanket," and is said to have been brought from England by the Huntington family.

It descended from Christopher Huntington, Jr., in a direct line of eldest daughters until it reached its present owner. The blanket is of a heavy brocaded, striped silk of delicately mellowed coloring. It is in an excellent state of preservation and may last hundreds of years longer. It is now at least 266 years old, and is probably even older, as family traditions indicate that it was in use in England as a christening robe for a long time before the Huntingtons came to this country.

In a letter to The Bulletin he writes: Am enjoying the reunion of my former Buddies of the 34th Vol. Inf., which was mobilized here in 1899 for service in the Philippines.

This is first time in 30 years we have met each other since we were mustered out of the service needless to say that we are getting a big kick as we meet one another and note the change in faces and form—recognition of which seems to be impossible in some cases and the familiar name is all we can remmeber.

We are now fighting all the old Philippine battles over and the rate we are going it will take a few years instead of the four days we shall be together before we depart for our distant homes. Out of the twelve hundred men of the 34th, eight hundred are now living; the rest have since died from old age or from disability contracted in the service.

Two hundred and forty have registered here so far for the reunion and more are expected before the meet is over.

This reunion is in conjunction with the 31st Annual National convention, U. S. W. V., being held in this city at which over fifteen hundred delegates are present. A big proprram is arranged by the entertainment committee, a sightseeing trip to Pikes Peak and Estes park and other places of interest. I am the only delegate from R. S. Griswold camp, Norwich, present.

The weather has been ideal outside of the snowstorm which greeted our arrival in the city. The National convention convenes here with National auxiliary during Sept. 8 and 11.

REV. CADMAN TO HEAD THE DRAMA LEAGUE OF AMERICA

This Country's Three Largest Organizations of Play-Goers Are to Merge Into the League—The Merger Will Give the League a Membership of 20,800—Purpose is to Encourage Better Motion Pictures and Better and More Plays.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Merger of this country's three largest organizations of play-goers into the Church and Drama league of America with the Rev. Dr. S. Pares Cadman, as president, was announced today by The league's executive director, George Reid Andrews.

The Drama league of America, with headquarters in Chicago, the American Theatre association and the Church and Drama association, both with headquarters in New York, were the three organizations which formed the merger, giving the new league a membership of 20,800.

Headquarters for the new organization, which includes local chapters in Chicago, Cincinnati, Indianapolis, Pittsburgh, Boston, Milwaukee, Tacoma and St. Petersburgh, Fla., have been established in New York.

Its purpose is encouragement of better motion pictures and better and more plays, produced professionally and through the little theatre and similar amateur movements. It also will sponsor play-writing contests, foreign tours for the study of the theatre and establishment of subscription audiences in larger American cities.

John W. Davis is honorary president and Dr. Cyrus Adler and Professor William Lyon Phelps are among vice presidents of the league, which includes in its board of directors, Rev. RAILROAD COP INJURED BY FLEEING AUTOIST

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 15—(AP)—John Coyle, 34, New Haven railroad policeman, was seriously injured today when a motorist and his companion whom he sought to stop after they had stolen two red lanterns from a railroad excavation job, crushed him between their car and a building here.

Coyle was left lying unconscious between car and building while the driver and his companion fled the scene abandoning the machine. John F. Corcoran, 19, of this city later was arrested and identified, police said as the driver. He was charged with operating without a driver's license, with reckless driving, evading responsibility after injury to person and damage to property and with breach of the peace.

Coyle, who had jumped on the running board of the machine after observing the theft of the lanterns, suffered fractures of both hips and possible internal injuries. At St. Raphael's hospital he is on the danger list and physicians believe he will die.

Coyle told police that he was on duty at the railroad job when Corcoran and his companion who has not yet been found, came by. Both jumped out of their car and each took a red lantern indicating the dangerous spot on the road. Coyle was about 100 feet away but he ran after the car as it drove away, and jumped upon the running board. Corcoran, he said, then cut a corner sharply, ran up on the sidewalk and shot the car into a building, sandwiching Coyle between car and building. He said his companion then escaped. Coyle was found by A. F. Gehr, who took him to the hospital and notified police.

Investigation led to the discovery the car was owned by John O'Connor, this city, who said he had lent the vehicle to Corcoran. The latter was then arrested.

Police said a more serious charge would be placed against Corcoran if Coyle dies.

NO TRACE FOUND OF REED OR HIS SLOOP

HANCOCK, Me., Sept. 15—(AP)—Finding of a water soaked duffel bag identified as that carried by the missing William Reed, 19, of New Haven, Conn., when he left Little Gott's Island last Tuesday in his small sloop for Hancock Point today strengthened the belief of searchers the youth had succumbed to the sea. No other trace of Reed or his sloop had been discovered tonight.

More than 150 small boats, Coast Guard craft, yachts of summer residents and two commercial seaplanes continued however, search of Frenchman's bay and coastal waters began last Thursday when Reed's disappearance was reported. Rivers, islands and rocky inlet was explored in the hope of finding the boy for whose recovery his father, Prof. Edward Bliss Reed, of Yale university, has offered a reward of $1,000 dead or alive.

Reed's duffel bag was washed ashore at Winter Harbor. Besides clothing it contained his chart which held the notation "at gas buoy, 5:15."

TO BE TRIED FOR THE MURDER OF HIS WIFE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 15.—(AP)—In the little courtroom here that has been the scene of many noted legal battles, Earle Francis Peacox will go to trial tomorrow on a charge of murdering his 29-year-old wife, Dorothy.

The young woman's charred body was found beneath an apple tree on a lonely road near Greenburg, N. Y., April 27. Authorities later announced that Peacox had confessed he strangled his wife during a quarrel April 21, the first anniversary of their marriage and later set her body afire.

A panel of 150 talesmen has been drawn for the selection of a jury to decide between the contention of District Attorney Frank A. Coyne that the 21-year-old radio repairman premeditated the slaying and that of Sydney A. Syme, defense counsel, who had announced that he was satisfied the killing was accidental.

Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tomkins, who will preside over the trial, has announced that he will not allow photographs to be taken inside the courtroom, and the building will be thoroughly policed to enforce his edict.

FOREST FIRES RAGING IN PACIFIC NORTHWEST

PORTLAND, Oregon, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Forest fires raging through the Pacific northwest this week have blackened more than 205,000 acres of national timber lands and many conflagrations battled by thousands of men still were uncontrolled. Losses in national forests this year have been estimated at 205,442 acres, nearly ten times greater than last year's fire toll when 23,443 acres were burned over.

Two disastrous fires were responsible for more than half of this year's damage. Both were in Washington. More than 98,000 acres were destroyed in the Colville National Forest before weary bands of fighters brought the Doller Mountain blaze under control. The Chelan National Forest suffered the next heaviest loss, 55,566 acres of timber having been destroyed there, principally by the Remmel Lake fire.

So far in Oregon no national forest has suffered a loss more than 1,000 acres. Fires in this state, however, have done greater damage in state forests and privately owned land.

The words of local airplane pilots who recently flew from the southern boundary of Oregon to the Washington-Canadian line describe the situation best.

"At times," he said, "we encountered miles and miles of smoke so thick that we flew blidly. Only our instruments told us we were flying in an upright position. Without them we probably would have flown in circles or upside down.

"Then, when we would break through the smoke blanket, we would find ourselves over a raging inferno."

MATTER TO CONSIDER IN TARIFF DEBATE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Party clashes over the advisability of continuing the seven year old policy permitting the president to readjust tariff rates after investigation by the tariff commission loom this week in the senate.

This policy, inaugurated with incorporation of the flexible clause in the Fordney-McCumber act of 1922 and retained with wider authority in the bill now pending, will furnish a vehicle for debate over its constitutionality and the general wisdom of delegating such power to the executive.

The provision opening the way for a reorganization of the tariff commission, which President Hoover recommended in his special session message, and the proposed abandonment of the old United States value method are to be chief points at issue, too, but most of the discussion is expected to revolve around the flexible provisions.

$9,000,000 RUSSIAN TREASURE FOUND IN BELGRADE BANK

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Old Russian treasure to the value of more than $9,000,000 was disclosed today to be resting in the safe of a Belgrade bank by the action of two groups of Russian emigres who are seeking its possession. The treasure consists of diamonds, jewelry and securities which belonged to the St. Petersburg Mortgage bank and were carried to the Crimea at the time of the revolution.

After the collapse of the white army, General Wrangel nominated a committee to guard the treasure which was brought here and placed in a rented safe. Recently a group of Russian refugees sought liquidation of the remaining assets of the old bank to establish a new one aboard but the surviving members of the committee refused to deliver the treasure on the plea that they were never recognized by Grand Duke Nicholas.

TO DEFEND HIS WIFE ON ARIAL FOR BANK ROBBERY

NEW BRAUNFELS, Texas, Sept. 15.—(AP)—Tired eyed and with hair graying from three years of incessant worry, 27 year old Otis Rogers, lawyer husband of Rebecca Bradley Rogers, on trial for the third time for bank robbery, this time has declined more experienced counsel and has staked he rliberty on his own legal knowledge and that of two college chassmates.

The defense staff which tomorrow will constitute the presentation of allenists, in an effort to prove that Becky was insane when in December, 1926, she robbed the Buda, Texas Farmers National bank—they claim with an empty gun—probably is the youngest ever to try a capital case in Texas. Leo Brewster, 26, of Fort Worth, and J. F. Schleyers, 28, of New Braunfels, friends of Otis and Rebecca when all were students at the University of Texas only a short time ago, sit side by side in the little court room as they try to shield the 24 year old girl from a verdict of guilty which conceivably could bring the death penalty.

Meanwhile Rebecca, slight, sallow and seemingly utterly bored, reclines in her chair with closed eyes or toys with her hat and gloves.

OIL AND BY-PRODUCTS DESTROYED BY FIRE

LINDEN, N. J., Sept. 15—(AP)—Sweeping more than half a mile along the Jersey water front of Staten Island sound late yesterday and last night, fire destroyed hundreds of thousands of gallons of oil and by-products, wiped out a large part of the plant of the Swan-Finch corporation and threatened to engulf the Bayward refinery of the Standard Oil company of New Jersey.

Dr. Merle Meachem, plant manager for the Standard Oil, estimated the damage at more than $1,000,000, most of the loss being suffered by the Swan-Finch firm.

The blaze was caused when an oil laden barge was struck by lightning. The craft drifted in Staten Island sound until mid-afternoon, menacing shipping, and then came up against a dock of the Standard Oil Bayway Refinery in a cove near which the new $1,500,000 saltwater pumping station of the plant is located.

HOME-MADE MONOPLANE CAUSE OF TWO DEATHS

FOSTORIA, Ohio, Sept. 15—(AP)—Two youths died today of injuries received yesterday when a home-made monoplane in which they were flying crashed to the ground. They were Melvic Hawkins, 17, senior at Fostoria high school, and Michael Kimes, 23, an apprentice brick layer.

Harold Hickerson, owner and builder of the plane, was reported near a nervous collapse as a result of the accident. He told police that Hawkins, a student aviator, had promised not to take the newly built plane off the ground, but with Kimes as a passenger had done so. The crash came when the plane slipped while making too steep a bank and struck a tree.

SIX PERSONS WERE KILLED IN PLANE CRASH

As a coroner made plans for an inquest within the next three days, the task of identifying the victims was completed.

STOCK TICKER LATEST 19TH HOLE SUBSTITUTE

NEW YORK — (AP) — The stock market has invaded the golf links, one of the few remaining refuges where a business man can forget about profits and losses.

The stock exchange firm of E. F. Hutton & company established a temporary branch in a tent at the end of the 18-hole course at Pebble Beach, Cal., for the convenience of players and spectators.

The enterprise proved so successful that discussion has started in brokerage circles about the possibility of following up the same idea in other directions.

Recent changes in stock exchange rulings, which permitted the opening of branch brokerage offices aboard ocean liners, simplified the task of keeping traders, no matter where they might be, abreast of transactions on floor of the exchange.

Woman's Body Found With Her Hands Tied

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—(AP)—The body of Mrs. Julia Quintieri, 24, the hands tied, and a strand of heavy twine twisted about her throat, was found today on the living floor of her Bronx apartment today by her five-year-old son Charles.

The boy, too young to realize what happened, dressed and went outside. About an hour later he told a playmate he believed "something had happened" to mother. The playmate notified police.

Detectives believed that the slayer attempted to revive the woman after strangling her with the twine. A bottle of Ammonia, with fingerprints on the label, was found beside the body.

Police recalled that a month ago, Mrs. Quintieri made a complaint that a rejected suitor had gained entrance to her apartment through a fire escape and threatened her life if she did not leave with him.

As evidence of her fear of the man, police said, one window of the woman's bedroom fronting on the fire escape was nailed shut.

Police said the woman's husband was reported to be in Colorado.

At today's meeting the national committee authorized its secretary, Clarence O. Senior, to discuss with socialist-labor parties in Canada, Mexico and Central and South American countries the possibility of co-ordinating socialist and labor activities as they relate to inter-American questions. One of the aims of the discussion will be co-operation in aiding Latin-American countries against what was called "the inroads of American imperialism."

SENSATION PROMISED IN TRIAL OF MRS. PANTAGES

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Sept. 15—(AP)—Drama seemed ready today to usurp the witness stand at the trial here of Mrs. Louis Pantages, wife of the multimillionaire vaudeville magnate. She has been accused in a second degree murder complaint of the death of Juro Rokumoto, Japanese gardener, in an automobile collision, June 16.

The state closed its case last week with a parade of witnesses who testified Rokumoto died from injuries received in the crash. Some of them told the court Mrs. Pantakes was intoxicated when she swerved her car into that driven by the Japanese.

Sensational developments have been promised for tomorrow by the defense, with a list of 20 witnesses summoned to appear. Max Steur, New York criminal lawyer who heads the defense, intimated that among defense witnesses will be physicians who will say the Japanese died from an anaesthetic administered during an operation.

Eleven defense witnesses already have testified Mrs. Pantakes was sober and that an automobile unmentioned in prosecution testimony forced her to the left hand side of the street before Rokumoto's car.

Brother Of Actresses Ar... For Burglary

...Noonan Blames His Pre... ...ament on an Unnamed Hollywood Actor.

NEW YORK, Sept. 15—(AP)— Jack Noonan, a brother of Sally O'Neill and Mollie O'Day motion picture actresses, was arrested today at the request of Sheriff William Traeeger, of Los Angeles, whose telegram said Noonan recently was indicted in Los Angeles on charged of burglary and receiving stolen goods.

The complaint against Noonan was made by Ted Lewis, the orchestra leader, and two indictments were returned against him.

Noonan, who said he was a son of the late Supreme Court Justice Thomas F. Noonan, of New Jersey, denied the charges and blamed his difficulties on an unnamed Hollywood actor and studio attache, who, he said, asked him to keep the property he is charged with stealing and which was found in his room. He said he was told it was too late to take the property back to the studio. Subsequently, Noonan said, he learned that his name had been used in selling other property.

The property he was charged with having stolen consisted of fur coats and costumes, Noonan told police.

The arrest was made at the home of Captain Frank Hay, an aviator, in Hempstead, L. I., where Noonan was traced by detectives who learned that he recently had been discharged from St Mark's hospital.

Not all of the soldiers were overjoyed at being back in England. One Tommy said "Bad Schwalbach is difficult to pronounce but it is a splendid place on a hill overlooking the village. We had a good time there, although I am not fond of German beer."

HAMPTON GIRL WAS SHOT IN FOOT BY HER BROTHER

HAMPTON, Conn., Sept. 15—(AP)—Eight-year-old Lucile Hawkes, of this place, suffered such serious injuries to her left foot today, when her brother, Richard, 14, fired a charge of shot into it, that it was amputated. The child is in a serious condition at St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic.

The two children were alone in the house at the time of the shooting. Young Richard told Village Physician A. D. Marsh that he had taken down from a mantel, a shotgun belonging to his father, Lester Hawkes, and was playing with it. He pointed it toward his sister, who was standing about four feet from him. He pulled the trigger accidentally and the force of the explosion caused the gun to drop, the charge entering the girl's foot and shattering it.

CREW OF 25 WENT DOWN WITH SHIP IN LAKE MICHIGAN

HOLLAND, Mich., Sept. 15—(AP)—Although the wreckage of the freighter Andaste washed up on the shore here tells the story of a vessel pounded to pieces in the storm, why none of her crew of 25 escaped in life boats probably never will be known.

"The men who could tell the traxedy went down with the ship," said U. P. Mulligan, in charge of the federal steamboat inspection service who already has begun an investigation.

Mulligan took issue with the statement yesterday of John Van Ingen U. S. coastguardsman here, and a former member of the Andaste's crew, that the freighter's lifeboat gear was so badly rusted as to preclude their use in an emergency.

"I was one of those who inspected the Andaste April 22 and 23," Mulligan said. "I don't believe the davits would have become rusted since."

7 MEN OF THE GASTONIA MOB HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

They Are Charged With Causing the Death of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, a Striker—The Men Were in an Automobile That Collided With a Truck in Which 21 Textile Workers Were Fleeing From the Mob—They Are Accused of Shooting Mrs. Wiggins.

GASTONIA, N. C., Sept. 15.—(AP)—With the coroner's inquest into the death of Mrs. Ella May Wiggins, striker, victim of an anti-communist mob only partly completed, seven men today were held on bonds of $1,000 each on charges of manslaughter. They were arrested on warrants issued at the request of Solicitor John G. Carpenter.

The inquest started in the Gaston county court house this morning. This afternoon adjournment was taken until next Saturday.

The men arrested were F. T. Morrow, driver of an automobile which collided with a truck in which 21 members of the National Textile Workers union were fleeing from a mob; Theodore Sims, Lowery Davis, and Troy Jones, who were in the car with Morrow; George Lingerfelt, driver of the truck and I. M. Sossoman, master mechanic of the Loray Cotton mill at Gastonia and Will Lunsford, a Loray mill employe.

The warrant charged that the men "did conspire, confederate and agree together to slay and did slay Ella May Wiggins."

They were released on bonds of $1,000 each signed by J. A. Baugh, general manager of the Loray mill of the Manville-Jenckes company.

While the inquest was on it had been planned by relatives of Mrs. Wiggins to hold her funeral from the home of an aunt in the Loray mill village with burial in South Gastonia, but two hours before the time set the body was returned to an undertaking establishment and the funeral postponed until tomorrow.

It was announced that the International labor defense had taken charge and would issue a statement later.

The men arrested today were accused by the solicitor as testimony in the inquest indicated their possible connection with the shooting of Mrs. Wiggins. Witnesses charged that Sossoman and Lunsford came on the scene shortly after Mrs. Wiggins was shot and told the men shooting that they might stop.

Twenty-nine witnesses were heard at today's session of the inquest. Hobart White, 15, whose arm was broken when some member of the mob clubbed him, and Mrs. Mary Goldsmith Jones told their version of the incident. Mrs. Jones was wounded on the lip in some manner. Mrs. Jones said she could not swear that she was shot but was positive she was not hurt in the collision.

G. R. Spencer, superintendent of the American mill at Bessemer City, and occupants of the truck all told Coroner J. F. Wallace and his jury that men armed with pump guns apparently tried to halt the strikers when they were dumped out of the wrecked truck. As the strikers fled Mrs. Wiggins was killed.

Several witnesses declared shots were fired at those who remained in the truck.

The shooting was the result of an attempt by anti-communists to prevent an advertised meeting in South Gastonia by communists and members of the National Textile Workers union which last April called a strike in the Loray mills.

Twenty-five heavily armed deputy sheriffs patrolled the section about the place where the meeting was to be held. The victims of the automobile collision and shooting which occurred between Bessemer City and Gastonia had been turned back at the Loray mill village by a mob and when they started back to their homes were followed by a number of cars.

Superintendent Spencer of the American mills testified that he was passing as the truck ran into the rear of the passenger car. He said he heard a shot as the crash occurred. He stopped his automobile and got out, he testified. As he did so he saw men running across a cotton field. Three or four men, he said, standing near a house identified as "the gamble house" were shooting at the fleeing people with rifles. He saw the dead woman.

Spencer said the people in the truck told him they had been halted in Gastonia after coming from Bessemer City and were returning to Bessemer City after men in automobiles had ordered them to leave. He said that the people told them that as the crash occurred a shot was heard. Mrs. Wiggins screamed: "Oh, Lord, I'm shot." Charlie Shope and Roy Carpenter carried Mrs. Wiggins to a house but she was dead.

As the men from the truck ran away the armed men ordered all they could reach to hold up their hands. Hobart White testified that when he jumped off the truck he was struck with a blackjack and his arm broken. He ran away.

Charlie Shope said the strikers were unarmed.

Morrow testified that he did not hear any shooting and that he did no see any armed men. The men with him, likewise said they were ignorant of the armed men and the shooting, they testified.

George Lingerfelt, driver of the truck testified that when the truck and passenger car collided there "was a fuss that sounded like a gun." He said he was struck by one of the men in the automobile immediately after the accident.

None of the men who met the Bessemer City strikers telling them to leave Gastonia at once, could be identified.

J. Livingston Baumgardner told the coroner's jury that at the time of the crash one of the armed men shouted:

AVIATOR HAD MIRACULOUS ESCAPE FROM DEATH

HARTFORD, Sept. 15—(AP)—Plunging from a height of 700 feet after the motor of his plane stalled above the meadows between Keney cove and the Connecticut river, in Glastonbury, Clifford W. Simon, 32, of Hockanum, today escaped death by what aviators regarded as nothing less than a miracle. Five other aviators, risking their own lives, flew to his aid, landing their ships on the bumpy meadows.

Simon was taken to Brainard field by Albert Burnham in a Curtiss plane a few minutes after the crash, given first aid and then taken to the Hartford hospital. He had a broken nose, one black eye, a cut on the face and a lacerated elbow. His condition is good.

Simon, his rescuers said, owes his life to the safety belt which prisoned him in the cockpit when the plane buried its nose a foot deep in the ground, literally tearing it to pieces. The safety belt, although nearly torn from its fastenings, kept Simon from hurtling out of the plane.

Horace Stapepell, of Hartford, who was fishing in Keney cove at the time of the accident, was the first to arrive at the scene, having witnessed the tail spin which preceded the crash. This is his version.

"I was fishing, but they were not biting very good, so I decided to watch the plane flying above. All of a sudden the ship began to buck and then the motor stopped. The plane was only a little way above the ground. It spun around once or twice and I heard the pilot shout, 'Help, help.' Then there was a terrific crash."

TWO MEN ARRESTED IN BOSTON FOR MURDER

BOSTON, Sept. 15—(AP)—District Attorney William J. Foley, in the early hours today took into the hands of his department the investigation of the slaying of Samuel Rheinstein, alleged New York racketeer, and a short time later two men were locked up charged with murder.

The men under arrest are William F. O'Donnell and Michael Rocco, the latter known to the police and the underworld as "Mickey the Wise Guy." Both were tried and acquitted a year ago on a charge of murdering John J. Donovan, of South Boston, as a result of a gang feud and, more recently, Rocco was questioned by police in the search for the slayer of Frank Marlowe, New York gangster.

Rheinstein was shot to death early yesterday morning in a corridor of the Hotel Huntington as he was returning to his room. A young woman who had been living at the hotel with Rheinstein as his wife since July, but who the police say is Miss Margaret Wheeler of Baltimore, arrived at the scene a few minutes later. She said she had been making purchases at a drug store.

It was discovered that two men who had registered at the hotel under the names of John Russ and Alfred J. Stone, of Providence, R. I., and had asked to be assigned a room next to that occupied by Rheinstein, had apparently fled the hotel. The police charge that O'Donnell and Rocco are the men who occupied the room under the names of Russ and Stone. The young woman was held on a statutory charge.

DANIELSON

NO EXHIBITS OF CUT FLOWERS AT BROOKLYN FAIR

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 15—Cut flowers will be entirely excluded and limitations made as to varieties of vegetables that may be exhibited when the Brooklyn fair is held on September 24, 25 and 26. For this the corn-borer and the quarantine now effective in Windham county is responsible. However, it is not anticipated that the restrictions mentioned will be no more than a minor handicap for the fair, conducted by the oldest agricultural society in the United States.

Many varieties of vegetables are not included in the quarantine list. They will be shown in usual profusion. The cut flowers will be missed for this year, but, after all, they are, but a comparatively, though beautiful, small part of the annual exposition at Brooklyn.

Secretary Marshall J. Frink of the Windham County Agricultural society, sponsors of the Brooklyn fair, said today that after many conferences and consideration of various proposals to get around the fact that the corn-borer has invaded Windham county, as a menace to many growing things—all the conferences with a view not to handicap the fair because of quarantine restrictions—it had been decided to bar all cut flowers and certain vegetables from exhibition, in fairness to all prospective exhibitors. There are 15 towns in Windham county. Eight of them are under corn-borer quarantine; seven of them are not. In justice to residents of all parts of the county, the fair management has decided to make no discrimination between quarantined and non-quarantined towns, and to bar all cut flowers and certain vegetables from exhibition from any part of the county.

A vote passed by the agricultural society provides as follows: In compliance with regulations of the U. S. department of agriculture the Windham County Agricultural society feels compelled to refuse to receive any and all entries for exhibit at the annual fair at Brooklyn, Sept. 24, 25, 26, that are within the following classifications of quarantined products: Any and all cut flowers, either cultivated or wild; corn, celery, beets with tops, broom corn and seed of broom corn, rhubarb, green beans in the pod, all sorghums and Sudam grass.

Secretary Frink said today that the Windham County Agricultural society regrets the restrictive action it has been necessary to take, but the sentiment of the organization is that it should co-operate with federal and state agencies to the fullest in the effort to restrict the spread of the corn-borer, a destroyer of one of Windham county's most bountiful and valuable crops.

Democrats of Killingly had their inning, at the town hall Saturday afternoon, in the effort of selecting candidates for town offices at the annual town meeting on the first Monday in October. That the democracy of Killingly is alive and alert was demonstrated by the number out for the caucus, a matter of more than 250 voters, as against the mere handful that formerly came out for such events, a matter of six or seven years ago.

The forecast that there would be a contest for the nominations for selectmen came true and the prediction that Selectmen Alcott D. Sayles, despite that organized effort to push him off the ticket, would be nominated also was verified. Mr. Sayles won out over A. E. Hall, a former selectman, of East Killingly, by 153 to 111. Louis O. Stone of Attawaugan won the nomination for second selectman on the ticket. The name of John Z. Labelle, who was defeated for a nomination for selectman in the republican caucus last Thursday evening, was not presented to the democratic caucus, as has had been announced would be the case if he were successful in the republican caucus. For member of the board of relief the caucus named Joseph Halle. The caucus reciprocated the action of the republican caucus in endorsing James R. Walsh, democrat and tax collector for several years past, by naming Frank T. Preston, republican, to succeed himself as town clerk, town treasurer and agent of the town deposit fund. Miss Marguerite Dunn was nominated as auditor, James R. Walsh as tax collector and the following for constables: Harry Lathrop, L. O. Stone, Charles Lambert and John Higgins. For registrars the caucus named Mrs. Laura Gorman, A. J. Cavanaugh and James Aldrich. The nominees for places on the town school committee are Mrs. Laura Gorman, Frank Brophy. Former Selectman Patrick Riley of Dayville was chairman of the meeting and A. J. Cavanaugh of Dayville clerk.

Following a solemn high mass of requiem at All Hallows church in Moosup at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, Rev. Harry Chagnon, Rev. Philip L. Maciocia and Rev. J. A. Demers, M. S., the officers of the mass, the body of Joseph Gaudreau, for many years a resident of the West Side, was brought here for burial in Holy Cross cemetery. Rev. Fr. Demers conducted the committal service. The bearers were Fred Champagne, Stanislaw Beauvin, Philias Masse, Elderic Laparke, Arthur Filathreault, L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

Today Miss Hattie Chappell, who apparently is nearing 60 years of age, was being held at Brooklyn jail, and Willis Bennett, about 28, was in custody at the state police barracks here, awaiting arraignment Monday in a justice's court in the town of Canterbury to answer to chicken stealing and to carrying away household goods and farm tools of residents of Canterbury where the pair, who live near French's crossing in the town of Plainfield, are alleged to have been operating the past six months. Miss Chappell is represented as being Bennett's housekeeper. Persons from whom the pair are alleged to have stolen chickens yesterday identified some of the so-called stolen birds, by punctures in the feet webs, at the Bennett place.

George H. Smith of Garden City, N. Y., tearing up steep Hampton hill, ten miles west of here this morning, in his car, crashed into a machine operated by Victor Fontaine of Willimantic and later in a justice's court in Hampton pleaded guilty to failure to grant half the traveled right of way and was fined $10 and costs. The accident was checked up by State Officer James Carmody of the Danielson barracks. The accident happened on the curve near the Jewett home, well up the long hill from its base. No one was injured in the affair, but the cars were considerably damaged.

Bar-pin of white gold and platinum, with diamond, lost Saturday, in business section. Reward. Communicate with The Bulletin, Box, 452, Danielson. —Adv.

At the Westfield Congregational church this morning Rev. Harding W. Gaylord, the pastor, preached on Dynamic Religion.

A few of the men defied conventions and wore their straw hats in Danielson today, notwithstanding that this was the day when straw hats were supposed to be fed to not over-particular cows, shied out in the brush or packed away until May 15 of next year, as one might wish. And yet this was a better day for straw hat wear than several that have gone before, and that's that, like many other things that have come forth in an effort to regulate humanity every time it starts to think or take a step.

It has been said that the corn-borer inspections in the town of Brooklyn, a non-quarantined town, will remain in force until October 12. The inspections are made on the West Side, going into Brooklyn from Danielson, and in Brooklyn Center, near the General Putnam monument, coming into Brooklyn from the south.

Francis McDonald, James Moran and Bernard Casey were in Boston today to attend a baseball game on a big league schedule.

Fraternal organizations, after a long summer recess, have a number of events scheduled to be held here this week.

State Officer Royal Scranton, of the Danielson barracks, has sent cards to his many friends here from the Thousand Islands, where he has been spending part of his vacation.

Mrs. A. J. Tillinghast of Academy street entertained for the week end Miss Ethel Tillinghast and Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Leavitt of Brookline, Mass. and Major C. H. Mapelson, R. A. O. C., of London, England.

Miss Ruth S. Winslow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Earle Winslow of Elmville has entered LaSalle academy, Auburndale, Mass., as a student of music.

A favorite political forecast today—and it may well be wrong—is that when the storm and strife is over Killingly will have exactly the same personnel on its board of selectmen as it has had for the past year. The forecasters may be all wrong, but they are politically wise.

The annual town election comes two weeks from Monday. Meanwhile, numbers of new voters will be made to participate in an election for the first time.

An eccentric who has no control over his nerves and who jumps about and swears with volume was chased away from the business section this morning by Chief John McFarland after the harmless fellow—but strangers do not know it—had frightened some people.

PUTNAM

COUNCIL CALLS FOR BIDS ON WATER SYSTEM WORK

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 15—By unanimous vote of the common council at its adjourned meeting Friday evening, the board of water commissioners was authorized to call for bids on projects set forth in a previously authorized bill relative to the reconstruction of the city water system. All contractors who are intending to submit estimates on the work must have their bids in the hands of the water commission on Sept. 23 so that they may be opened and read at a special meeting of the common council on Sept. 24. Tuesday evening's meeting will doubtlessly in deal full with the water situation. The present plan of the council is to erect a steel storage tank of one million capacity, besides the re-newing of several of the water mains. It is the aim of the council to get the work under way before the arrival of winter weather. Alderman John M. Dean, who is a member of the special water committee of the council, is attempting to speed the technical work of the project so that the water department may lay the foundation of the tank at once. Since the water retainer is to be constructed of steel adverse weather conditions will be immaterial to the remainder of the work.

Alderman E. J. Migneault, chairman of the city highway committee reported to the council Friday evening that the city, should it desire, could dispose of a sprinkling wagon, a discarded piece of highway apparatus in the possession of the street department. The committeeman stated that the Woodstock agricultural society seeks to purchase it from the city. Migneault was empowered to negotiate with the fair society to sell the property.

The highway committee chairman in a report to the council advocated the purchase of a gravel bank, mentioning such an acquisition as an act of economy on the part of the city. In the past four or five years the city has expended several hundred dollars for sand and gravel used in connection with the repairs of the highways. Mr. Migneault intimated that the city at the present can secure an ideally located bank, containing a vast amount of earthern products at a price of $1200. He said that the bank also contains four building lots that may be sold at a profitable figure when the sand and gravel supply becomes exhausted. Mayor Charles A. Richard spoke in favor of the move deeming it advisable. By a vote of the board Mr. Migneault was authorized to draw from the city treasurer a draft for $25 to be used in securing an option on the site which is located on Main street at the intersection of May street.

Several applications for building permits were granted, included among the number of applications was one signed by Charles A. Seder who petitioned the council for permission to erect a one story brick addition to his block on Main street. The new structure will be built on the site the rear of the store occupied by the W. T. Grant company.

Sergt. George H. Liard of the local police, while patrolling in the north end of the city last evening was attracted to the Church street section to investigate causes for the firing of a round of pistol shots. Sergt. Liard made a search in the vicinity of the Perkins—Strongman corporation where the reports were heard but found no trespassers.

As the summer season wanes, the work of the quarantine officers of the United States department of agriculture, seeking to control the spread of the ravenous European corn borer, nears its date of termination. Upon the arrival of the cold weather, the inspection stations in this section which have been in operation the greater part of the summer will be closed. A report from an official disclosed that the work of the inspectors assigned to duty at stations on the Pomfret Putnam and Woodstock and Pomfret roads has been successful and efficient. Much of the infested garden produce has been seized and destroyed. Every vehicle passing out of the infected area has been subjected to inspection and the hearty cooperation of the populace in this crusade is set forth by the fact that no arrests for violation of the quarantine have taken place.

"Miss Putnam" a stunning young lady of horsedom, daughter of one of the city highway department's recently acquired horses, and ward of the common council, lost an opportunity to clinch a first prize for her fine qualities of horseflesh at Woodstock fair last week all because of the forgetfulness of the city street commission. This was acknowledged by Chairman Migneault at a meeting of the council Friday evening. Mr. Migneault and Supt. of Streets Dumas are quite dismayed since their candid belief is that Lady Putnam would have returned to her pasture, a winner. The colt was born a few months after the city had purchased the pair of horses. During the summer months she has been pastured with her mother and has developed wonderfully.

According to a report from the Day Kimball hospital today Henry Tourtellotte injured a week ago in an automobile accident in Pomfret is making satisfactory recovery. Tourtellotte sustained a fracture of the skull and lacerations of the body.

An interesting item was observed in the telegraph dispatches of the Associated Press today appearing under a date line from Waukegan, Ill., and mentioned that the Stenzak brothers—nine of them, had banded together and organized a family baseball nine. Incidentally the Stenzaks have issued a challenge to the only other baseball team of its kind in the United States —The Marlett brothers of Hawk Spring, Wyoming. The Illinois and Wyomming communities rightfully are not the only cities in the United States which can boast of a ball team entirely composed of brothers since Putnam, too, lays a claim to such an honor offering the Gagne Brothers nine. Of course the trend of times has extracted a bit of the one time pep and stamina from the Gagne brothers team—but nevertheless the organization remains intact and gives evidence of the fact that the Stenzaks and the Marletts are not the sole claimants to this athletic distinction.

During the height of a heavy downpour of rain a giant tri-motored Ford airplane of the Colonial air transport company's lines passed over this city flying at an unusually low altitude. The ship's three motors were roaring as it pierced the rain sheets on its way to its port in Boston. The plane took an easterly course over this city and from all appearences headed for Providence to make a forced landing. The plane was so low that it was possible to see passengers peering through the windows.

In letters to friends here Private Henry Bugbee of this city, a member of the United States Marine crops, stationed at Cape Haitien, republic of Haiti will not be transferred to a home station this month. Private Bugbee and others in the service who have completed tours of foreign service are being held in readiness to check native uprisings.

When the world's greatest aggregation of football players assembled at the Cycledrome field at Providence yesterday to form a new Steam Roller grid-iron eleven for the coming season, two Windham county, young men were numbered among the foremost. Namely-John H. "Jack" Cronin of this city and Arthur V. "Pop" Williams of Danielson. Both Williams and Cronin were mainstays for the Rollers in the majority of last season's contests and a sportswriter of a Providence paper after viewing the preformance of the two local boys commented today," Jack Cronin appeared in particularly good condition and his punts carried great height as well as long distance. 'Pop' Williams showed no effects of the injuries that kept him on the sidelines the greater part of the past season. He dashed about as actively as any of the players." Both Williams and Cornin are backfield stars of the champion professional teams.

Several members of the Putnam lodge of Elks, comprising the faternal golf team journeyed to Willimantic today, where the first round the championship match between the Putnam—Willimantic and Webster lodges will be played.

A telephone pole set in a direct line with the dangerous intersection at the corner of Grove street and Killingly avenue—known as cemetery curve—was moved from its position again Thursday when struck by a car which passed from control of the driver. This pole on numerous occasions has been the target of careless drivers.

The board of selectmen as yet have received no word from the state highway department purporting to show when work will be started on the state aid highway to be constructed in a northerly direction over Putnam heights. The building of this throughfare was voted at a meeting of the town early this year.

The monthly clinic of Dr. Hugh B. Campbell of Norwich, slated to take place at the Day Kimball hospital this month has been cancelled, according to a hospital announcement made yesterday.

Water street from the intersection of Bullock street is partially closed to traffic, while the water department is engaged in the installation of new pipes.

Chief of Police Merral Kieth of Northbridge Mass., spent a few days last week visiting with friends in this city and in Eastford. Chief Kieth was formerly a member of the personnel at the state police barracks at Danielson.

A stock of corn well over 10 feet in height is on display at a hardware store in the business section. The garden product was raised by J. H. Geeson a local farmer living on Grove street. The stock is an excellent specimen and bears four healthy ears of corn.

DRIVER DOING A GOOD TURN HAS UNPLEASANT MISHAP

Arthur Maynard started for Pachaug fair Saturday evening and overtook three boys walking in the same direction. He gave them a ride in his truck as they were going to the fair also. Driving down the hill near Goldstein's corner, another machine drove around the curve traveling up the hill and ran into Maynard's machine turning him partly around, and then ran into a tree, as a finish. One of the boys, Stanley Hiastava, had a cut foot, and was sent by Dr. G. H. Jennings to Backus hospital, Norwich, for treatment. The two drivers settled the trouble between themselves.

TWENTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL PRESENTATION

NEW CADILLACS
NEW LA SALLES
NEW FLEETWOODS

A greater line of more than 50 magnificent new types and models

A Lower and Wider Price Range on All Body Styles

New Designs—Lower Racier Lines—Greater Seating Capacity—Larger Engines—More Power and Speed—Richer Finer Fisher and Fleetwood Bodies—Non-Shatterable Security-Plate Glass Standard Equipment in All Windows, Doors and Windshields—Syncro-Mesh Silent-Shift Transmission—Safety-Mechanical Four-Wheel Brakes—New Harmonized Steering System—New Recessed Instrument Panel—Every Essential Engineering and Mechanical Feature Refined Beyond all Previous Cadillac Standards

With the advent of these three superb lines of new Cadillacs, La Salles and Fleetwoods, in a lower and wider price range, the doors automatically open to admit thousands of new owners to the Cadillac family.

The market has never known cars as highly perfected or as complete in every major and minor detail. So, too, on a price comparison basis, the market has never offered so large a measure of in-built worth.

So sharp and striking is the advantage in favor of Cadillac, La Salle and Fleetwood in the performance, appearance and price alignment of this greatest of all Cadillac programs, that it amounts to the creation of a new Cadillac business and a new and vastly greater Cadillac public.

Cadillac, the world's quality standard, becomes also the price and value standard of the world by which all other car values must come to be judged.

Expressed in the fewest possible words with a full sense of their weight and importance, Cadillac promises in these three groups the greatest chassis value, the greatest body value, and the greatest gross and net monetary value known to the motor industry of the world today.

The first promise of greater chassis value can quickly be demonstrated by description, examination and part-and-quality comparison with the world's costliest cars.

It can be proved likewise by performance demonstration—revealing measures of power, speed and acceleration, transmission ease, braking certainty and riding luxury which even Cadillac-La Salle-Fleetwood have not attained before.

The second promise will reveal itself at a glance in Fisher and Fleetwood bodies so rich and beautiful that the average body appears almost tawdry by comparison.

The third promise can be verified by studying the very best that the market offers in chassis, performance and appearance and noting how far beyond this other best the Cadillacs, La Salles and Fleetwoods go in all respects.

A summing up of this comparison can have only one result—proof positive of the statement printed above and reprinted here for emphasis:

Cadillac, the world's quality standard, has become also the price and value standard of the world by which all other motor-car values must come to be judged.

Not in any one thing but in all things—in speed plus acceleration plus power plus economy plus appearance plus non-shatterable Security-Plate Glass plus Syncro-Mesh Silent-Shift Transmission plus Safety-Mechanical Four-Wheel Brakes—so unmistakably the greatest monetary value of the industry that no buyer need call upon a salesman to point it out for him.

. . . Consider the delivered price as well as the list price when comparing automobile values. Cadillac-La Salle delivered prices include only reasonable charges for delivery and financing. 836

TONIGHT'S CAUCUS

From all indications there promises to be no contests at the Republican caucus for the nomination of town officials tonight. That doesn't mean that there should be a slim attendance and that the work of the evening should be left to a corporal's guard.

The selection of a party ticket for any election is always an important duty and there should be a large gathering of the party members in order to give a representative expression and also to indicate the interest that prevails in rewarding faithful service.

During the past two years Norwich has continued to experience a careful administration of town affairs, the kind of government that it is desirous of retaining, and the preliminary to actually voting for such continuance lies in the endorsement of such government by renominating those responsible. That is one of the duties before the Republicans of Norwich tonight.

Selectmen Murray and Bushnell are not novices in the office. They have directed town business for a number of years and in a manner that has won commendation from townsmen regardless of party. Sound business policies are followed and the town has been the gainer. A continuation of those policies is needed and that can be expected by renominating and reelecting them. The Republicans can give no better evidence of their appreciation of the capable administration that by making them head the ticket for this fall's election.

At the post of town clerk, Harold S. Burt has proved himself an efficient successor to the late Charles S. Holbrook. Obliging, courteous, accurate and capable, he has justified in every way his appointment to the office and through his good record there he has shown the advisability of being nominated to succeed himself. The best interests of the town call for his retention in that office.

On the board of assessors Fred H. Prothero has served faithfully for a number of years. He has been trained in the work, he is familiar with it, knows it in all its details and has had that experience which should be retained.

These with other renominations are to be expected tonight and the party members should welcome the opportunity to participate in it. There is no better time to start a campaign off enthusiastically than at the caucus. Good service can be the cause of enthusiasm quite as much as a contest.

FARM BOARD QUALIFICATION

Although there has been an insistent demand for the past several years for farm relief, those who have been doing the most shouting in that direction have placed the greatest obstacles in the way of getting it. They have demanded farm relief of such a character that it could not be obtained. It was dangerous and yet their insistence upon it and nothing else has prevented a rational farm relief from being in operation for a year or more.

The Coolidge administration was committed to farm relief but not to the absurd equalization fee. The demand for that provision was the rock upon which farm relief struck and where it continued to remain while those in need of the farm legislation continued to wait. There was even a demand for the inclusion of the debenture plan in the farm bill adopted by the special session of congress. The fallacy of it is not even now admitted by some and it is these who are still engaged in doing what they can to interrupt the service which the already named but not confirmed farm board can render to agriculture.

This is shown in the plan of the senate agriculture committee to probe the men named to the farm board to determine if they are qualified to serve. These men have been picked because of their fitness and because they have been endorsed by farm organizations. Experience and successful administrators in their particularly branch of agriculture they have been given the task of directing farm relief for the country. But they must first pass inspection by the senatorial committee because such senators as Brookhart and Nye want to know why the board hasn't done more for wheat or what policies are going to be followed.

Here we find the approval of the committee, waiting to get into its work, held up not over a matter of qualifications but because the committee on agriculture wants to direct the policies under which the board shall operate instead of letting it be guided by the act under which it was appointed and the conditions to be relieved.

The board has set forth certain of its policies in the preliminary work that it has done and before the senate has acted on confirmation, but it will certainly get no where if it must be tied to the apron string of the senate agricultural committee which is not willing to confine itself to scrutinizing the qualifications of the experts but on confirmation with a vengeance.

THE PREMIER'S VISIT

Such doubt as may have existed over the forthcoming visit of Premier MacDonald of Great Britain has disappeared with the definite fixing of the date. He should reach here early in October, and it will be a visit of unusual importance, both because of his office and because of the mission on which he comes.

Prime Minister MacDonald's trip should mean the final touch on the negotiations which have been progressing between the United States and Great Britain for a number of weeks relative to the naval problem of the two countries. Through Ambassador Dawes the views of President Hoover have been carefully presented and there has been set forth the desirability of having the two countries come to an understanding regarding other classes of naval construction aside from battleships that there may be accomplished a limitation of the auxiliaries quite the same as of capital ships. With these countries in agreement the hope is that the same agreement can be reached with other leading nations.

From the time the suggestion was made that these two countries get together in this respect there has been a wholehearted spirit of cooperation displayed by Premier MacDonald. The object has gotten endorsement in general terms although there has been some difficulty in working out a plan whereby the different requirements of the nations would be met, even though the number of vessels might differ. It has been clearly set forth on other occasions that the British had need for a certain type of cruiser which this country does not and it has become apparent that some other basis than the actual number of ships must govern the decision.

Both President Hoover and Premier MacDonald have received strong backing in their respective countries for the effort they are making. It is recognized that the aim is a desirable one and a better understanding of the naval policies of each other is going to eliminate much suspicion and much expense. The negotiations have been carried to the point where it appears there is little chance that they will fall through. That is quite plainly to be inferred from the premier's decision to start his trip to this country in accordance with earlier plans. With the preliminaries so well advanced and so capably handled, the meeting of the heads of two governments should quickly accomplish the completion of the much desired understanding and establish an exemplary plan of international negotiations in the handling of long standing problems.

THE JOB IN PORTO RICO

Among the appointments which have been confirmed by the senate is that of Theodore Roosevelt to be governor of Porto Rico. This is an appointment which provides an opportunity for some real service. It is not just an office to fill and we do not believe that it will be so interpreted by the son of the former president.

Porto Rico is part of the territory that came to this country following the Spanish-American war. It has a population of about a million and a half and is an island where much sugar and coffee are produced. Since the United States took possession of it large benefits have accrued to the people, but regardless of all that has been done there is still need for much improvement. Social and economic conditions are far from being what they should be and to add to the situation the island received a blow from the destructive cyclone that will set it back several years.

While it would be possible to set forth much that has been done in the way of sanitation and education the conditions are far from ideal. Reports dealing with the island recently refer to the general poverty of the people, general debility engendered by other diseases, ignorance of the rules of hygiene, lack of sanitary appliances, few hospitals, and those poorly sustained, and these conditions which have bred and spread disease throughout the island have created the inevitable results.

Porto Rico is in need of much the same strenuous house cleaning that other republics have received. Though more than a start has been made the conditions indicate that much remains to be done and that it will require a considerable period unless different methods are applied. There is need for Porto Rico to awaken to the importance of its own efforts. Its means are naturally limited but it should put its funds to the best use for the greatest number, set up and carry out a definite policy and not be satisfied until it gets better conditions within.

Perhaps its appeal through certain circles for statehood or independence is their answer to the problem there but rather does it indicate a political activity which may in some way be responsible for the lack of greater progress.

Going to Porto Rico as its governor these are some of the conditions to be faced by Theodore Roosevelt, and there can be no question but what he recognizes the responsibilities that go with the appointment, responsibilities to his country and to the Porto Ricans who are part of it.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

Sea food contains valuable iodine.

Canned salmon prepared like codfish cakes is very good.

Whites of eggs will keep for some time if put in the refrigerator.

Dried fruits are nice added to hot breads.

A finely-chopped onion improves tartare sauce.

Tint mayonnaise green to serve with cucumber salad.

Unsalted fat should be used for cooking pans.

Lemon juice well rubbed into the bread board will absorb all grease and dirt and whiten the wood beautifully.

To make a table top heat-proof remove the old finish. Rub one-third turpentine and two-thirds linseed oil into the wood. Rub dry.

If you are troubled with ants coming into the house put the skin of a cucumber where they are found and they will soon disappear.

Diced carrots and beets served with string beans, potato salad and cold ham make a delicious hot-weather luncheon.

Three-quarters of a teaspoon of sugar mixed with one-quarter teaspoon of cocoa sprinkled over buttered toast is equally as good as cinnamon toast.

A good sandwich spread for children is made from dried fruit. Soak the fruit overnight, cook it until soft, press through a colander, add sugar and cook until thick.

Do not boil cabbage too long. Too long boiling makes it indigestible. Cut it in strips, drop them into salted boiling water and boil 10 to 15 minutes.

When filling salt and pepper shakers, cut off the tip of one corner of an ordinary envelope and use the rest as a funnel, with that corner as the hole.

THESE GO TOGETHER

Cold tongue, baked spinach, watercress sandwiches, cucumber and onion salad, lemon ice and cake.

Liver saute, mashed potatoes, creamed Brussels sprouts, rhubarb salad and fruit gelatin.

SAUCEPAN

It is a good habit to get into to rinse out the saucepan before using, even if you did put it away absolutely clean. An occasional mouse or bug may have passed its way since you washed it, and a rinse-out in hot water takes but a minute and will do away with any feeling of contamination.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Do not nag the patient. Asking every few minutes how he feels or what he would like and what you can do for him is nagging and more or less distressing to a sick person.

Never let a very delicate garment get badly soiled before washing. If you clean or launder it while it is still only slightly dirty, you will find the delicate tints are retained perfectly.

The care of the housewife's hands is hard in summer with fresh fruit and vegetable stains a daily occurrence. Keep ammonia and a lemon in the sink. Add ammonia to the water you wash your hands in. Rub the worst stains with lemon.

EXERCISES FOR ACHING FEET

Sit on a straight-backed chair, then cross the right knee over the left and, permitting the right leg to dangle, rotate the ankle ten times to the right, then ten times to the left. Reverse, placing the left knee over the right and repeat.

Now stand erect, with the heels about four inches apart and the toes pointing straight ahead. Rise slowly to the toes, then walk around the room on the toes for 100 steps.

Still standing erect and with the heels four inches apart and the toes pointing straight ahead, rise to the toes and rotate the ankles, turning the heels out as they are lowered so that the outside of the foot touches the floor on the downward movement. Repeat twenty times, rotating very rapidly, so that continuous motion is preserved.

Now take a sitting position on the floor, with the legs stretched straight out in front of the body. Keeping the heels on the floor, stretch the toes outward as far as possible, then, still keeping the heels on the floor, pull the toes back toward the shins as far as possible. Repeat twenty times.

RUG SAVINGS

If you turn your rugs around once or twice a year so that all parts of it get even wear, you will find it lengthens the rugs' life tremendously and there are no worn spots.

BOILED RICE

A cup of boiled rice added to the meat loaf will make it moist, add in amount and make it interesting. It is a fine way to increase the size of the loaf should unexpected company arrive.

TEA FOR PLANTS

Cold tea is excellent for plants, especially ferns. A spoonful of tea added to the water in the vase will make cut flowers last much longer.

FUR

When renovating fur at home and finding it must be cut, place it fur-side down and cut the skin with a safety-razor blade. This will not cut the fur as will shears. A line may be drawn on the skin which may be followed by the razor blade.

SILVER AND JADE

These exquisite pieces of silverware are the product of modern craftsmen and they have a rare beauty that ranks them equally with the finest exponents of the art of ancient silversmiths. There are flat dishes, bowls and serving spoons of marvelously wrought silver, inlaid with pieces of carved jade or lapis. Nothing like them has been seen before.

GREEN CIRCLES

A litle black satin cloche has half-inch wide circles of about two-inch diameter in eight shades of green velvet arranged from ear to ear across the top, with the tones graduated, the darkest on the left ear and the others lapping over each other slightly until the lightest covers the right ear.

WHITE WITH COLOR

Whether or not the success of white for evening would carry over into the new mode is a question which is now definitely settled. The pure whites and off-whites will be much seen but not so much alone as in contrast with one of the new "shrill" colors.

LAUNDRY HINTS

Silk handkerchiefs must be washed as carefully as any other silk or they will turn yellow.

When you buy new clothespins soak them in cold water for half an hour before using. They will not then split.

A few drops of turpentine in the water when washing white silk stockings will keep them from turning yellow.

After using gasoline for cleaning purposes, filter it through a chamois skin and all dirt will be removed. The gasoline can then be used again.

Do not wash art muslin curtains in warm water. Make a lather with hot water and when it is nearly cold wash the curtains. If the muslin is green add a little vinegar to the water in which they are washed; if lilac or pink add a little ammonia.

ABSORBENTS FOR CLEANING

The absorbents really are the simplest cleaning agents and they are the safest. Those most commonly used are French chalk, magnesium, carbonate, talcum, starch, fuller's earth, cornmeal, sawdust and blotting paper. They are effectual in removing grease spots, blood and ink stains and any freshly spilled liquid. In fact, they do not always prove satisfactory, but all stains that are light and freshly made will yield to absorbents, and these are harmless to all fibers.

When using white blotting paper, or unglazed paper, lay the fabric on this and cover with the same paper or with a powder, and apply a warm iron; repeat, using fresh paper or powder as often as necessary.

SUMMER CURTAINS

The material called Argentine cloth as first intended for bags to hold dresses, and protect them from the summer dust, but the fabric offers such enchanting possibilities that many women are using it for curtains. It comes in lovely colors and has a transparency and glaze that gives it a quality in keeping with the modern decorative scheme.

LATE BLOOMS

The best way to keep plants blooming is to pick the flowers the minute they are opened. A geranium bed can be kept blooming indefinitely, if the blooms are never allowed to stay on until they fade.

EXTENDS THE BUTTER

You can make the butter go further if you bring half a cupful of milk to a boil and let it cool. When lukewarm add a quarter-pound of butter and beat with egg beater until mixture is thick and creamy and place in refrigerator to harden.

FOR JAM MAKERS

When making jams do not have the kettle more than two-third full, otherwise there will be no room for the jam to boil as it should.

CONCERNING WOMEN

A great memorial for the mothers of the world is to be erected in Washington, D. C., to cost between $4,000,000 and $5,000,000.

Women in Cuba enjoy a unique law in their favor. Female clerks are required in shops handling women's apparel, perfume and other accessories.

The mayor of Montgomery, La., is Mrs. Lula Wardlaw. In addition to her duties as chief executive, she is a Methodist minister and runs a truck farm.

Princesses in England keep their wedding veils after marriage, for there is an old superstition in the royal family that it is unlucky for a member of it to lose her bridal veil.

Writing 75 words a minute for 15 minutes without an error is a new typewriting record recently established by Miss Marie F. Slattery, a stenographer in a broker's office in Cincinnati, O.

FLOORS

Do not use hot water on varnished floors. Use a cloth wrung out in lukewarm water. Each section should be rubbed with a dry cloth as it is washed.

WAFFLE IRON

Once a month clean your electric waffle iron with a thick paste made of three tablespoons baking soda and two teaspoons water, using a stiff brush.

DICTATES OF FASHION

A biege flat crepe frock, with circular peplum and a longer skirt made full by godets, has a charming matching lace plastron.

New necklaces are made of many strands of fine beads in gay Spanish colors, as a gesture to the Spanish exposition this summer.

A garnet-colored tulle frock has double ruchings of its material outlining the rounded neck, spiraling up the sleeves and heading the flounce.

Pastel tinted damask in exquisite moired patterns is a lovely choice for summer. It makes a lovely background for the colorful china and glassware that are so generally used.

A sage green flat crepe frock for afternoon side-steps the longer skirt problem by having both of its sides made with flopping panels that swing from the hips to almost ankle length.

France uses wood now for decorative inlay in leather purses for autumn. Patou has a purse and necklace using seven kinds of wood.

One of the loveliest of the new coats has been designed unquestionably for the woman of a certain age. It is slim and sophisticated and gracious in every line. Of grey cloth, it has an elbow-length cape bordered with black fox.

Whether women welcome them or not, the shoulder-length glove is being worn in Paris right now to all formal affairs. Black suede is worn instead of off-white, with black gowns. One usually wears suede instead of kid now.

Some medium-sized hats for fall have slashed brims, bits of lace inserted in their crowns, flowers massed under the uplifted brims and in other ways point to elaborate trimmings for hats for formal wear.

BROWN AND GREEN

In contrast to the light greens of summer worn with yellow, white and the like, is the deeper shade suitable for fall. It is decidedly interesting for an ensemble trimmed with brown fur and further complemented by a brown hat, bag and shoes. The darker the green, the darker the brown for real chic.

RECIPES

Peaches With Filling: Bake some pastry over an inverted pie plate. Cool, then arrange in it 12 halves of fresh stewed peaches or six fresh sliced peaches. Cover with cold boiled custard and decorate with whipped cream. To make the custard, mix seven-eighths cup of sugar with one-third cup flour and one-fourth teaspoon of salt. Stir in two beaten eggs and then one pint of scalded milk. Cook over hot water until thick and smooth. Remove from the fire, cool and add one teaspoon of vanilla.

Peach Tart: One cup flour, two tablespoons shortening, one-fourth teaspoon salt, soft peaches, one-half cup sugar. Sift the flour and salt into bowl, add the shortening and rub in very lightly with the tips of the fingers, add just enough cold water to hold together; roll out on floured board and line pie plate. Sprinkle the dough with a tablespoon of flour, then cover with the peaches, which have been pared, and the stones removed, placing them stone side up. Sprinkle with the sugar and dot with a little butter. Put in moderate oven and bake 30 minutes or until the peaches are done.

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 15 — The idea that Al Smith might come to the senate vice Senator Copeland has a charm all its own for the Bystander.

Way back in American history is a precedent for a former president later becoming a member of the house. But never, so far as the Bystander knows, has a defeated presidential nominee reappeared in either house after that defeat.

The aftermath of the Hoover-Smith campaign has not as yet begun to figure seriously in senate and house debates. It is certain to do so as the by-elections approach.

Imagine the zest that would be given senate treatment of the subject if Al Smith in person were there to listen and to participate in the give and take of political debate.

The Bystander cannot help feeling that the senate in such circumstances would become more than ever the hub of the national political wheel.

Logical

The proposal of Smith supporters in his own state that Senator Copeland resign and become chairman of the new sanitary commission of New York city certainly has a lot of logical background.

Copeland began his public service in that city by being "commandeered," as his official biography puts it, to be health commissioner during the World war. Before that, however, Dr. Copeland had been mayor and had filled other political-administrative jobs in Ann Arbor, Mich.

The political aspect of the Smith-Copeland deal is not quite so clear. Dr. Copeland could not be blamed if he entertained a presidential bee in his own bonnet after the smashing victory he achieved last November in his re-election to the senate.

He has just a little short of six years still to go as senator. Quite obviously, if he resigned now for the more lucrative post said to have been tendered him by Mayor Walker, it would mean virtually putting behind him whatever presidential or vice-presidential dreams he might have, and that in order to keep Smith in the national public eye at least until next presidential election time.

As the story goes, however, no thought of asking him to step aside in favor of Smith has figured in the proposals for getting the former governor into the senate. That would be asking a good deal of Wagner, who consented to retire from the state supreme bench and run for the senate against Jimmie Wadsworth only on personal appeal of Governor Smith.

Old Friends

There is an old friendship between Smith and Wadsworth, political gossips say, and in 1919 a suspicion that the governor might be lending at least tacit support to the Wadsworth senatorial campaign threatened Smith's own hope of succeeding himself at Albany.

It was then he drafted Wagner to run. Governor Smith hardly could ask his closest friend to run against Wadsworth, a republican, if there were any sort of Smith-Wadsworth deal of friendship or otherwise.

So the Smith-for-senator move hung entirely on Dr. Copeland's attitude, assuming that Governor Roosevelt is ready in the event of a vacancy to name to that body the man he three times nominated for democratic standard bearer.

YOUR HEALTH

The Why of Frequent Dental Examination

By O. J. ORY, D. D. S.
Garyville, La.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

If the people in general would realize just how very important good, sound teeth are to their health, they would never neglect to make regular visits to their dentist for a complete a thorough examination, I might say here that every six months is not too often to have the teeth examined.

It is a grave mistake to delay visiting the dentist until one is forced to go on account of toothache, because then in the great majority of cases, it is too late to do the best that is possible to be done for the patient.

A tooth should be filled as soon as possible after the beginning of decay, so as to insure its usefulness with the smallest filling. It stands to reason that a tooth with a large filling or inlay will not stand the same crushing strength as one with a small filling.

It is a common occurence to see a tooth with a large filling or inlay split in half under ordinary mastication, whereas if the same tooth had been filled before decay had progressed so much, it is more than likely that it would not have broken in half during mastication. Again, the sooner a tooth is filled after it has started to decay, the smaller the filling will be and of course will cost less, hurt less and not be so conspicuous in the patient's mouth; and will not require so much time to be done.

Of course, the greatest advantage in filling a cavity in a tooth as soon after the discovery of decay, is the fact that the work can be done without devitalizing the pulp or nerve as it is commonly referred to. It is generally known that many teeth that have been devitalized, later develop what is known as focal infection at the root ends, and such a focus is a very grave menace to one's health. The fact that a tooth feels comfortable in one's mouth does not mean that it is free from focal infection, and can be retained without causing considerable harm to that person.

When one will consider for just a moment that the same blood that circulates all through the body, also touches at the ends of the teeth, and thereby can pick up germs from those teeth with focal infection and carry same to the heart and settle on the valves of that very important organ and cause it to function badly; or that infection can settle in the joints and cause arthritis.

It might be well to mention at this point that a single tooth with a little pus at the end of the root can cause that person to suffer with rheumatism and other ailments.

Dr. Charles Mayo maintains that 87 per cent of all deaths and sickness are caused by acute or chronic infection, many of which have their origin in the mouth.

Focal infection from "dead" teeth is discussed here to impress readers how much it is to their advantage to have their teeth examined regularly and frequently.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Flip Meets Joe Otter

Meet many folk of many minds,
And pick up facts of many kinds.
—Old Mother Nature.

Flip sat on the bank of the Smiling Pool and stared down into the water. A brown head was moving swiftly toward him. It was a round head, rather broad and flat. It was moving swiftly through the water. Billy Mink was already swimming out to the Big Rock. It was evident that Billy had at least respect for this newcomer. Bowser the Hound grinned.

"Hello, Little Joe Otter!" said he.

"Hello, yourself, Bowser!" replied Little Joe. "Would you like a fight this morning?"

"Not with you, Little Joe, not with you," replied Bowser.

Little Joe grinned in his turn. Then he climbed up the bank a short distance away. Flip saw that he had a very long body, just as Billy Mink had; that his legs were short and that his tail was quite long and tapering.

"Hello, Little Joe Otter," said he.

He was so big that he made Billy Mink look small. Flip guessed rightly that Little Joe weighed more than he did. Flip was no coward, but something inside him told him that he would be no match for this sleek, brown little fellow who seemed so sure of himself.

"Who is your friend?" inquired Little Joe of Bowser.

"His name is Flip," replied Bowser. "He is living with me up at Farmer Brown's house. I brought him down here to get acquainted with some of you folks. You see, I didn't want him to make a mistake."

"Meaning what?" asked Little Joe.

"Well," replied Bowser, "he is a game little fellow and he likes to hunt others. Not knowing much about the country, he might make the mistake of hunting the wrong people. For instance, he tried to catch Jerry Muskrat in the water. And you know just how much chance he would have of doing that. And he has learned that trying to catch Billy Mink is just a waste of time. Flip is quick, but Billy is quicker. Now you have come along just in time. I don't think Flip will ever make the mistake of hunting you, Little Joe."

Flip felt rather uncomfortable, but he managed to grin. "I'm very pleased to make your acquaintance, Little Joe Otter," said he. "Do you spend all your time in the water?"

"Goodness, no!" replied Little Joe. "I ame in the water a lot, of course, because I am perfectly at home there, but I'm out of water a great deal, too. You see, I'm something of a traveler. Sometimes I make quite long journeys on land, crossing from one brook to another, or from one pond to another."

"I should think that would be hard work," said Flip.

"Why?" asked Little Joe.

"Because your legs are so short," replied Flip.

"Oh, I manage to get along," replied Little Joe carelessly. "They may be short, but they are stout. So you think Billy Mink must be the greatest swimmer in the world? Billy is pretty good, but, as I said a few minutes ago, there are others."

"He'll have a chance by and by. He'll have a chance," replied Little Joe.

Meanwhile Billy Mink sat on the Big Rock scowling. He isn't over fond of this big cousin of his. He never feels comfortable when Little Joe Otter is around.

You have a Doctor's Word for this Laxative

IN 1875, an earnest young man began to practice medicine. As a family doctor, he treated many cases of constipation. He soon saw the harm in common purges and began to seek something better. Out of his experience was born a famous prescription now in wide use.

This prescription was written thousands of times. It proved an ideal laxative for old and young. Children like its pleasant taste. Older people like it because it doesn't gripe or cause discomfort. It is a mixture of fresh herbs and other pure ingredients; thoroughly effective for the most robust of men. Stimulates the normal muscular action of the bowels. So its use will not become a habit. As people saw how marvelously the most sluggish bowels are started and bad breath, headaches, biliousness, feverishness, or no energy, poor appetite, etc., are relieved by Dr. Caldwell's prescription, it became necessary to put it up ready for use.

Today, Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, is the world's most popular laxative. All drug stores have the generous bottles. The product never varies from Dr. Caldwell's original formula. So you can take it with confidence or give it to the youngest child.

"WORTH WEIGHT IN GOLD"

Verdict of Woman Who Tried Pinkham's Compound

Tully, N. Y.—"It hurt me to walk or sit down without help and I felt sick and weak. My mother-in-law took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she induced me to take it. I am now on the fourth bottle and have also used Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash. The medicines that will do for me what the Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash have done are certainly worth their weight in gold. I think I have given them a fair trial and I expect to take two more bottles of the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. CHARLES MORGAN, R. F. D. 1, Tully, N. Y.

PILOT HURT WHEN PLANE MAKES FORCED LANDING AT PRESTON CITY

While making a forced landing in a field at Preston City about 10 o'clock Saturday morning, Pilot Carl Mitchell of No. 33 Central avenue, New York city, was injured when his plane tipped over. He was piloting a brand new gypsy moth D. H. plane from the Moth Aircraft factory at Lowell, Mass., to Roosevelt Field, N. Y.

When trouble developed Mitchell tried to land in a field owned by A. E. Shedd and narrowly missed hitting the roof of the house on the Turner property nearby. Soft dirt on the field caused the plane to upset.

Mitchell was brought to the W. W. Backus hospital by J. Johnson, a coast guard officer. He is suffering from a fractured bone in the face and lacerations about the body, but it is expected he can leave the hospital in a few days.

The plane landed on an upslope in the field, ran along for about 20 feet and then nosed over. Both blades of the propellor were broken off, the running gear was badly twisted, and the struts between the wings on one side were broken off.

Many people motored out to Preston City Saturday to look at the plane after news of the accident became known in the city. Up to Sunday night the plane was still at the field and numerous auto parties went there throughout the day to view it. Two men from a Hartford aviation company arrived Sunday to take charge of the wrecked plane.

LEARNED-HUNT WEDDING BRILLIANT SOCIAL EVENT

A wedding brilliant in all its details and calling together a fashionable assemblage representing a number of cities, was that of Miss Fredricca Hunt, daughter of Congressman and Mrs. Richard Patrick Freeman, of Washington and Neptune Park, and Ebenezer Learned, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Ebenezer Learned, of Norwich. The ceremony took place Saturday evening at 8 o'clock in St. James' Episcopal church, New London, and was performed by the rector, Rev. Philip M. Kerridge.

The beautiful decorations of the church were by Otto Ernst, of Norwich. Oak foliage and trailing vines of white clematis adorned the lofty pillars of the nave. The chancel decorations were most elaborate, fan palms, ferns and juniper trees forming an effective background for autumnal flowers, principally gladioli and dahlias in decorative baskets and in bouquets. Tall white candles in flower and vine decked silver standards defined the path for the bridal party along the center aisle, the general effect being charming.

Friends of both families who filled the church included many prominent in civic and social life. The state was represented by Lieut.-Governor Ernest E. Rogers, who, with Mrs. Rogers was among the early arrivals for the ceremony. Associates of Congressman Freeman at Washington and other distinguished personages were among the guests.

The organist, William Bauer, played a program of nuptial music on the Plant memorial organ for a half hour preceding the ceremony. His processional was the Bridal Chorus from "Lohengrin." The ushers were Lawton Slade Brayton, of Fall River, Harold Faust, Jewett City, John C. Sayles, Louis J. Quinson and John B. Dick of Norwich, Donald Harwood of New London, John R. Cary, Cleveland, O., and Lucius M. Seiberling, of Akron, O. The best man was Harvey Alonzo Basham, Jr., of New York.

The bride had as her honor maid Miss Constance Traill Learned, sister of the bridegroom, who wore coral flat crepe, her bouquet in matching tints of gladioli being combined with blue delphinium. The bridesmaids were Miss Margaret Lundy, of Washington, in green flat crepe, Miss Elizabeth Lundy, in yellow, Miss Rowena Harwood, New London, in flesh tint, and Miss Virginia Wemple, of Hartford, lavender. All carried corresponding bouquets of gladioli and combined delphinium.

Mary Lou and Marjorie Rowland, twin daughters of Mr. and Mrs. H. Ellsworth Rowland, of New London, cherubs in eggshell silk frocks and carrying dainty baskets of tea roses, were the flower girls.

The bride walked with her brother, Lieut. Ralph Baile Hunt, U. S. N., by whom she was given in marriage. Her exquisite gown was of ivory velvet, she wore a veil of lace and tulle shot with silver, and her bouquet was of orchids and lilies of the valley.

At the termination of the ceremony, the tiny flower girls preceded Mr. Learned and his bride, as they left the chancel, as the organist played the joyous Mendelssohn Wedding March. The church ceremony was followed by a reception for two hundred and fifty at Lighthouse Inn. Here the bridal table was arranged under festoons of white and silver gauze ribbons from the center silver sphere to rosettes of laurel foliage on the walls. Tall white candles in silver candlesticks added to the beauty of the table. Great, snowy dahlias formed the centerpiece and adorned mantel and buffet.

In the reception room the flowers were in combination of gold and white. Shepard and Swanson's orchestra played.

Mr. Learned and his bride left later for New York and will spend their honeymoon in Bermuda. The bride is traveling in an outfit of dark green. They will be at home after Oct. 15th at 51 Sachem street, Norwich.

The bride is a graduate of the University of Chicago. Mr. Learned was graduated from Yale and is associated with his father in the firm of B. P. Learned & company, Norwich, the insurance firm established over a half century ago by his grandfather, the late Major Bela Peck Learned.

The reception at Lighthouse Inn was the climax of a week's round of social affairs of unusual interest. In the receiving line at the Inn, Mrs. Freeman, mother of the bride, wore a velvet gown of tiger lily tint; the gown of Mrs. Learned, mother of the bridegroom, was of gold lame.

MOTOR VEHICLE INSTRUCTION IN NEW STATE MANUAL

on motor vehicle laws and facts, knowledge of which is required in the every day operation of cars, has been compiled under the direction of Malcolm D. Rudd, deputy commissioner of motor vehicles. The book is issued in a form similar to that used in previous years with several new subjects added and all information revised to Sept. 1. Approximately 35,000 copies of the manual are distributed upon request every year.

Brief descriptions of the operation of old motor vehicle laws are given in the manual with more complete analysis of new laws passed by the 1929 general assembly. Disciplinary matters receive special attention. Full information is contained on vehicle registration and the manner and means of securing operators' licenses. Equipment and accessories for each vehicle are described.

The procedure in filing accident reports is explained and followed by a discussion of the financial responsibility law, which, primarily affects those involved in serious accidents or law violations. Considerable space is devoted to items of miscellaneous information which should be common knwledge with every driver. A detailed account of reciprocal privileges extended by Connecticut and other states is printed for the benefit of travelling motorists.

Pen sketches illustrate the proper and approved hand signals used in car operation and these are supplemented by explanation in the text. The same plan of illustrated and written explanation is used in information on highway warning signs and signals. The book also lists symbols used on number plates, approved headlight devices, regulations for reflectors, and gives information on the focusing and aiming of headlamps, and the laws governing the use of lights on motor vehicles.

DIOCESE NEEDS PRIESTS, ST. PATRICK'S RECTOR NOTES

In the diocese of Hartford, with its 600,000 Catholics, there is urgest need for a greater number of priests, to preach, to distribute the sacraments, to do God's work, the rector of St. Patrick's church, Rt. Rev. Msgr. M. H. May told the large congregation assembled for the 7:30 mass Sunday morning. Monsignor May cited the fact that although a score of priests were ordained the past spring all had been assigned and still there is a demand for others.

He was referring to the offering the coming Sunday for the new St. Thomas' seminary, Hartford, since the present seminary is not large enough for the number of young men being prepared to enter the priesthood. The demands of the diocese have outgrown the old seminary and for that reason Rt. Rev. John J. Nilan, D. D. is erecting the new $2,000,000 building which he hopes to have paid for when completed, probably next summer. Already priests and people of the state have contributed about $650,000 toward its fund, each parish being apportioned a certain amount which is to be paid annually. St. Patrick's annual quota is $2,500. Incidentally, Monsignor May suggested that well-to-do parishioners might well remember the new seminary when making their wills.

Even while on earth Christ gathered about Him apostles, disciples, holy women, to aid him in His work; He still needs priests, Sisters, religious. The preacher expressed the hope that no parents listening to him would ever put obstacles in the way of any of their children, if such should show an inclination toward this special life in the service of the Saviour. If sons have the call from Almighty God, as Aaron had, or if daughters manifest an inclination toward the religious life, he adjured them to foster such a calling, to thwart no such sacred vocation.

The completion of the new seminary will provide new assistants to the bishop, in order that the work of Jesus Christ can be carried on in this world, Monsignor May declared. The seminary is the nursery for the priesthood; it belongs to all and its speedy completion is of concern to all. St. Patrick's parish has always held a leading place in the diocese for its financial aid toward the seminary and all diocesan projects.

It was announced that the Holy Name society would receive communion in a body at the 7:30 mass next Sunday.

The rector directed attention to the importance to all American citizens of the coming Tuesday, Sept. 17th, Constitution day, the anniversary of that momentous event, the signing of the articles of Constitution.

So many penitents received communion following Saturday's confessions that Rev. Myles P. Galvin assisted Monsignor May in administering the Holy Eucharist.

ROCK NOOK CHILDREN'S HOME AND CLINIC—UNITED WORKERS

Nothing can give greater pleasure to the citizens of Norwich, always interested in the Rock Nook Childres Home, than to hear of the little ones cared for there. A mother who was forced to enter the tuberculosis sanatorium left several children at the home lately, and, on her recovery, took them away well and rosy. A young man who spent his boyhood in the home, recently addressed the students in a large Massachusetts high school, and will finish his business education this coming year.

Another, brought his bride this summer to see the home, showing her with great pride the historic Meeting Home Rocks, saying "This is where we used to play!"

As little tots they have felt the motherly love of the matron, have experienced the supervision and care of the devoted committee, and now, as grown men and women, they can pass on the kindness and goodness once shown to them.

Sponsored by the home is the Rock Nook children's clinic, to which are brought both sick and well children. They are given inoculations against diphtheria and small box, they are examined from eyes to toes.

The popularity of this clinic, held at the United Workers Home, No. 9 Washington St.—is demonstrated by the number of children examined; a record attendance on one Wednesday afternoon recently, was reported as 77. Norwich people agree with President Hoover that the children a nation are its greatest asset.

VOLUNTOWN

PROSPECT YELLOW MILL WILL SOON BE OPERATED

Prospects that the Yellow mill, formerly the No. 2 mill of the Briggs Mfg. Co. will be put in operation at an early date are very good. The new owners have a contractor and a number of men making the necessary alterations. It is not yet known how many hands will be employed, or the character of the work, but all know that the operation of the mill will be of great benefit to the town.

Machinery in the Stone mill, operated by the Beachdale Co., is now in operation, turning out samples of their product; it is expected that the plant will soon be in full operation.

Registrars of Voters Leonard B. Kinne and Thomas McDonald met in Union hall Tuesday to receive applications of intended voters at the town election to be held Oct. 7. Twenty names were received, eleven men and nine women, 24 names less than in 1928, when 54 names were handed in. Sessions for admitting new electors will be held on Saturday, Sept. 21.

Forty Hours' Devotion

REVIVAL IN WHOLESALE AND RETAIL TRADE WAS REPORTED LAST WEEK

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP)— The past week in business and industry saw a marked revival in wholesale and retail trade and an acceleration of activity in the lighter manufacturing lines. The heavy industries remained rather quiet, although maintaining operations at a somewhat higher level than last year at this time and definite evidence of autumn trends in this group failed to appear.

The cool weather gave renewed stimulus to retail buying in such industries as radio, clothing and jewelry began to spread in preparation for the early winter and holiday trade. Freight car loadings, as reported for the last week of August, set still another new high record for the period.

In the steel industry, an unexpectedly disappointing showing was made by the U. S. Steel corporation's report of unfilled tonnage as of August 31, showing a decline of nearly 430,000 tons from the total at the end of July.

The latest federal reserve condition statements showed further buying of acceptances and bankers felt that if the reserve system continues to liberate credit at the present rate, no serious credit situation may be expected. Brokers' loans, however, continued to mount, offering of securities of new investment trusts went forward at a feverish rate and it was feared that reserve officials may feel constrained to take further measures to curtail the flow of credit into speculation.

A moderate decline was reported in crude oil production, and the petroleum industry felt more optimistic over the problem of eventual control of reproduction.

Copper producers evidently failed to put into effect the projected increase in prices from 18 to 18 1-4 cents and buying let up rather sharply.

LOOSE PLAYING LOSES GAME FOR VELVETMEN

Errors at critical times and general loose playing lost what had all the earmarks of a real ball game Sunday when the House of David team took advantage of the misplays to trounce the J. B. Martin club 6 to 1. The Velvetmen did not click at opportune times and their inability to hit when hits meant runs was a contributing factor toward their down fall. On the other hand the House of David club played snappy baseball throughout and found little difficulty in touching Lefty Dugas for 13 hits. The score:

CARDS SPLIT TWIN PROGRAM WITH GIANTS

ST. LOUIS, Sept. 15—(AP)—With two rookies doing mound duty, the St. Louis Cardinals divided a double bill with the New York Giants today, dropping the first game 4 to 0, and winning the nightcap 6 to 4. The Giants thus remained three games behind Pittsburgh in the race for second place in the National league.

Al Grabowski, young Danville, Illinois, hurler who won his first major league start for the Cardinals against Boston last week, got off to a bad start in the first game, allowing four hits and as many runs in the opening frame. Thereafter, he held the Giants to four more blows. Jim Lindsey, who came up from Houston, Texas, made his major league debut in the second game by pitching the Cardinals to victory.

REDS PUSH BRAVES FURTHER INTO MIRE

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15.—(AP)—The Reds shoved the Braves deeper into the cellar today winning an artificial double header 6 to 1 and 4 to 3. Marvin Gudat, left-handed rookie secured from Dayton Central league last winter, who has been used as a relief pitcher only a few times this season, started his first game in the nightcap and held the Braves in check.

Next Tuesday's game was advanced to today to make a bargain bill for the fans.

CUBS BEAT ROBINS; NEED ONE MORE FOR PENNANT

CHICAGO, Sept. 15.—(AP)— Chicago trounced Brooklyn 13 to 4, here today and moved within one victory of the National league pennant.

Charley Root pitched his 17th victory of the season as the Cubs assaulted Newsome, McWeeny, Morrison and Ballu for 18 hits. Hornsby drove out his 37th home run in the sixth. Tolson got four hits in five trips to the plate. Buck Newsome, the Robin recruit, was hammered from the box in the first inning under a barrage of five hits, two bases on balls helping to score the six runs.

Johnny Frederick led the Brooklyn assaut on Root with a home run, double and a single. His double gave him 49, one under the league record of 50 held by Paul Waner.

JABLONOWSKI IS BOUGHT BY CLEVELAND CLUB

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Sept. 15—(AP)—Pete Jablonowski, a right handed pitcher who has been one of the mainstays of the Columbus American association team this year, has been sold to the Cleveland Indians of the American league, President Joe F. Carr of the Senators announced today.

Cash and one player, was involved, Carr said.

Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis ruled yesterday that the purchase of Jablonowski, announced last week by the Cincinnati Reds, was illegal since he had been sent out twice on option.

CASTANO DEFENDS HIS TITLE AGAINST WILLS

MEXICO CITY, Sept. 15—(AP)—Andres Castano, of Spain, successfully defended his Mexican heavyweight championship tonight when he won from Harry Wills, erstwhile "black menace" of American rings, on a foul in the first round of their ten round bout.

Wills outclassed the Spaniard in the first round but struck Castano on the jaw after the bell rang. He apparently had not heard the gong. Castano, after momentary hesitation, dropped to the canvas and then refused to proceed with the bout.

What a nice quiet week-end it was.

A kinda 50-50 week end, half rain and half fair weather. But the fair weather was appreciated after almost four days of dreary dampness.

That rainy weather may have been just what the farmer needed but it was no bargain for us folks that reside in the city.

Anyway the weather of last week kinda put some of us outa commission, so to speak. Didja get a nice cold out of it? If you didn't you're lucky and if you did not know how I feel.

But I suppose colds are like taxes—nobody wants 'em but you ain't got nothing to say about it. And those colds what hit you in the head are the worst, all your m's and n's come out sounding like b's.

If you ever listened to a couple folks with colds in their heads and could understand what they were talking about you could probably speak Chinese fluently after one lesson.

So now, if you'll pardon me, I'll indulge in a coupla good old-fashioned sneezes. Oh boy, what satisfaction there is in a real good sneeze. It's like having your back scratched with a hairbrush.

Well, folks, I'm going to call it a day, take something for my cold and hit the hay. No, brother you got me wrong, I haven't a drop in the house. And besides, why waste it on a cold.

Bon soir.

YANKEES GET EVEN BREAK IN DOUBLE WITH INDIANS

NEW YORK, Sept. 15.—(AP)— The Yankees and the Indians divided a double-header here today, the home team taking the first game by 1 to 0 and the invaders the second by 10 to 0. Willis Hudlin held the Yanks to three hits in the nightcap as the Indians ponuded Waite Hoyt and Fred Heimach for fourteen, including Hauser's homer with two on in the third. Old Tom Zachary just shaded Ken Holloway in the opener, which was decided on Luke Sewell's wild throw in the third. It was Zachary's eleventh victory against no defeats.

Reds Buy Two Players

CINCINNATI, Sept. 15—(AP)—The Cincinnati Reds today announced purchase of Lee Stebbins, first baseman and Outfielder Bonowitz, from the Fort Worth, Texas League club. They will report next spring.

SOCONY CLUB WINS INDUSTRIAL BASEBALL TITLE OF N. L. COUNTY

The industrial baseball crown now rests with the Socony team of New London by virtue of their 6 to 1 victory over the Smoke Shop team of Norwich at Mercer field Sunday afternoon. This was the second victory for the Oilmen who turned back the Smoke Shop a week ago at Hollyhock Island 13 to 5. Socony was the winner of the New London dusty league while the Smoke Shop copped the pennant in the Rose City.

Sunday's game at New London was a much better game than the score would indicate and was really an exhibition of brilliant pitching by Lefty Lucier of the Smoke Shop and Chappell of the Socony club. Lucier received ragged support at times and only three runs were earned. Lucier allowed seven hits while he passed three men. Chappell was in fine form fanning six men and walking two and grounding out five safties which he kept well scattered.

LEFTY LUCIER

The Smoke Shop scored their only run in the fifth inning when two errors followed by a hit by Anso Tombari scored Sadinsky. The Socony team scored in the first inning when Couillard greeted Lucier with a triple and then came home on an infield out. In the fourth inning they counted twice on two hits and an error. To these they added another in the sixth on Harron's single which was followed by Hewitt's double. In the seventh a hit and a base on balls followed by two errors accounted for two more runs.

The local fans are now clamoring for a series between the Smoke Shop and the Polish Citizens which should prove interesting. The scoring:

WESTERLY

STILL SEARCHING FOR GEMS STOLEN FROM MRS. DARLINGTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I. Spt. 15—A Watch Hill jewelry robbery in the early hours of Friday morning in which a burglar made off with some $54,000 worth of loot is the first Watch Hill cottage break in a number of years.

The stolen jewelry is described as a diamond guard ring; pink pearl ring set in diamonds; white pearl ring set in diamonds; a diamond and graduated pearl necklace and a diamond and pearl circular stick pin. These were all the property of Mrs. Harry Darlington, Jr., of Sewickley, Pa., who this season has occupied "The Cedars," Ninigret avenue, Watch Hill. In the household besides Mrs. Darlington are two sons and nine servants. Mr. Darlington has been at his home near Pittsburgh for several weeks.

Thursday morning Mrs. Darlington returned to Westerly from a short trip to Pittsburgh on the New England express, arriving at 6:54 a. m. and immediately went to her Watch Hill summer home. She attended a dinner and went to her bedroom about 11 p. m., but continued awake and read until nearly 1:00 a. m. Friday when lights were extinguished and she retired. Awaking at 9:30 Friday morning she went to her dressing table to secure the stick pin and all the jewelry above described which she had left on the stand when retiring but all had vanished. Her first move was to notify by telephone the New York company which held the insurance upon the jewelry. Shortly before noon the Westerly police were notified and Motorcycle Officer Robert M. Kessel visited the home. Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown was then summoned. Members of the household were instructed to say nothing about the robbery and the Westerly police continued their investigations without making public statements. Friday evening a representative from the New York insurance agency came to Westerly and went to Watch Hill where the New York detective and Chief Brown continued investigations.

On Saturday each member of the household was subjected to questioning and the grounds were gone over most carefully to discover the means by which the jewelry had been taken. Late Saturday afternoon the story came out in the statement of a Westerly police commissioner.

Chief of Police Brown believes that the robbery is a second story porch job for there were no visible traces or breaks on which to secure evidence. There is not a particle of suspicion attached to any member of the household.

Sunday Superintendent Herbert L. Caffrey of the Rhode Island department of criminal investigation came to Westerly and visited the Darlington summer home at the Hill to secure, if possible, fingerprints or other traces of the robber or robbers. The cottage is a low rambling wooden structure with ells and dormer windows and while the grounds are not extensive there is much shrubbery in which accomplices might work. The matter of climbing a porch post and getting through an open window would be a matter of but a few moments work. It is claimed that a pet dog slept through the intrusion and did not arouse any member of the household.

Mrs. Darlington has always entertained lavishly at the Hill. This last year many return trips from New York have been made by her by seaplane which landed in the waters of Little Narragansett bay. Mr. Darlington is connected with banking and brokerage houses in Pittsburgh where his father at one time was a banker and railroad magnate. Last year the Darlington family occupied a cottage on the East Beach. A palatial yacht, Ardea, owned by the Darlingtons, has been in the waters of Little Narragansett Bay during this season and frequent trips have been made through the waters of Long Island sound, the yacht coming to Watch Hill from Glen Cove, Long Island.

JACK JAMES' INJURIES RESULT IN HIS DEATH

Jack James, 20, a Watch Hill shop proprietor, died Saturday night at the South County hospital, Wakefield, where he had been since Sept. 5th as the result of an automobile crash. He was the occupant of an automobile driven by Frederick Von Shuckman of New York city which crashed into a tree in Allenton, R. I. on the Tower Hill road. James sustained a shattered pelvis, fractured skull, broken ribs and right arm. Von Shuckman had a fractured collar bone and was held in $200 bail on a charge of operation of an automobile in such a manner as to endanger the lives of the occupants. In the automobile at the time of the crash were Miss Ellen Matson, who had her left arm fractured and Miss Myra Carlson, who sustained severe bruises. Both resides in Bradford.

Dr. Ronald C. Dove, Westerly dentist, by announcement made Saturday, was among nine dental surgeons to state institutions named by the newly organized state public welfare commission, at Providence.

Passenger Fractures Shoulder

At the Providence Union station Saturday Mrs. Annie Broadfood, a former Westerly resident, sustained a bad fall while alighting from a New Haven railroad car. She was taken to the Rhode Island hospital where it was found that she had sustained a fracture of the shoulder which was reduced. Her condition Sunday was reported as comfortable.

At Pawcatuck Woolen Mill, Potter Hill, late Friday, William B. Greene, 34, of Potter Hill caught his right had in the machinery and it was badly mangled. He was treated by Dr. M. H. Scanlen and Dr. C. Grant Savage, and taken to the Westerly hospital.

The private combination observation Pullman car "Chicago" was sidetracked Sunday morning at Westerly station to be attached to this (Monday) morning's west-bound Colonial express making the Westerly station stop at 11 a. m. The car will be occupied by the family of Henry C. Butcher, returning to West Philadelphia, Pa., from a summer stay at Colonial cottage, Plimpton road, Watch Hill. Mrs. Butcher is suffering from heart trouble.

Home From Portland

Returning to their Westerly homes the past week end from attendance at the National Encampment of the G. A. R., and associated patriotic bodies, held at Portland, Me., have been Mrs. Sarah E. Vrendenberg, Lillian A. Slocum, Mary E. Dubuc, Miss Ida M. Clark, Mrs. Carry E. Dawley, Mrs. Eleanor L. Lucy, Mrs. Lena G. Lourie and Mrs. Mabel R. Brown.

Members and guests of Rhode Island Steam Fire Engine Co., No. 2, Westerly fire department, held their annual outing and bake Sunday in lower Pawcatuck. Richard Slaughter was chef and a most enjoyable outing with everything to be desired in the line of sea food was provided the firemen.

Jersey City Man Too Speedy

Judge Oliver H. Williams Saturday night held a special session of Third District court at which George Fantry, of Jersey City, N. J., was charged with operation of an automobile on the Noose Neck Hill road at a rate of speed greater than reasonable. He was fined $25 and costs, which was paid.

MISQUAMICUT VISITOR DROWNED WHILE BATHING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, Sept. 15—The first drowning at Westerly bathing beaches during the season was at Misquamicut about noon Sunday when Mrs. Celia Olson, 34, of Westport, Mass., was caught in the undertow and her body carried out to sea. She had started to go to the assistance of her husband.

Members of the Coast Guard station at Watch Hill dragged the water with grappling hooks for over an hour until they were forced to give up their search because of the heavy sea. Mr. and Mrs. Russell F. Olson of 64 West Silver street, Westfield, with a party of six, were spending the week end at the beach in a cottage belonging to William Parsons, also of Westfield. With a number of other visitors and cottagers they were in bathing this morning. While the heavy undertow kept most of the bathers near the shore Olson ventured out beyond the breakers. He found himself in difficulty when he attempted to reach the beach and cried for help.

His cries were heard by a number of bathers and J. Harold Kenyon and David A. Lowry started to his rescue. Mrs. Olson, who was in the water near the shore, heard her husband's cry and saw the men start to his aid. Although said to be a poor swimmer, Mrs. Olson started to the assistance of her husband, and was carried out on the tide. Kenyon, Lowry and William Dell reached Mr. Olson and succeeded in getting him to shore, but before this time Mrs. Olson had disappeared.

The coast guard crew at Watch Hill was notified and Capt. George W. Streeter with five men put out in the small surf boat. They dragged the bottom of the ocean at the point where Mrs. Olson was seen to have gone down, but an hour's search failed to bring any results.

Because of the heavy sea it was impossible for the crew to beach the boat and Capt. Streeter returned to the station at Watch Hill. He later took his men by automobile to Misquamicut and stationed them on the beach to watch for the incoming tide thinking that possibly the body might be washed ashore.

Mr. Olson was attended by Dr. Grant C. Savare who was summoned from Westerly. Although badly affected by his experience in the water Mr. Olson rallied to treatment and was soon out of danger. Because of his nervous condition he was not informed of his wife's drowning until several hours later

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 15—Coming to New London today with relatives to spend her birthday, Miss Lillian Moore, 18, of Hartford, expired early this evening at O'Leary's, Green and Golden street. Death was caused by an internal hemorrhage. Miss Moore's health had been impaired for several months. Today in company with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Moore, of 66 Claremonte street, she left Hartford early and arriving in New London, went to the hotel. This afternoon another auto ride was taken and included a visit to Ocean beach. Returning to the hotel shortly after 5 o'clock, Miss Moore complained of feeling ill and lay on a bed. She suffered the hemorrhage and expired almost immediately

Did Not Disembark

Steamer Shinnecock, of the Sunrise route, plying between Greenport and this port, brought several hundred excursionists to New London this afternoon. The diversion seekers, did not leave the steamer however, for the Shinnecock arrived at her pier at 4:30 o'clock and as soon as awaiting passengers boarded the boat it departed on the return trip. The last trip of the season by the Shinnecock will be made Tuesday.

Burning Car Gets Out Apparatus

An automobile owned by Joseph Castagna, 63 Jefferson avenue, was damaged by fire this evening. The car was on Bank street, near Ocean avenue when it suddenly broke into flames. An alarm rung in from Box 41, corner of Bank and Colman streets was responded to by Acting Deputy Chief Alfred Harvey and four pieces of apparatus. When the firemen arrived the blaze was extinguished with chemicals. It is believed that the fire originated from defective wiring.

A man was arrested this evening on a charge of breach of the peace and intoxication, his arrest being made upon complaint of his son. He will be presented in the police court tomorrow, when fifteen or more cases will claim the attention of Judge Daniel M. Cronin.

CERTAIN TRAINS RUN THROUGH WITHOUT STOPPING

For the first time in the history of the New Haven railroad, some passenger trains do not stop in this city. With the inauguration of the New York-Boston all parlor car train, the Senator, recently it was decided to have the train not stop here. The train is composed of six Pullman cars and an extra fare is charged. Two other trains, Nos. 1 and 2, which pass through New London between 3 and 4 o'clock in the morning and which heretofore always stopped, do not do so any more. There was a rumor recently to the effect that the Merchants' Limited which passes through New London daily between 7 and 8 o'clock in the evening would also be included among the trains that do not stop here, but with the preparation of a new timetable, effective next month, it is shown that these trains will continue to stop here.

Norwich Car Stolen From Mabrey's

A Cadillac owned by a man named Schwartz, residing in Norwich, was stolen in New London Saturday night, but later was recovered. The car was parked by Schwartz in front of Mabrey's hotel, Ocean beach and when the owner returned to where he had left the car about midnight, he discovered it missing. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Under Direction Warner Bros.

Laughter and tears, merriment and tragedy are inextricably mingled in Al Jolson's greatest film drama "Say It With Songs," which will be the feature of the program of the Palace theater at the gala opening of that newly-decorated and modernized playhouse Saturday, September 21.

With little Davey Lee, who has made the whole world cry and laugh, Jolson sings and talks his way to a triumph even greater than he achieved in either the "Jazz Singer" or the "Singing Fool," the two pictures which previously won him fame in the screen world. Here is a picture packed with pathos, vibrant with the play of human emotions—a masterpiece in song, setting and melody.

As Joe Lane, ex-pugilist, radio announcer and song-writer, Jolson has many an opportunity to sing, and all through the film his glorious voice rings out, intermittently—now carrying a joyous note, again sinking into a threnody of despair. And his singing is woven into the very heart and fabric of the drama.

Joe goes to jail when he accidently kills the man who has insulted his wife. Realizing that his presence in jail is a stigma to his wife and little son, he roughly accuses her of being unfaithful and orders her to divorce him. She is turning over his strange request in her mind, and wondering whether to say yes to a former suitor, when of a sudden she hears over the radio, her husband's voice as he sings from the prison on a Christmas eve. It is then that she realizes she cannot desert Joe.

Joe leaves prison, but tragedy dogs his steps. Little Pal, his son, is hurt, and for a time it seems as if the child will not be able either to walk or talk. Money must be procured somewhere for the necessary operation. How Joe faced his problems and won his way back to love and happiness, forms the theme of the close of this tender drama.

Besides "Say It With Songs," Manager R. B. Hamilton of the Palace has prepared a splendid program of supporting features.

Splitsdorf Spark-Plugs

In the course of a discussion on engineering facts revealed by the recent endurance flights, this question was put by one New York automotive engineer to another: "Which gives a spark plug its hardest test of endurance—an airplane, an automobile, or an outboard motor?"

Much to the surprise of some of the laymen present—and to the huge glee of the outboard enthusiasts—the palm was awarded to the humble outboard.

The outboard, it was explained later, being a two-cycle engine, requires a spark from its plugs for every revolution made. Airplane and automobile engines, on the other hand, require a spark only every other revolution as they are four-cycle engines.

Moreover, the average outboard operates under much severer conditions over a given period of time than does the airplane or the automobile. The spark plugs in an outboard motor not only must endure the highest temperature due to additional explosions but also are subject to frequent baths in cold salt water. Any plug that can stand this usually fatal combination without short-circuiting or developing porcelain cracks, deserves all the praise it gets from the public.

When starting out on their 1,600-mile run between Miami, Florida, and New York last spring, H. S. Harris and J. D. Ramsey were faced with the problem of choosing spark plugs that could stand up under 1,600 miles of pounding through heavy seas. They finally decided on Splitdorfs—an ordinary set taken from stock usually sold for automobiles. It is reliably reported that they did not have to change a single Splitdorf during the entire journey despite the fact that their Ramsey boat was buffetted in stormy seas for 17 out of the 21 days required to make the trip.

Broadway Theatre

Elmer (Hurry) Kane, hero of "Fast Company," the all-talking slang epic of baseball, now showing at the Broadway, doesn't exactly hate himself, but he does admit to being the best baseball player in the world. That's why he secured a coveted post on the New York Yanks just in time to cut a piece of the "world's series cake,"—but his adventures and misadventures in doing it, provided an evening of hearty laughs for Broadway patrons last night at the opening performance. Elmer, played by smiling Jack Oakie, is the favorite character of his creator, the famous Ring W. Lardner, who made the expression "You know me, Al," a by-word, by means of the "Hurry" Kane stories in slang. George M. Cohan was co-author with Lardner in the stage play, "Elmer the Great," from which "Fast Company" was filmed. Oakie is assisted in his fun-making by "Skeets" Gallagher, Sam Hardy, Arthur Housman and Evelyn Brent, the latter as Elmer's "girl," and Gwen Lee, a dizzy blonde, who admires from afar. Snappy dialogue in Lardner's happiest vein, together with some dramatic episodes in connection with the "crooking" of the world's series, and a complete showing of that memorable extra-inning battle between the Yanks and Pittsburgh, with both teams actually playing in the picture, make a slang-sports epic long to be remembered. The surrounding bill is equally interesting, with the latest Paramount Sound News, the Talking Collegians in "The Varsity Drag," and Octavus Roy Cohen's all-talking comedy of colored high life, "Oft in the Silly Night."

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE MEMBERS WILL VISIT GARDNER LAKE CAMP

Everything is in readiness for the outing of the Chamber of Commerce at Gardners Lake this (Monday) night. In a letter addressed to the chamber, Milo Light assures the members that he will have a good meal of chicken, candied sweet potatoes, sweet corn, and ice cream. Many of the members are bringing their wives on this occasion, others are planning to go out in the afternoon and take in some of the beauties of Mr. Light's estate.

There are few people who realize what a wonderful development Mr. Light's camp is. It is no doubt one of the best camps in southern New England it is in reality four camps in one. Camp Cadaho for older boys and Camp Tohaci for younger boys, betweenthe ages of 6 and 18. Camp Juanita for older girls and Camp Adjuan for younger girls, between the ages of 6 and 20. During the months of July and August these camps are filled with boys and girls who are primarily interested in health which comes first by living in the open air and free sunshine where they are supervised to outdoor recreation. Nature study classes, civic education, vocational guidance, ethical character, and many other subjects are stduied. There are several buildings at the camp. The administration building, the library building, the headquarters building for each of the four camps, also the laboratory where all the animals, snakes, and insects are studied.

Those who attend the camp come from all sections of the United States; the majority however come from New York, Philadelphia, and Washington. The members who were fortunate in visiting Mr. Light's camp in June on the good will tour were enthusiastic in suggesting that a large group of chamber members come out at some future date, therefore Mr. Light's invitation was readily received and accepted and it is believed that the capacity of his facilities will be entirely absorbed by the unusual crowd of members that are planning to go.

An additional amount of interest has no doubt been created in the meeting by the subject of the address which is "Calendar Reform." There seems to be a wide diversity of opinion among the members of the chamber of commerce on this subject. Some are strongly in favor of the proposed change to a 13 month year of 28 days each, and others are likewise opposed to it. There is a still larger group that are not sufficiently familiar with the subject to form a conclusion. Mr. Wilson's talk Monday night will undoubtedly deal with the many reasons why a reform seems advisable. The United States chamber has prepared a referendum, the outline of which appeared in the newspaper Friday morning. The local chamber as a member of the United States chamber is called upon to vote on this referendum. The committee in charge have decided that in view of the interest in the subject a local referendum of the entire membership should be undertaken. Accordingly 50 referendum ballots are being shipped from the United States chamber in Washington for use in this connection. Each member of the committee will be given a copy of the official referendum of the United States chamber so that after the vote of the membership is taken and with the both sides of the story presented so thoroughly in the official referendum it should be easy for the committee to arrive at a conclusion.

Charles Eaton who has been appointed chairman of this committee by President Joseph C. Worth has served in this capacity before and has always given painstaking and conscientious consideration to the work. The members can feel confident that Mr. Eaton's committee will do a thorough job.

Paul H. Wilson who is to be the principal speaker at the outing is secretary of the Graton & Knight Co., Worcester, Mass. Mr. Wilson is a personal friend of George Eastman and a great enthusiast for the plan.

This will be the last chamber dinner of the year under President Worth's administration. The new directors for the coming two years will be elected at this meeting. Nominations which have been presented to all the members by the nominating committee include: Albert Van Wagenen, treasurer of the Atlantic Carton Corp; William Fitzgerald of the Richmond Radiator co.; William Stebbins of the J. B. Martin Co.; B. H. Palmer, Jr., of Chandler & Palmer; Glen Merithew of the F. W. Woolworth Co.; and Frank Murdy of the Metropolitan Life Insurance co. These men will succeed in office the following who have served a term of two years: Charles J. Twist; Charles Taggart; Arthur M. Brown; Walter Lester; Henry Lyon; and F. Russell Smith. The work accomplished by the chamber during the period in which the six who are not retiring served, will always remain in the minds of Norwich citizens as commendable. During this period many worthwhile objectives have been accomplished and the members of this organization owe a debt of gratitude to these six men who now retire, as they have no doubt rendered a faithful and capable service to our city.

His Honor Mayor Lee Roy Robbins, is planning to attend the outing and Rev. Dr. T. M. Shipherd, the new pastor of the Park Congregational church, has accepted an invitation to invoke the divine blessing. Fred J. Maples will entertain with a solo. Others who have been invited to sit at the speakers table include members of the board of directors as follows: Arthur M. Brown, Cyril E. Fitch, eorge Fellows, H. D. Johnson, Walter Lester, Henry Lyon, Henry F. Powers, Abner Schwartz, F. Russell Smith, John R. Tarrant, Charles J. Twist, and C. W. Taggart, Past Presidents Harold Larrabee and James Case.

POETRY

Quest

I sought the face of Jesus
In every crowded street,
I scanned each hurrying person
A certain face to greet—
I thought, "The search is fruitless,
And yet the Quest is sweet!"

I watched the toiling faces
Of factory men at work,
I saw their souls reflected
Through factory smoke and murk;
I saw grim prison faces
Where strange emotions lurk,

I sought the face of Jesus
In every child at play—
I watched for Him in women
At market time each day;
I scanned the sad-eyed faces
Along a silent way.

I found the smile of Jesus
Upon a neighbor's face—
And in my mother's living
I found his tender Grace.
Within the sickroom portal
I saw His secret Place.

I saw the eyes of Jesus
Within a motley throng.
I found the heart of Jesus
In a friendly heart and strong;
And heard the voice of Jesus
Within a singer's song!

—By Dorothy Tyrrel

As A Bell In A Chime

As a bell in a chime
Sets its twin note a-ringing
As one poet's rhyme
Wakes another to singing,
So, once she has smiled,
All your thoughts are beguiled,
And flowers and song from your childhood are bringing.

Though moving through sorrow
As the star through the night,
She needs not to borrow,
She lavishes, light.
The path of yon star
Seemeth dark but afar;
Like hers it is sure and like hers it is bright.

Each grace is a jewel
Would ransom the town
Her speech has no cruel,
Her praise is renown;
'T is in her as though Beauty
Resigning to Duty
The sceptre, had still kept the purple and crown.

He is safe again for 90 minutes, when he repeats the performance, moving his car back. Police so far have not been able to find a loophole in the practice.

Autograph hunters seeking notaries' commissions for the sole purpose of obtaining the president's signature will have no luck during the Hoover regime. President Hoover has upset a precedent established by George Washington whereby the chief executiv personally signed all commissions issued to notaries. About 500 are issued annually to residents of the District of Columbia. Many souvenir hunters, it is said, applied for notarial commissions with little intention of discharging the duties so conferred upon them. President Hoover signs his name just once to a submitted list. When the invidual commissions are issued they bear a facsimile signature.

SENATORS BORAH AND REED CLASH IN DEBATE ON TARIFF

Borah Contended That There is No Need of Increasing Industrial Rates Along With Agricultural Duties—Reed Maintained That the Bill Violates No Pledge of the Republican Platform—Declared That Industries Which Had Suffered in Recent Years as Well as Agriculture Were Entitled to Additional Protection.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Republican differences over the tariff reached fever heat in the senate today as Senators Borah of Idaho, and Reed, of Pennsylvania, clashed over the treatment accorded agriculture and industry in the pending revision bill.

As spokesman for the republican independent group Borah told the senate the measure was far out of line with the pledges made to agriculture by both parties in the last campaign, that farm products were inadequately provided for, and that what increases were proposed in farm rates would be more than offset by raises in industrial levies.

Reed denied the bill violated republican tariff pledges. He cited President Hoover's message referring to the need of protecting lagging manufacturing industries where it was deemed warranted, as well as agriculture, and said the republicans on the finance committee had rewritten the house measure upon the theory that "all Americans are equal."

The unheralded speech of the Idahoan came at a point in consideration of committee amendments to the administrative sections of the bill when such a move was least expected. It served to emphasize the dissatisfaction of the western and northwestern farm state senators with the bill. Earlier Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, had announced he would confer with other senators from the northwest over the treatment accorded lumber, shingles, logs, wool, manganese fruits, and nuts in the bill.

"This bill," said Borah, "is not executed in justice to the agricultural interests. Some of us believe the time is at hand when agriculture must take a stand if it is to benefit from the protective tariff system."

Citing statistics showing growing profits of manufacturing industries in recent years, imports of manufactured goods less than 4 per cent of domestic production or virtually stationary since enactment of existing tariff law in 1922, and exports of such commodities greater last year than in the last decade, Borah said further increases in industrial rates were unnecessary.

He agreed the farmers got all they asked in the Fordney-McCumber tariff act of 1922, but those representing them, he said, made the mistake of acquiescing at the same time to increases in industrial levies. The "desparity" between agriculture and industry resulting from that bill, he argued, would be continued by the pending measure.

"With industrial profits increasing, with exports increasing and imports decreasing," he continued, "we have on the other hand the constantly falling income and profits of agriculture."

He placed the earnings of the steel industry for the first six months of 1929 at 80 per cent above the corresponding period of 1928 and said:

"Senators, this in the condition of an industry which has asked and is receiving additional protection in this bill."

Rising in defense of the bill, Senator Reed said any one who worked on a tariff bill must expect some criticism, but it was time to call a halt when that complaint dealt primarily with generalities and few specific causes.

"We hear an abundance of sneers," he said. "Pretended conversations are recited indicating callousness on our part toward the farmer."

"I want to assure the senator," he asserted, looking at Borah, "that no republican pledge has been forgotten in this bill."

He thereupon read from party pronouncements that suffering industries as well as depressed agriculture should be given tariff aid and said it was only that principle that the tariff farmers worked in proposing increases.

He cited the metals schedule as an example where rates not only were lowered below those recommended by the house but under present duties.

"No farmer on earth has the comforts and luxuries that the American farmer has today," he said, mentioning paved roads, automobiles, radios, all electric light.

WOMAN FATALLY INJURED IN CAR AND TRUCK COLLISION

NAUGATUCK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Mrs. Lorette B. Cahill, 33, of 108 Liberty street, Meriden, was fatally injured late this afternoon, when her car and a truck of the Seymour Manufacturing company collided on the Naugatuck-Beacon Falls highway near St. James cemetery. Mrs. Cahill died on the scene as last rites of the Catholic church were administered by a hastily summoned priest from Naugatuck.

The accident occurred when Mrs. Cahill, who was alone in the car, turned a curve, crashing head-on into the truck which was operated by John Bowers, of Seymour. The car overturned pinning Mrs. Cahill to the ground. She suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries. Bowers escaped injury and his truck was only slightly damaged.

Coroner John T. Monzani began an investigation immediately.

It was learned Mrs. Cahill is survived by her husband, George, and two daughters.

They also must settle the amounts owing to Austria-Hungary and Bulgaria for state property ceded to certain of their successor states.

SIX COUNTS INDICTMENT AGAINST WAGGONER

NEW YORK, Sept. 16.—(AP)—An indictment containing six counts and charging mail fraud, was returned against Charles D. Waggoner, president of the Bank of Telluride, Colo., today, by a federal grand jury, probing the method by which Waggoner fraudulently obtained $500,000 credit in six New York banks.

All of the counts relate to specific use of the mails by Waggoner in his manipulations and the indictment alleges that Waggoner and "others, to the grand jury unknown," hatched the scheme "on or about May 1."

The indictments show how Waggoner, a small town banker allegedly laid his scheme and carried it through to the embarrassment of six of the big banks of the country.

LACKED EVIDENCE AGAINST COMMUNISTS

CHARLOTTE, N. C., Sept. 16.—(AP)—With a mass funeral for Mrs. Ella May Wiggins planned by the International labor defense, communist organization, for tomorrow morning, activities in connection with the labor disturbances in this section today were confined to court actions.

In the first of the series of hearings scheduled for today, eight textile workers and communists accused of having conspired to overthrow the government were released. The state announced that it had been unable to obtain evidence to back up the warrant issued last Friday on the request of H. M. Joyner, city detective after the men had been arrested when a quantity of guns and ammunition was seized in a boarding house where they were staying.

DEFENSE COUNSEL RESTS IN TRIAL OF MRS. ROGERS

NEW BRAUNFELS, Tex., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Completing the introduction of expert testimony attesting to the insanity of Mrs. Rebecca Rogers, counsel for the young former University of Texas student rested their case today in her trial on a charge of bank robbery.

After a short recess the introduction of rebuttal testimony was started, and the end of one of this state's most stubbornly fought criminal cases was believed in sight.

Attorneys for the defendant, who is charged with robbing the Farmers' National bank of Buda, Tex., of $1,000 in 1926, closed the presentation of direct evidence by reading into the records testimony of Dr. Livingston Anderson, Corpus Christi, Tex., mental expert, given in one of Mrs. Roger's three other trials in connection with the holdup. Dr. Anderson held Mrs. Rogers was mentally unbalanced.

ODD FELLOWS CONTINUE DECREASE IN MEMBERSHIP

HOUSTON, Texas, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Membership in the I. O. O. F., and its woman auxiliary Rebekahs continued to decrease last year, the annual report of Edward Kroh, grand secretary, made public today, indicated as the delegates here for the 105th world convention of Odd Fellows plunged into organization and routine business preliminaries.

The report said the subordinate membership in the 27 countries in which Odd Fellowship is established was 1,712,529 January 1 as compared to 1,780,705 a year earlier, the encampment membership 301,784 compared to 318,737 and the Rebekah membership 1,022,141 compared to 1,048,606.

The delegates were welcomed by Governor Dan Moody, Lieutenant Governor Barry Miller and Representative Daniel E. Garrett of Houston, all of whom are Odd Fellows.

BOTH SIDES CONFIDENT IN PHILADELPHIA PRIMARY

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16.—(AP)—The primary election campaign which involves the leadership of the Philadelphia Republican organization, closed tonight with both sides predicting victory for their candidates.

Tomorrow the electors will nominate candidates for county offices, two judges of the state superior court, one common pleas court judge, one orphans court judge and four magistrates.

Interest in the campaign has centered in the fight for control of the republican organization, the Republican league, supported by Mayor Harry A. Mackey, having challenged the leadership of Senator-elect William S.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

BERLIN, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Jose Luis Muratore, former foreign minister of Argentina, died in Hamburg early yesterday after several months illness with typhoid and complications.

LONDON, Sept. 16—(AP)—A spokesman close to Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald tonight revealed that a matter of three cruisers armed with eight-inch guns for the American navy, was the sole remaining difference opinion between Great Britain and United States.

CALCUTTA, India, Sept. 16.—(AP)—A crowd estimated at 150,000 assembled in the streets and on housetops in the vicinity of Howrah station to witness the arrival of the body of Jatindranath Das. Das, one of 16 persons arrested in the Lahore conspiracy case, died in Lahore prison yesterday after maintaining a hunger strike for 61 days.

ICHANG, China, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Bishop Trudo Jans, a Belgian who has lived in China 22 years, and two Franciscan fathers, Bruno and Rupertus, have been killed in the village of Liaotang, Hupeh province, supposedly by bandits who became incensed at finding their victims possessed no money. The Franciscan fathers, also were Belgian subjects.

GREAT BRITAIN IDEAS ON GENERAL DISARMAMENT

GENEVA, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Great Britain today made public its ideas regarding the principles which should govern the nations in seeking general disarmament settlement. Majority opinion among the delegates to the league of nations assembly tonight forecast that the British declaration will reopen the old question of trained army reserves, which undoubtedly would meet with opposition from the French.

The British proposal was again delayed today in the expected presentation to the disarmament committee but Lord Cecil, in view of the great interest aroused, handed a draft of the resolution to the press. It is now expected to reach the committee tomorrow or on Wednesday.

Despite its mild language and academic tone the British document created some excitement, not unmixed with apprehension, among the delegates.

An authoritative British explanation of the purpose of the resolution was that it was intended to announce the labor government's independence of action in dealing with questions of strength of land, sea and air forces when a general disarmament conference is realized and further to hasten the work of the preparatory commission.

COMPOSED WHEN PLACED ON TRIAL FOR MURDER OF WIFE

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Earl Francis Peacock, 21-year-old radio mechanic, was placed on trial today for the killing of his gay and pretty young wife, Dorothy, and through a long day that made talesmen restless. He remained a composed and dapper prisoner, betrayed only by the pallor of months in a cell.

Almost 50 salesmen were examined before defense counsel, admitting the buying but building a defense of accidental insanity, and the prosecuting attorney, angling for jurors without prejudice to the death penalty, had chosen six men. One hundred and fifty talesmen were first called but Supreme Court Justice Arthur S. Tompkins, presiding, ordered 100 more when it became apparent that the jury selection would be slow.

A silk manufacturer, retired grocer, builder, real estate dealer, a coal merchant, a clothing merchant and a coal merchant were the six jurors chosen today.

TRUE BILLS RETURNED AGAINST SIXTY STRIKERS

MARION, N. C., Sept. 16—(AP)—True bills were returned by the McDowell county grand jury today against sixty strikers from the Clinchfield and Marion Manufacturing company mills charging them with rioting and rebellion.

Alfred L. Hoffman, southern organizer for the United Textile Workers of America, was indicted on charges of inciting to riot and rebellion.

The charges against the strikers grew from a riot August 31 in which Sheriff Oscar Adkins and several deputies were driven from the Clinchfied mill village by a mob of strikers.

Troops were called to Marion to preserve order after the riot and remained here until last Friday. The strikes were settled by arbitration, the strikers agreeing to return to work on a 55-hour week at the same rate of pay. Previously they had worked a sixty hour week.

JUSTICE HELD ON TECHNICAL CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

PATCHOGUE, N. Y., Sept. 16—(AP)—Death of a woman in an automobile collision here today caused police to hold the woman's husband and a justice of the state supreme court on technical charges of manslaughter.

Supreme Court Justice John McGrate, of Sagcliff, N. Y., and John Newbert, of Elmhurst, whose wife, Catherine, died immediately after the crash, were drivers of the cars which collided on a country road on Middle Island, near here.

Newbert was taken to Dayview hospital suffering from internal injuries. Justice McGrate suffered a broken nose and lacerations of the head. Mrs. Flora McGrate, his wife, received contusions of the head and their son, John, Jr., suffered a broken nose and a lacerated cheek.

BELIEVE MEN SLAIN IN A BOOTLEG FEUD

ERIE, Pa., Sept. 16—(AP)—Believed by police to have been slain in a bootleg feud, the bodies of Ralph Botch and Tony Cuzzola, both of Erie, were found by two boys hunting in the woods near the highway three miles out of Tidioute today. The men had been missing from their homes since June 13, last.

One of the men had been shot twice through the head. The other had one bullet wound and indications were that his head had bene pounded with a blunt instrument.

KILLED WHILE SPEEDING FROM EARLIER CRASH

SCHROONLAKE, N. Y., Sept. 16—(AP)—Speeding on after his car sideswiped another, near here, Hector Hamelin, 23, of Champlain, Clinton county, crashed farther down the road and he was killed. Pinned under the car, he was badly mangled. None of the occupants in the Massachusetts car he hit was injured.

New York Quiet On Eve Of City Primaries

Two Republicans Are Contending For the Position of Mayor Walker.

NEW YORK, Sept. 16—(AP)—An apathetic electorate yawned on the eve of the city primaries tomorrow.

There was plenty of noise and publicity, and while two republican contenders for the position of [illegible] James J. Walker carried on their campaigns to the last, many of the voters turned their interest to the smaller fry—candidates for borough offices and seekers for posts in the state legislature.

The prohibition issue technically has nothing to do with the municipal primaries, but it has placed Former State Senator William M. Bennett of Brooklyn, a desert dry whose campaign slogan has been "close the speakeasies" into independent opposition against Congressman Fiorello H. La Guardia regular designee and a wet.

Mayor Walker, Tammany born and bred, is unopposed for renomination as the democratic candidate. Richard E. Enright, former police commissioner, is running for the nomination independently on the square deal ticket and Norman Thomas, socialist candidate for president of the last election, is his party's only candidate for mayor.

The contest for the mayoralty, however, has not aroused the electorate to the degree anticipated, and the 1,881,599 voters of the Metropolits, looked to neighborhood political fights for what interest the morrow might hold.

This was particularly so in Queens borough, hot-bed of politics and graft. Here five men want to be borough president and both the democratic and republican parties are seeking control of the Surrogate's post, considered the chief dispensary of patronage.

DEVELOPMENTS IN MURDER TRIAL OF MRS. PANTAGES

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Sept. 16.—(AP)—Three surprising developments enlivened the second degree murder trial of Mrs. Alexander Pantages here today. The wife of the wealthy theatre owner is charged with responsibility for the death of Juro Rokomuto, Japanese, in an automobile collision here last June 16 and with driving while intoxicated.

The first two actions which created a furore among the opposing counsel as well as in the crowded court room, came immediately after court convened this morning. This had been delayed for a conference in the court chamber during which Chief Prosecutor James P. Costello announced that a "surprise" witness would be called who had told him of acting as "go between" for a defense witness, John Conterno, and Alexander Pantages, millionaire husband of the woman on trial. Costello said this witness, Jack B. Yellin had reported that Conterno assured Yellin of "plenty of dough" for his services.

Assertions that the jury had been "hung" before the trial started, alleged to have been made by the Rev. Robert P. (Fighting Bob) Shuler from his pulpit yesterday and in his radio talk last night, was the next sensation to enter the case. Superior Judge Carlo S. Change In The Wind Saved City From Fire

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 16(AP)—Destruction rode rampant today on two great waves of flames in Oregon and Washington.

Forty miles southeast of Portland, in the Mont Hood National forest, 19,000 acres were burned over, at least five residences destroyed and hotel and two schoolhouses reduced to ashes in fires that started a week ago.

Only a change in the wind saved the city of Estacada, 35 miles southeast of Portland from destruction. A terrific wall of flame ten miles across bore down upon the town and had advanced to within five miles of it before the wind slackened and permitted fire fighters to take a fresh stand.

In Clark county, Washington, a great fire in the Yacolt area imperiled the once busy lumbering town and drove more than 200 residents from their homes. Those fighting the fire sent out an appeal for the assistance of the 900 army troops stationed at Vancouver barracks. The situation, residents said, was beyond their control.

The communities of La Barre, Garfield, Ladee and Fenton were hit hard by the same fire that menaced Estacada. Property damage estimated at $120,000 was done by the flames. This loss included destruction of the La Barre Inn, a summer resort valued at $50,000; the R. Thomas Cater ranch valued at $10,000, and a $30,000 crop of ginseng; the $10,000 P. L. Anderson summer home, two schoolhouses and several other residences and ranch buildings.

Tye Hacolt, Wash. fire constituted a grave menace to that once flourishing lumber town. Two hundred residents abandonded their homes today when the fire threatened to entrap them. It was feared that soon nothing would remain of the town. Highways leading from the place were packed with trucks and automobiles conveying household goods from the stricken community.

Philip Rowe, 65, a rancher, was burned to death in the Bell mountain fire, 30 miles northeast of Vancouver, Wash., today and his wife and son seriously burned in a fire that destroyed their homes. Mrs. Fred Dudley was severely burned when her ranch near Skye, Washington, was destroyed.

Major General John L. Hines, commanding officer of the ninth corps area, today instructed the commanding general at Vancouver barracks, to communicate with the district fire warden's office in Portland and to render such assistance as necessary in fighting fires near Vancouver, Wash.

The order was sent in response to urgent requests for help from the Vancouver chamber of commerce, and the sheriff's office at that city, which said forest fires had gotten out of control.

TRADING IN STOCKS ON CHICAGO BOARD OF TRADE

CHICAGO, Sept. 16—(AP)—For the first time in its 81 years of existence, organized trading in stocks was started today by the Chicago board of trade and total sales for the day were 65,075 shares. This officials of the board of trade said exceeded their anticipations.

Trading was started with 20 issues of 14 companies, and officials said the list would be augmented as soon as the exchange's ability to digest the list was demonstrated.

The tense situation existing between the Chicago Board of Trade and the Chicago Stock Exchange over the former's inauguration of securities dealings was eased somewhat during the day when stock exchange directors voted to permit members to execute orders on the board of trade stock list, but forbade them to take a profit from transactions on both floors.

ALLIED TROOPS END TWO YEAR WATCH ON THE RHINE

It is Estimated That 1,500 Apartments Housing Officers Will Soon Be Given Over to the German Population in Coblenz—Fear is Expressed That French Troops Will Take the Places of Evacuating British Forces in Wiesbaden and the Suburbs—French Members of the Commission Do Not Believe French Will Replace the British.

COBLENZ, German, Sept. 16(AP)—No fanfare of trumpets is marking the departure of the allied troops after their two year watch on the Rhine but almost imperceptibly a great change alreay is making itself and the ranks of foreigners here are thinning.

It is estimated that 1,500 apartments housing officers will shortly be at the disposal of the German population in Coblenz and the personnal of the inter-allied high commission will be reduced from 300 to between 35 and 40. A large number of employes of both the army and the commission speeded the evacuation process by going on leave before the beginning of the active troop movements. Now French rolling stock is on the move, partly homeward to France and partly to the third zone which continues occupied.

The British are removing virtually none of their supplies and property and the Germans are coming in for many bargains.

Despite denials in various quarters there are still apprehensions lest the French troops take the places of the evacuating British forces in Wiesbaden and the suburbs. These apprehensions were expressed today at the offices of the German commissioner, Baron Langworth Von Cimmerin, who is liaison officer between the ministry for the occupied area, and the Interallied Rhineland commission.

"Our greatest concern now is not the British evacuation which is proceeding as scheduled but what may follow it."

"From all over the Rhineland anxious inquiries have reached us in the course of the day whether it is true that the French will take up quarters at Wiesbaden," said Herr Knoch, "the greatest excitement prevails throughout the Rhineland about this rumor. We have no official information one way or the other and can only hope that the rumor will prove unfounded for it would be a vital blow to the pacification of the Rhineland if Wiesbaden should billet large contingents of French troops."

The general impression is that the final decision rests with the French commander in chief here, General Guillaymat, whether the remnant of the inter-allied Rhineland commission is to go to Wiesbaden with only the formality of an honor guard of one company or with the full battle strength of a French infantry battlion and a regiment of cavalry as rumored in London reports.

French members of the commission, themselves, however, say they do not believe the latter course will be followed. It is pointed out, moreover, that 150 French soldiers already have been at Wiesbaden for some time and would suffice under present conditions as an honor guard for a commission of only a few dozen, thus obviating the necessity of sending any new French occupying force at all to the famous spa.

It is expected in well informed circles that the commission will go to Wiesbaden, shortly with the French Commissioner Tirad remaining in charge. It is understood that the members will be accompanied by officials of the German federal commission who will also be transferred to Wiesbaden for the purpose of smoothing the way toward evacuation, completing the readjustment and reducing the possibility of friction with the civilian population to a minimum.

COLCHESTER

FIREMEN'S FIELD DAY PROVES VERY ENJOYABLE

About twenty-six members of Colchester Fire Co. had a field day at Liebman's grand lake hotel, near William's pond Sunday afternoon and evening. At 1 o'clock a roast duck dinner was served following which speeches were made. Fire Chief Brown spoke on the need of several hundred feet of new hose for fire fighting purposes. He stressed the fact that the installation of a running water system about the borough would be too expensive a burden for the tax-payers to bear but instead of an up-to-date water system he urged that at least five hundred feet of hose be purchased, to supplement they twelve hundred feet on hand. In Chief Brown's opinion, only by providing this will borough property owners receive the full measure of fire protection due them. A number of those present stoutly supported Mr. Brown in his stand on the matter. By purchasing the extra length of hose, the large borough cisterns in the park can be used to protect residence the full length of North Main street to the Bock house and the full length of south Main street as far as the Hall Hill corner. It is felt that the lower ends of these two streets have an insufficient supply of water in case of a serious fire.

Joseph Ezekiel Falk, local sportsman, lent a humorous touch to the after-dinner program with stories of the big four pound trout which broke his heavy line while he was wading the brooks about the town last spring, in an affort to beat Lloyd W. Brown's record catch of a twenty-four ounce speciman.

Following the dinner, boating and swimming was enjoyed in the lake. Tennis and bowling matches and a baseball game were also features of the afternoon's program. Augustus Gregory made the high score of 93 in bowling, Irving Strick scored 92 while Joseph Falk scored 80.

During the afternoon there was a baseball game between the married and single men, the single men winning 13 to 11. Chief Brown was pitcher and Herman Conrad was catcher for the bachelors, while Joseph Agranovitch pitched and I. Cohen was catcher for the benedicts.

The members of the committee in charge of the affair were: Irving Strick, I. Cohen, James W. O'Brien, Augustus Gregory and Harold F. Brown.

The event proved so successful that Chief Brown expects to make plans for an even more elaborate program for next year.

Mrs. Mary Foote Gallup of Wethersfield is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. G. B. Miller.

TWENTY-EIGHTH ANNUAL PRESENTATION

NEW LA SALLES
NEW FLEETWOODS

A greater line of more than 50 magnificent new types and models

New Designs—Lower Racier Lines—Greater Seating Capacity—Larger Engines—More Power and Speed—Richer Finer Fisher and Fleetwood Bodies—Non-Shatterable Security-Plate Glass Standard Equipment in All Windows, Doors and Windshields—Syncro-Mesh Silent-Shift Transmission—Safety-Mechanical Four-Wheel Brakes—New Harmonized Steering System—New Recessed Instrument Panel—Every Essential Engineering and Mechanical Feature Refined Beyond all Previous Cadillac Standards

With the advent of these three superb lines of new Cadillacs, La Salles and Fleetwoods, in a lower and wider price range, the doors automatically open to admit thousands of new owners to the Cadillac family.

The market has never known cars as highly perfected or as complete in every major and minor detail. So, too, on a price comparison basis, the market has never offered so large a measure of in-built worth.

So sharp and striking is the advantage in favor of Cadillac, La Salle and Fleetwood in the performance, appearance and price alignment of this greatest of all Cadillac programs, that it amounts to the creation of a new Cadillac business and a new and vastly greater Cadillac public.

Cadillac, the world's quality standard, becomes also the price and value standard of the world by which all other car values must come to be judged.

Expressed in the fewest possible words with a full sense of their weight and importance, Cadillac promises in these three groups the greatest chassis value, the greatest body value, and the greatest gross and net monetary value known to the motor industry of the world today.

The first promise of greater chassis value can quickly be demonstrated by description, examination and part-and-quality comparison with the world's costliest cars.

It can be proved likewise by performance demonstration—revealing measures of power, speed and acceleration, transmission ease, braking certainty and riding luxury which even Cadillac-La Salle-Fleetwood have not attained before.

The second promise will reveal itself at a glance in Fisher and Fleetwood bodies so rich and beautiful that the average body appears almost tawdry by comparison.

The third promise can be verified by studying the very best that the market offers in chassis, performance and appearance and noting how far beyond this other best the Cadillacs, La Salles and Fleetwoods go in all respects.

A summing up of this comparison can have only one result—proof positive of the statement printed above and reprinted here for emphasis:

Cadillac, the world's quality standard, has become also the price and value standard of the world by which all other motor-car values must come to be judged.

Not in any one thing but in all things—in speed plus acceleration plus power plus economy plus appearance plus non-shatterable Security-Plate Glass plus Syncro-Mesh Silent-Shift Transmission plus Safety-Mechanical Four-Wheel Brakes—so unmistakably the greatest monetary value of the industry that no buyer need call upon a salesman to point it out for him.

DANIELSON

FOOTBALL SEASON OPENS FOR KILLINGLY ON FRIDAY

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 16—Evan C. Richardson, faculty member and coach of Killingly's football team this season, will keep his squad of players busy this week in preparation for the opening game of the season with Bartlett high school at Webster next Friday afternoon. Killingly high's squad is small this fall and the a team something of an unknown quality as yet. However, Alvord, Young, Arnold, Anderson, Kimball, Knight and a few other players there is a group around which a worthy team may be developed. Coach Richardson said this morning that Dr. F. P. Todd has graciously offered to make without compensation physical examinations of members of the football squad.

Deputy Game Warden Gurdon E. Withey calls attention to the fact that sportsmen who take hunting dogs afield for exercising or training prior the opening of the hunting season must get a permit to do so from the state fish and game commission. Even with a permit, dogs will not be allowed afield for exercising or training on Sundays.

Dairymen are having a more or less difficult time in many cases throughout this territory in feeding their herds and at the same time conserving the winter supply of hay for the animals because the long drought has damaged pasture lands. In some instances herds have been reduced in order to solve the farmers' problem. No scarcity of milk has as yet been reported in this section, nor is there likely to be one in a territory from which so much of this commodity is shipped to city markets every day.

Borough officials today expressed a desire for a good attendance at the special borough meeting called for Tuesday evening to reaffirm action taken earlier this year to the end that Danielson may undertake its sidewalk building program. The earlier meeting authorized the undertaking of the work and made an appropriation of $15,000 available for carrying it out. As has been previously explained, the action was taken at a time when, it has since developed, Danielson's new charter might be regarded as temporarily invalid, a situation that now has been corrected. If the action of Tuesday evening's meeting is favorable, building of sidewalks will begin in the near future, and there is a likelihood that the work will start on Mechanic street, where it is proposed a new concrete walk be built along the easterly side of the thoroughfare.

It was pointed out today that many kinds of vegetables may and will be exhibited at the Brooklyn fair the coming week, the prohibition of certain exhibits because of the corn-borer quarantine regulations extending only to a few specified varieties of vegetables and to cut flowers.

Motorists going to the fair in Scring-field this week from eastern Connecticut will do well to avoid the route through Palmer, between which place and Springfield highway construction is underway, Herbert J. Barnett and Henry A. Myers told today of being held up for from 45 minutes to a whole hour in one traffic tieup in which miles of cars were involved. Preferred routes to Springfield now are via Stafford Springs or Hartford.

Arthur DeForest of Leo J. L'Homme post, American Legion, stated this morning that a meeting is to be held in Legion hall next Sunday afternoon to discuss plans for Armistice day. Letters have been sent to various patriotic and civic organizations inviting them to be represented at this meeting. Mr. DeForest said that a three days carnival entertainment, closing on Armistice day, will be one feature of the observance. A card of boxing bouts also is being arranged as a feature of the observance and there will be a fireworks display.

Letters have been received by many persons here inviting them to make an annual donation to the Day Kimball hospital of Putnam. The appeal for this worthy project is made here through the Killingly Woman's club through Mrs. R. D. Banigan, chairman of the special committee in charge of the work. It is hoped to have all the donations in by Monday of next week.

The week end produced only a mini-mum of business for the town court, and at this morning's session Judge W. Fenner Woodward presiding, the only case was that of a man charged with having been intoxicated.

Misses Gertrude Reynolds of North Main street and Rose Heneault of Dayville left this morning to enter Mt. St. Vincent's college on the Hudson for a four years' course of study.

Wednesday evening the annual meet-ing of the Danielson Federation of Churches is to be held in the Jacobs Memorial library of the Westfield Congregational church, which church will be represented in the meeting by the following delegates: Alex S. Booher, Miss Louise W. Danielson, George B. Guild, Mrs. T. E. Hammett and Rev. Harding W. Gaylord.

Mrs. Louis Hilton and daughter, Grace, of Academy street, are spending the week with relatives in Boston.

There is the possibility, it is said, that the state highway department will have a red reflector erected at the entrance of Westcott road, opposite Hutchins street, to reduce the danger of accidents on this corner.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Pluze of Carter street were visitors in Norwich this afternoon.

Two candidates for office in Killingly at the annual town election the first Monday in October—Town Clerk and Treasurer Frank T. Preston, republican, and Town Tax Colector James R. Walsh, democrat—have both the republican and democratic nominations for their respective offices and are sure of re-election.

This afternoon the funeral of Adolph Bomier, an infant, was held from the home in Goodyear, with burial at Dayville. Four little girls acted as bearers. J. E. Kennedy was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Collector Sidney H. Perry is receiving a steady flow of borough tax money, payments having been underway for the past week.

DINSDALE BOY STILL IN CRITICAL CONDITION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 16—The condition of Walter Dinsdale, 7-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. H. T. Dinsdale, of Main street, was reported by the officials at the Day Kimball today as unchanged. The boy is continued on the danger list and is suffering from internal injuries.

It developed today, following an investigation by Officer Edward Benoit of the local police, that Dinsdale, who had been playing with friends, was hurrying to his home in order to go to a moving picture show. He darted out from behind a building in front of a parked automobile and without looking to see if the highway was clear, ran into the car being operated by George H. Bishop. The slowly moving vehicle knocked him down and into the path of the front wheel which passed over his chest. Bishop in a statement to police said that he did not see the boy, but felt the thud of the wheel as it struck the ground after it passed over Dinsdale. He stopped immediately. Dinsdale was in extreme pain but was still conscious. The driver rushed him to the hospital where x-ray pictures were taken and medical treatment given.

Miss Geraldine Page of Main street who saw the accident related a similar story to Officer Benoit as did Mrs. Addie Albury, also of Main street, who witnessed the mishap. The testimony of each woman purported to exonerate Bishop, against whom no criminal charges have been made by the police.

A mid-September wedding took place this morning at eight o'clock at St. Mary's church when Miss Jeanette Lacroix, daughter of Mrs. Melvina Lacroix of Mechanics street and George Lajeunnesse, son of Emile Lajeunnesse, of Barber street, were married. As the bridal party entered the church the "Bridal Chorus" from Lohengrin was played by Miss Rose Metras, church organist. The alter was decorated with white gladioli and palms. Rev. Ernest J. Boileau, curate at St. Mary's performed the ceremony and also celebrated the nuptial high mass. At the offertory Gounod's "Ave Maria" was sung by the choir The bride wore a period gown of white satin. Her veil of tulle combined with lace was arranged in cap effect and caught with orange blossoms. She carried an arm bouquet of Briercliffe roses. Camille Brodeur of Barber street, attended Mr. Lajeunnesse as best man. A wedding reception was held immediately after the ceremony at the home of the bride on Mechanics street.

After a short wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Lajeunnesse will make their home at 172 Mechanics street. For travelling the bride wore a tan dress and a hat to harmonize.

In seventh inning of the baseball game played between Putnam Silk Sox and the North Grosverndale nine, George Bates a member of the visiting team suffered an injury to his left leg. The accident happened when Bates, after hitting an infield grounder, reached first base with the ball. Marion, first baseman for the local team, endeavoring to make the put out and retire the side, swung his hand around to touch Bates and in some manner caused the runner to twist his body and fall. Dr. B. P. Murphy, a fan, left his seat in the grandstand and went to the aid of Bates, who afterwards was taken to the Day Kimball hospital for x-ray examinations. It was disclosed today that a bone in Bate's foot was dislocated.

Miss Elizabeth C. Finnery, of 6 High street, Worcester, Mass., was arrested this morning by State Officer John T. Murphy of Danielson barracks on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. The arrest of the Finnery girl took place following Officer Murphy's investigation of an automobile accident which occurred in North Grosvernale. Miss Finnery together with Henry Thoman of Flushing, L. I. was riding from Worcester to Providence. At about two o'clock this morning while passing through the textile village their car shot to the left hand side of the highway, struck a post, and created much damage to the car. Thoman was thrown from the front seat sustaining a compound fracture of the leg besides many severe body bruises. Miss Finnery, the driver, was badly cut and x-ray pictures of her chest were taken but they disclosed no injuries. Both were taken to the Day Kimball hospital. Following the driver's discharge from the hospital this morning Officer Murphy placed her under arrest and arranged for a hearing in justice court in Grosvernsdale this afternoon.

Treasurer Arthur F. Hughes of the Putnam Savings bank has purchased from Cashier Arthur E. Smith of the Citizens National bank, the latter's beautiful home on Seward street. Mr. and Mrs. Smith are to remove to another residence on School street. Mr. Hughes came to Putnam from Danielson where he was formerly a bank official in that town. The real estate transfer took place last Thursday Mr. Hughes said.

WM. M. RYAN & SONS START EXCAVATING FOR BANK SITE

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 16.—William M. Ryan and Sons, of Norwich, began the job Monday of excavating for the cellar and underpinning of the new Jewett City Savings bank, to be erected at the corner of Ashland and Main streets. The big 27-ton shovel will be in operation for several days. The great scoops are working 8 feet below the surface, where the soil is found to be so dry that clouds of dust arise with every dip of the bucket. Contractor Gilbert has put the batter-boards in place, and men are taking down the wall that fronts on Ashland street. Mr. Ryan said that more trucks would be serving the shovel Tuesday, and that there would be no delay on the job.

Sized Up Tafts Game

A bus-load, and several automobile parties went to Taftville Sunday to see the ball game between the House of David and the 7. B. Martin teams. Notable among the visitors from the borough were four members of two local teams, Tadpole Rough Necks and Malek's All Stars. These players to be sure are only kids, but when it comes to being posted on all the finer points of baseball, it may well be left to them. The impressions of one of the lads, as he told about the game, proved of much interest. Said he: "Them Velvet mill guys was easy meat for the Whisker Babies," adding that "part of the time they played ball and the rest they played circus." The local experts were very much excited about the "Holy David" pitcher and their slap-stick first baseman. That the borough prospectives are proper fans is evident, for they raised the bus fare down, then walked the 7 miles back. One young T. R. N. chap actually caught one of the fly balls batted out by the big, red-whiskered home run swatter of the David team, during the practice before the game. Today, that boy has all the marbles, and coming home from school Monday, a crowd of admirers trailed along behind, while others were overheard to say, "That's him! That's the guy!"

The Ladies' Aid society of Newent Congregational church is planning to meet Wednesday afternoon at the Community hall.

Rattlers In His Sawdust Perhaps

A. W. Park, who lives near the Griswold line, has had a saw-mill in operation of late, at a nearby wood lot, known as Rattlesnake ledge. One day, early last week, Frank Burton came over, and asked of Mr. Park, the privilege of filling a half dozen bags with saw dust to be used for some domestic purpose. As Mr. Burton was getting his load ready to take away he noticed on the ground nearby the dust pile, two small eggs, which he put into his coat pocket. A few days later, when dumping one of the bags out from the saw dust, squirmed 15 lively wigglers. Rattlesnakes have been found in these ledges so Mr. Burton took his day-old brood to the state hatchery at Mystic, where a government expert will pass upon their identity.

Chances are taken when women run to get across the railroad bridge ahead of a moving train on they way to work in the Ninigret Co. mills. Just a few feet below is a private bridge which would be much safer. A mis-step would be fatal, with only five minutes or much less to spare, as was the chance taken by two women Monday. To be sure the train was not moving very fast, but it was coming.

THE UNITED WORKERS' APPEAL

In making its annual appeal to the people of Norwich for funds with which to expand the work which it has been doing in Norwich for the last half century, the United Workers present a straightforward business proposition.

Through the accomplishments of the various branches of this organization Norwich has profited greatly. It has seen the work grow from a small beginning, seen the several institutions increased in size and accommodations and witnessed the fine results that have been obtained in departmental activities. The result has been to appreciate not only the thought that prompted the founders of the United Workers but the gifts that have made it possible to carry on and the attainments which stand to its credit. The organization has been a great blessing to Norwich in the years that are gone, it promises just as much for the future but there are opportunities for additional developments which depend upon the receipt of the necessary funds to finance them.

It is this proposition of having this provided for Norwich that the United Workers has this week placed before the people of this city.

Having employed its income from those endowment funds which have been generously provided, it rests now with the contributions which are made by the people of Norwich as to whether it can go ahead with new efforts. Present activities will be maintained but there are additional needs which require attention. The desirability of expanding the work cannot fail to make its appeal, and there is no better way of giving endorsement to those things that have been accomplished, and the admirable service that is being rendered without a cent of cost to the community, than by providing the means that will make it possible.

Here is an opportunity for the people of Norwich, through large and small contributions, to make this invaluable organization a greater asset to the community. It is a home proposition, dealing with home problems and aimed at relieving distress, unfortunate and unhealthy conditions.

This is not solely a proposition for the women, for it will be remembered that the men have been from the first, strong and enthusiastic backers of the United Workers, but whatever has the welfare of Norwich so thoroughly at heart should get liberal support from all its citizens.

AIR MAIL

More and more mail is being carried by airplane. It is the quickest transportation that can be obtained and greatly speeds the handling of postal matter so far as getting it from one landing field to another. When it comes to moving the mail matter to one postoffice from the landing field, or when the transportation of the mail to the field, especially in large cities, the situation is entirely different. Even though the mail wagon is supposed to have the right of way there are always jams and congestions which cannot be avoided.

This has prompted the suggestion that mail tubes be employed for the handling of this mail. The reasonableness of this is indicated when it is claimed that it takes about as long to get the mail to or from the landing field for New York city as it does to transport it from New York to Boston through the air. In other words, while the mail is being expeditiously handled over the long distance it is still subject to serious delays over the short haul.

There is the possibility that developments will be of such a character in a few years that the handling of the mail between cities will be done by the planes alighting on the roofs of the postoffices for which the mail is intended, but it is not possible now and there's no telling when it will be. In the meantime there is justification for the thought that is being given to the overcoming of the handicap to speeder handling.

Air tubes have been in use for many years for overcoming the delays which are caused by city congestion. They have had their ups and downs but are in use at the present time and handling millions of pieces of mail a day. With such a service connecting the landing field with the postoffice in New York city, Boston or other large city which has the nucleus of such a system air mail service would mean much more than it does today. Cutting down the time between cities is an accomplished fact. Now it remains to cut down the time in the cities, and because one transportation advantage is gained through the air there is no reason why the fast service should not be completed by sending the mail under ground.

TIME FOR PROOF

When China asked for the ending of the extraterritoriality treaties with foreign powers there was no question but what it was sincere. It believes that it should shoulder the responsibilities which are now assumed under the treaties by other nations in China. In that desire China displays the right ambition, but it has failed to convince the other nations that it is able to do as it desires. But when China declares that it will tolerate the situation only a short time longer and threatens to abolish those treaty rights by throwing them overboard if other arrangement is not made, it can hardly be believed that it is sincere. It is being carried away by its enthusiasm and is not displaying good judgment.

In reply to the Chinese request, the United States and Great Britain set forth quite firmly that the termination of the treaties could not be thought of at the present time but they were willing to enter into negotiations with China looking to their ultimate abandonment. The idea as set forth was that China should be put on a probationary test. There would be a gradual reduction of the authority exercised by the respective powers under the treaty and China would be given the chance to show what it could and would do under the circumstances. If it was found over a period of time that the Chinese government was sufficiently in control to give the protection that is required to the subjects of other nations there would then be ground for considering a date for the ending of the treaties. It was given to understand, however, that conditions at the present time are not such as to warrant any such move.

However ambitious China may be in this respect, a proposition has been put up to it which should get thorough consideration. It is offered the chance to see accomplished just what it desires. If it is really ready and willing to meet its full responsibilities to subjects of other nations it should be anxious to give an actual demonstration of it over a period of years. The proof of the pudding is said to be in the eating. China can secure the confidence of other nations in no better way than by showing what it can do.

DANGEROUS PRACTICES

Jumping onto trucks is a practice in which boys have indulged for years. There was an advantage with those of other days since they were low and slow moving, but the danger was nevertheless present and plenty of deaths resulted from slips and miscalculations.

Today when the youngsters are inclined to do the same thing with motor vehicles that their fathers may have done with horse drawn trucks they realize that it is a different proposition but they are not halted. They are confident that they will succeed, are in fact determined to do so, and they take unlimited chances until the wonder is, in spite of the fatality list, that more of them are not killed.

The danger that exists in trying to jump onto trucks, or any moving vehicles, is emphasized by the experience of a 16 year old Waterbury boy who had both legs crushed above the knees when he tried to hop a truck, lost his hold and went under the wheels.

Although trucks today are plastered with such signs as "No Riders," "Keep Off," "Danger," youngsters cannot resist the temptation to "hook" a ride unmindful of the chances they are taking and the danger which exists in such attempts not only from the vehicle which they are trying to get aboard but from others in front of which they may dodge without warning. The perils of the truck riders are greater than ever and in addition there is the menace of fast moving highway traffic.

Frequent are the expressions of complaint about truck drivers permitting children to jump on in back, but in nine cases out of ten it is probably true that they know nothing about it until the boys are ready to leave when with a whoop they will jump off in front of some other car. Another practice that sends chills up and down the spine of the drivers of other vehicles is that of the bicycle rider who will allow himself to be carried along by catching hold of the rear of an automobile. He courts trouble of a much more serious character than he contemplates.

NO BATTLESHIPS

In view of the progress that has been made in getting an understanding among nations relative to the limitation of navies, as shown in the Washington treaty, and now in the prospective agreement between the United States and Great Britain for a further understanding that will involve cruisers, the suggestion is being advanced that the time is coming when capital ships will be given up.

All things are possible and it would be foolhardy to decry such a claim even though it may be a long time before that day arrives. Already there is a limit on the big battleships, and it is pointed out that no nation is making plans for increasing the number. Whether this is so or not none is being constructed now because of the agreement and if it can be convincingly proved to the various nations that they are not needed, that protection will be insured quite as much without them as with them, provided all come to an agreement, one of the biggest items of naval expenditures will be overcome.

From the standpoint of economy all the nations may look with interest to the idea of getting along without any more capital ships. In these days of airplanes the effectiveness of the battleship is questioned. If it is not needed and necessary defense can be provided by large cruisers built for speed the opportunity for further disarmament is interestingly presented.

Thus far such a step is only in the early talk stage by those who are anticipating what might be done with profit to all concerned. Getting action in accord therewith is an entirely different matter. It would be a revolutionary step but great things are possible when nations get peace minded.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The chill in the air indicates that the only summer ahead of us is Indian summer.

There's a good chance for the second half of September to produce the cream of a usually fine month.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—Senator Walcott and "King Tut" Hoover are keeping bachelor's hall up in the big S street mansion owned by the president but leased by Mr. Walcott for a term of years.

The senator and Tut are old friends; moreover it is no new thing for the Connecticut senator to spend a summer at the Hoover home, whether or not he leased it. During the time Mr. Hoover was food administrator, Senator Walcott was one of his right hand men. When Mr. Hoover was secretary of commerce, Mr. Walcott was closely affiliated with him, and spent much time as his guest, during the long summer months when both were tied closely to the capital.

The great Belgium police dog, Tut, was turned over to Senator Walcott by what may be called the unanimous consent of the Hoovers, the Walcotts and the dog. Down at the white house the temperature is fully ten degrees higher than up on the hill where the Hoover house is located and where Tut was raised from a puppy, and he wilted under the extreme heat. He is devoted to the senator and when I asked, "How do you get along up in that big house, now you are alone?" The senator laughed and said, "Oh, I am not alone; Tut is with me, and we have the same colored man taking care of us as was there as factotum when I spent the summer with the president. We get on famously." So it seems to be another case of "WE," with Tut being the other half of the partnership until cooler weather comes. The senator and Mrs. Walcott spent the summer cruising in southern waters. On their return Mrs. Walcott went to their home in Connecticut, and the senator came here. Mrs. Walcott will join him here when the intense heat abates.

Col. John Q. Tilson stopped only long enough in Washington to attend the farewell dinner to Dr. Work and have a brief conference with President Hoover, when Tilson dropped in here a few days ago, surprising all his friends, who did not know he had been especially asked to come to the capitol that week. Tilson is in fine fettlen and ready for the session which is booked to begin October 14th, it the senate then has the tariff bill ready for the house. Otherwise there will be still further delay. No one ventures to predict the outcome of either the delay or the passage of the bill. Both are uncertain. Just how far the coalition of democrats and republican insurgents will carry, is in doubt, for both sides of the chamber are broken up by "local" issues which make the old time party predictions impossible.

Many leaders believe that at the last moment the insurgents will yield their points and take what they can get, rather than risk facing their constituents after having defeated the measure by demanding too much, and so either put out a bill that will not pass the house, or one that the president will veto. But the insurgents do not openly talk that way, whatever their last minute action may be.

One thing is certain, there will be nothing but tariff in the senate, and nothing in the house, until October 14th at the earliest. But the talk, debate, and recrimination that will take place during that period, will be limitless.

The heat in Washington during the past week was indescribable. With the mercury running high in the 90's, no relief at night, and humidity at the "dripping point," conditions were almost unbearable and Washingtonians were kept busy explaining to tourists: "It never happened before as late as September."

If any one says, "Oh, Washington isn't the worst place in the world," I suggest taking the assertion with a big grain of salt, if made at a time when heat and humidity have joined hands. Here are two examples:

Making the rounds of news-gathering this week, when the mercury stood at the top of the 90's, I went to the white house conference which the president holds twice a week with the press gallery correspondents. Mr. Hoover received us standing, but mopping his distinguished brow with a handkerchief which he kept in constant use during the half hour interview. He was dressed in white flannel, and for the first time this season showed recognition of the intense heat from which Washington has suffered. Moreover, it was the day when the president dealt unsparingly with the alleged propaganda of ship buildings firms and "outsiders" to interfere with the foreign peace movements. That didn't make him any cooler "under the collar."

After leaving the white house I went to the capitol, and dropped into the office of Senator Moses of New Hampshire, chairman of the senatorial campaign committee and president pro tempore of the senate. The senator wore what a woman fashion writer would probably describe as "A white flannel ensemble, belted and with a tuck-in blouse," for he was garbed in true outing style, white flannels, white outing shirt, coatless, with belt and all the outing fixin's. Seated at his desk the senator held a letter in one hand, and in the other, was a towel with which he mopped his face, while he discussed the political situation with a national committeeman who had come in to talk things over. And the towel was none of those little embroidered "company" affairs; it was a man's size towel and the senator kept it pretty busy.

Mr. Moses, as chairman of the senatorial campaign committee is just now at the beck and call of national committeemen from states where factional fights are cutting into the customary "safe majority" predictions. Moses is an old hand at untangling snarls in a political contest; the president wanted him as chairman for the administration needs a working majority in the senate. He will work in accord with National Chairman Huston, and it's a pretty safe guess will win out, wherever winning out is possible.

Some folks think Moses is "hard-boiled," but when he speaks of his two little grandchildren up in New Hampshire, you find out he is not, for they are the very apple of his eye, and he is going up to spend a week end with them, before he begins what will be one of the stiffest campaigns and hard working sessions of congress the country has known for many a year.

A half dozen contested election cases will be considered by congress when the regular session begins in December. They include contests in Missouri, Maryland, Florida, Indiana and Texas. The one of greatest prominence will be that concerning the election of Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owens, of Florida, daughter of the late Col. Bryan. Mrs. Owen married an Englishman at a time when by so doing she automatically relinquished her American citizenship. A new law was later passed, and Mrs. Owen after the death of her husband applied for reinstatement as an American citizen. A clause in the constitution requires a seven years residence in this country for a person to be eligible to the congress, but nothing is said about seven prior consecutive years. Mrs. Owen was born here, and is many times seven years a resident, but not immediately prior to her election. Her election will be contested on the ground that she was not eligible. It is not expected, however, that the claim of her contestant will be upheld. Mrs. Owen will probably retain her seat, but the case will rouse much general interest and will also set a precedent for future similar instances, should they arise. Each branch of congress is by the constitution authorized to judge the qualifications and eligibility of members of its own bodies.

A little group of New England political "wisemen" were chatting in the hotel lobby on the utter impossibility of men, who had long been in the limelight, becoming reconciled to dropping off the front page when new events of note crowded them out. One of the group laughed and said "that reminds me of a good joke Gen. Pershing is fond of telling about himself. Just after the war, and his return to this country, he was the headliner of all metropolitan newspapers. Time went on, and one morning, the general while at breakfast threw the morning paper aside with the remark: 'It's very dull; there is nothing in it.' Whereupon his son Warren, then a small boy, innocently inquired: 'Does that mean there is nothing in it about you, Dad?' They say the general tells the story with great glee, and admitted the kid was probably right."

YOUR HEALTH

By John A. Reed, M. D.
Washington, D. C.
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

All of us are interested in adding years to our lives in order to accomplish the ideals which we have created, but when a man has been pronounced a diabetic he must surely be that much more anxious as to his future.

The first question naturally asked when a diagnosis of diabetes is made is whether it is curable. The correct answer at the present time is no, but that one need not die, much less be incapacitated in his life's activities or suffer any physical discomfort therefrom. To be told that one has an incurable illness is at first indeed depressing; but this is the dark side. Some of the happiest of patients are diabetics and particularly those who have had an opportunity to learn of the ill results of untreated or improperly treated diabetes. One of the bright sides of this illness is told us by the insurance companies who say, based on their large statistical material, that a diabetic lives longer today than the average individual. Another bright spot for the diabetic patient is that it is one disease which is controllable, in which the individual can carry on his daily activities, and from which he need have no fear as to the future if he follows properly given instructions.

The management of diabetes is primarily a problem of diet. A proper diet of known amount of carbohydrate, protein and fat foods (and this can only be known by weighing the food on food scales) is the basis and keynote of successful treatment. The patient's weight should be maintained at its proper level for the age and height of the individual or a little under, but should never exceed this weight as obesity is definitely harmful. Diet should be sufficient in general to maintain this weight, but if sugar is excreted in the urine on a given maintenance diet then insulin must be given by hypodermic injection only (insulin given by mouth or in any other form is at present ineffective). Insulin must be given in sufficient amounts to prevent loss of sugar by kidney excretion and maintaining the normal amount of sugar in the blood.

Your medical advisor should be consulted for the details of management. You are the one that lives with this illness and therefore you must learn as much about diabetes as you can. Many physicians hospitalize the patient at the beginning of treatment, not because they are so critically ill but as a matter of schooling, and this procedure often is a time and finance saver. Numerous manuals are published as well as pamphlets by private concerns which are aids but these should only be used upon medical advice. In general foods advertised and labeled "good for the diabetic," as well as advertised "cures" are to be avoided. No medicine or foods should be taken unless properly advised. There are certain minor hardships and restrictions encountered in abiding by the rules of the diabetic game, but these are overbalanced by good health. Untreated or improperly treated diabetes condemns a person to chronic invalidism unnecessarily, besides making one liable to the complication of the disease which are the destroyers of life.

THE NEEDED PUSH

"Hello, mumsy," Helen Brown began bubbling before she got the door open, "your angel child has done another good turn for a sister in distress. Kind hearts are more than coronas."

"Coronets, my dear," corrected Mrs. Brown.

"Your little daughter," Helen kept effervescing, "brought a ray of sunshine into the life of a love-lorn damsel, and goodness knows the damsel needed it. Love," proclaimed Helen, "may not be blind, but it's certainly dumb."

"It's Bessie Briggs," Helen gushed on. "She cherishes a burning passion for one Herbert Wilson. Bert looks like a Greek god—like two, in fact. Nature loaded him up with the physique, but kind of scrimped on the pepper. Bert would be a knockout as a public statue, but as a suitor, no!"

"A statue?" repeated the bewildered Mrs. Brown.

"You don't get me, mumsy? In the lavender-scented phrase of our grandmothers, then, Bess is goofy over Bert, and while Bert is always acting the marble statue around Bess, he never whispers the words that lead to so-called easy payments on a diamond ring."

"You mean," asked Mrs. Brown with more interest, "he won't pop the question?"

"No more pop," said Helen, "than flat ginger ale. But Mrs. Brown's little girl has taken a hand. By my instructions, Bess took her Mestrovic Indian to see 'Flames That Burn.' In that gift to femininity the hero glimpses a girl speeding by in a late eight.

"He knocks out a traffic cop and chases her on the cop's motorcycle. She goes up in a balloon. He follows her in a plane. She jumps out with a parachute. The hero jumps without one and proposes as he passes her in the air. At this point," announced Helen, "Bert squeesed Bess' hand so hard she almost cried from mingled joy and pain."

"A good sign," commented Mrs. Brown.

"Yes, if Bert hadn't explained he thought he was clutching the arm of his chair. But Bess reports that as they came out of the temple of thrills Bert was muttering 'That fellow's given me a hunch,' so I think," concluded Helen, "one more selected film will give him the needed push."

"And how," asked Mrs. Brown a few evenings later, "is the affair of your friend Bess progressing?"

"Didn't she — ah — continue the treatment?"

"Oh, yes," answered Helen. "She took Bert to see 'Flames That Sear.' In that slice of life the hero knocks out ten bandits, bursts in a couple of doors, tunnels into the next house with a nail file, and tears open a safe with his bare hands just in time to save the girl from suffocation. Bert was so interested he nearly squeezed Bess' hand off."

"Did he know what it was?" slyly asked Mrs. Brown.

"Then," Helen warmed up, "as the hero drapes the girl over his stalwart shoulder, Bert leans over to Bess, and says, 'I was always slow and bashful.' 'Yes, Bert,' whispers Bess. 'But after watching these guys on the screen,' says Bert, 'I guess I can do anything they can.' 'Yes, Bert.'"

"So he did propose?" exclaimed the now deeply interested Mrs. Brown.

"'And so,' says Bert, 'I'm going to ask you——' 'Yes, Bert,' whispers Bess, kind of faint like. 'I'm going to ask you,' says Bert, 'to tell the boss I won't be in tomorrow. I'm off to Hollywood to bust into the movies.'" —Exchange.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Autumn Days.

Mr. Editor: How rapidly the days, the weeks and the months roll on! Now we have September and to some of us it seems but yesterday when we welcomed the new year in. And now we have the autumn days, with the wondrous flowers that are the work of nature and that are spread with a lavish hand through the fields and upon the hills of old New England. Here I recall W Herbert Carruth's beautiful tribute to "Autumn Days"—

A haze on the far horizon,
The ripe, rich tint of the cornfields,
The infinite tender sky,
And the wild geese sailing high,
And all over upland and lowland
The charm of the goldenrod,
Some of us call it autumn,
And others call it God.

How we did love to go roaming through the woods in the early autumn days. As we walked along and heard the crackling of the leaves as we shuffled through the dim aisles of the forests, for understand some 60 odd years ago the woods were almost in as primitive a condition as they were when the Indians wandered to and fro, and gazed upon these scenes of nature. We would wander without any definite idea as to where we were going. Just idling along, starting in about where Kramer's ice houses are located today and then into the woods and wandering along to nowhere in particular. As you moved onward the silence would only be broken now and then by the breaking of a stick as some one of the many denizens of the woods fled frightened at your approach. Or perhaps a squirrel would bark at you and scold you for having trespassed upon his private property; and if you made a move in his direction, he would scurry up a tree, and always be on the opposite side where you could only get a glimpse of him now and then. Can you imagine anything more wonderful than a trip or ramble out through nature's fairy land? Where else can be seen the beautiful colors of the foliage, the wild sumac with all its variegated colors. When Jack Frost touches the foliage with his icy fingers, he leaves the woods all in a blaze of glory and everything looks as though the most glorious sunset had tarried and had been caught with all its wondrous colors and pictured here. And so you wander on, you take the path of least resistance, the one that seems as the most traveled. Care stops here, you leave your troubles behind, for there is something in all this that cannot be defined, for you are out here, away from the noise and turmoil of the artificial life of the city. The fresh air, and in fact everything, that moves the very deepest recesses of the mind, makes every man marvel at the wondrous works of the Ruler of the universe. Perhaps in our youthful days we do not see all this, for youth is careless and carefree, and yet nothing is overlooked for in many cases the boy sees and then stores it away in memory's storehouse for the years that are to come. All this comes back to every one of us as we recall the pleasures of our childhood days. They serve to bring back once again to the old man the simple pleasures of his youth, and carry him back to his home and the woods and fields of early days in New England. Who can describe this as it requires for other men and other woods have told all this in story. Dickens, the master mind, has said: "Who can describe the pleasure and delight, the peace of mind, felt in the balmy air, and among the green hills and rich woods of an inland village."

The memories which peaceful country scenes call up are not of this world, or of its thoughts or hopes. The gentle teachings of nature may cause us to weave fresh garlands for our loved ones, may purify our thoughts and cause us to forget our troubles, and beneath this there lingers in the least reflective mind a vague and half formed thought of having held such feelings in some distant time which calls up solemn thoughts of other days, when we gazed upon the same scenes as we wandered along with our pals who today are only a memory. And yet we still see them, as we saw them in the long ago. As they, too, worshipped at the shrine of nature even as you and I, you can in fancy hear their voices as they called to you, and pointed out something unusual as you climbed the hills and wandered through the woods and fields near the Rose of New England. All was peace, all quietness, while care dropped from your mind, like the leaves from the trees, on these wondrous autumn days and the worshipper at any shrine reflects something of its golden glow, even as the glory of a mother's love shines like a beacon light even in the darkest hour of our lives. All this is reflected during these autumn days, and in the words of the Great Master "Seek and ye shall find."

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—The investigation of "big navy" activities of William B. Shearer ordered by the senate bade fair to prove a very interesting chapter of Hoover administration history.

Whatever else it might disclose, the admission of various shipbuilding concerns in connection with Shearer's employment as an "observer" of naval limitation conferences served to bring to the surface an aspect of Washington life not much talked of as a rule.

There have been heated and dramatic "lobby" investigations before now, notably that during the Wilson administration. President Wilson had his own troubles with "big navy" or "big army" advocates prior to the time he embanked upon the national defense program of 1916.

He, like President Hoover, boiled over in resentment against lobbyists generally and arraigned them caustically. That was what brought on the congressional investigation.

The Bystander does not recall that any very drastic anti-lobby legislation resulted. If it had, the history of the relations of the United States to the league of nations might have been a wholly different story.

Attacked in General.

President Coolidge always seemed to have a feeling that military propagandists seeking larger appropriations might impair his economy program.

He frequently referred more or less bitterly in press conferences to the activities of "admirals and generals" in that regard.

Even the budget act assumes there will be propaganda for larger appropriations within the various government departments unless checked. It provides that departmental officers may not reveal in any way the figures dealt with in formulation of the budget each year.

And under President Coolidge that clause of the act was held right over the heads of army and navy personnel particularly.

Officers of the two services feared official reprisals if they did any talking out of school. The Bystander can recall many times, however, when budgetary information as to other branches of the government leaked without any particular fuss being made about it.

The Shearer case, with its implication, at least, that American shipbuilding firms interested in prospective contracts for warship construction might have undertaken a publicity campaign to arouse public opinion against naval reduction moves, presents an entirely new angle, however.

If that should prove to be the fact—and the statements of the shipbuilders prior to the opening of the senate committee quiz indicated it would be difficult to establish definitely that they had any propaganda purpose—what of it?

Full of Them.

One thing that did stand out sharply in the Shearer case was that the white house is probably the most far-reaching publicity mechanism in the world, a fact which the Bystander has before pointed out.

The mere fact that President Hoover elected to say what he did about this presumably wholly domestic matter, made it an affair of international interest.

And then there's this about the Shearer matter: Senator Borah, by all reports, was the original discoverer of the issue. He was formulating his plans for a senate investigation days before President Hoover opened the ball at a press conference.

Salting the Radishes

When Amy found her mother working in the garden she asked her what she was doing. She was told that in a few weeks they would have some radishes. Amy disappeared in the house. In a little bit she came out with a cup of salt.

"Here, mother," she said, "put some salt in the radishes."

Her mother told her that folk didn't plant salt with radishes. "Let's us do it, mother," said Amy, "then we won't have to dip ours in salt when we eat them."

The prize story of the California deer season was recounted by William Thompson, of Santa Rosa. He fired at a buck which was standing on a steep bank and the animal fell mortally wounded. In rolling down the bank the deer locked horns with another buck, which had been under cover. The subsequent tangle enabled Thompson to shoot the second deer, his season's limit.

ON TRIP TO FACTORY OF ATWATER KENT RADIOS

Harry Rosenberg, representing the Hanover-Curland company, was one of the 256 New England radio dealers to enjoy the trip on Friday to the main Atwater Kent factory in Philadelphia which the company carried out as a good will tour for the loyalty and cooperation of its dealers in selling more than one million Atwater Kent radio receivers last year.

The dealers boarded the Atwater Kent special train at New Haven and at 7:50 a. m., on Friday arrived at West Philadelphia railroad station, where they were met by factory representatives and conducted in buses to Hotel Pennsylvania for breakfast. At 9:30 the guests left for the 32-acre factory where they were put in charge of factory experts who gave demonstration lectures on the various manufacturing processes which enables the owner of an Atwater Kent radio receiver to bring into his home beautiful music and other entertainment from all parts of the United States, and, under favorable atmospheric conditions, even from foreign countries. The dealers were astonished to witness the immensity of the plant, and were told that the materials used in the manufacture of the 1,705 parts going into the Atwater Kent receiver come from many parts of the United States and from distant parts of the world. The capacity of the plant is 12,000 radio receivers and loud speakers per day, and the management is in hope of increasing the output so as to meet with the largely increasing demand. A most outstanding device in the plant, furnishing some idea of its magnitude, is a belt two miles long which conveys supply parts to the 10,000 mechanics engaged in the various processes throughout the factory.

At 10:45, a photograph was taken of the entire delegation, who lined up in front of the factory, and at 12:30 a. m., the guests were conducted to the Pennsylvania hotel where a richly prepared luncheon was served. At the water Kent representatives addressed the gathering dwelling upon the tremendous educational and entertaining contribution made by the invention of radio toward the happiness and enlightenment of mankind. The speakers also expressed the gratitude of the Atwater Kent Co., to the dealers for their loyalty to both the company and the patronizing public. At 2:30 p. m., the guests boarded the special for Atlantic City arriving at 5:55 for a royal entertainment. The Atwater Kent Co. arranged outdoor sports, facilities for bathing, and various other entertainments, and finished its hospitality with a grand dinner at the Venitian room of the Ambassador hotel, held at 6:50 p. m., which lasted until 11 p. m. At 12 p. m. the special train left Atlantic City arriving at New Haven without an intervening stop.

Mr. Rosenberg was greatly impressed by the magnitude of the Atwater Kent plant and the elaborate sanitary arrangements incorporated in the huge factory to safeguard the health and welfare of the army of employees who form a part of the great industrial institution. The entire area of the plant is sun-flooded; it is provided with electric ice water coolers; it has excellent ventilation, sanitary wash rooms, and up to the minute lunch cafeterias are situated at convenient places. The scientific, mechanical, and supervisory ingenuity was evident in the great experimental laboratories and throughout the departments of the great plant. The entire institution is a great tribute to American modern industrial ability and leadership, which justly commands the admiration of industrial men throughout the world.

REPUBLICANS IN CAUCUS ENDORSE PRESENT GUIDANCE OF TOWN AFFAIRS

Charles L. Stewart and Mrs. Albert H. Chase were nominated as candidates for the town school board at the republican town caucus Monday evening at the town hall. Both Mr. Stewart and Mrs. Chase are new candidates and this is the first time in local history that a woman has been nominated to serve on the board. Mr. Stewart was named as successor to Frederick W. Lester, president of the school board, whose term expires next year and who declined a renomination, while Mrs. Chase was named to complete the unexpired term of James C. Macpherson, who has resigned because of ill health. Robert McNeely was nominated to succeed himself.

With well over 100 men and women present, the caucus was called to order at 8 o'clock by George M. Charbonneau, chairman of the republican town committee. On motion of Charles W. Cassidy, Henry H. Pettis was named chairman of the caucus, and was greeted with applause as he assumed the chair.

Judge Pettis thanked the caucus for the honor conferred on him. I feel it is an honor to be chairman of this caucus, he said. It may sound strange, he continued, when I say I do not think that in our choice of town and city officials, we should be ruled entirely by politics. Judge Pettis went on to explain that she believes in political parties but that there are three characteristics which we look for in town administrations, honesty, efficiency and economy. The town government we have had in Norwich the last 14 years has had these three characteristics, honesty, efficiency and economy.

Endorse Efficient Government

The question we are going to decide at the polls, October 7th, he said, is whether the government we have had the past six years under the leadership of our first selectman, William S. Murray, deserves to be endorsed for the next two years. (Applause). I think it does, he added, and I think the average voter thinks it does. Judge Pettis, at the close of his remarks, called for nominations for clerk of the caucus. Weston C. Pullen nominated Herbert W. Ferguson for the caucus clerk and he was elected. After the clerk had read the warning, Judge Pettis stated that he had an announcement to make. He pointed out that the warning called for the placing in nomination of two candidates for the town school board, but that it would be necessary to nominate three candidates instead. He announced that James C. Macpherson who has served so faithfully on the board feels that because of his health it will be impossible for him to consider a member of the board and that Mr. Macpherson's resignation had been received and regretfully accepted. Mr. Macpherson's resignation, he stated, left a third vacancy on the board to be filled. Nominations for the board of selectmen were then called for.

In nominating William S. Murray, for re-election as first selectman, Andrew B Davies said that Mr. Murray's record speaks louder than words. The only business like thing is to re-nominate and re-elect him, he said. (Applause). Mr. Murray was unanimously nominated.

For assessor Fred G. Prothero was nominated by Judge Nelson J Ayling and the board of relief nominations were Francis Beique named by Tyler D. Guy, and Edwin V. Ross, named by William R. Stevens.

Town Clerk and Town Treasurer

The selection of a candidate for town clerk and town treasurer came next. Judge Ayling called attention to the fact that this office had been held for a number of years by one incumbent (the late Charles S. Holbrook), who had been endorsed by both parties, and that now the mantle has fallen on younger shoulders. Judge Ayling stated that the selection of Harold S. Burt as temporary clerk was a happy choice on the part of the board of selectmen. He spoke of the unfailing courtesy at the town clerk's office, said it was a pleasure to meet Mr. Burt and characterized him as efficient, stating that his work is always well done and that he has a corps of efficient assistants. It gives me great pleasure to nominate Harold S. Burt for nomination for town clerk and treasurer, Judge Ayling concluded. The choice was unanimous.

For Tax Collector

For tax collector the party endorsed Harold T. Robinson, the democratic candidate for this office. In nominating Mr. Robinson, Weston C. Pullen said that notwithstanding the fact that the democratic party failed to recognize the efficiency of the present town clerk it would be foolish not to recognize the efficiency of the present tax collector. He quoted State Tax Commissioner Blodgett as saying that an efficient tax collector should be kept in office.

A man in the audience raised objection. We have endorsed the tax collector for years, said the objector. The democratic party this year has put up a candidate against our town clerk. Let's put up a candidate against the tax collector.

Have you a candidate in mind, asked Judge Pettis. He evidently had no one in mind to place in nomination, for silence greeted the chairman's question. Unless there are other candidates to be named, I will put the question, and, after a pause, the question was put and with the exception of one lone "no" Mr. Robinson's endorsement was unanimous.

Harold S. Burt then nominated Frank L. Woodard, William H. Allen and Kenneth W. Fox as agents of the town deposit fund and there was no opposition to their selection. For constables Charles P. Bushnell nominated Lucius A. Fenton, George Adams named Hermides Disco, Louis Geen named Charles H. Raynes and Gustave Lambert was the choice for fourth constable.

Registrar Guy Renominated

For registrar of voters Howard S. Spaulding re-nominated Tyler D. Guy, and the nomination was unanimous. It is of interest to note that Mr. Guy has held the office of registrar of voters for 33 years, having been first nominated in the fall of 1896 and having served in that capacity continuously. William S. Murray placed James W. Semple in nomination for town auditor, the choice being unanimous.

For Town School Board

Nominations for the town school board were then called for. In nominating Robert McNeely to succeed himself this fall on the board, Judge John H. Barnes said that the greatest asset of any community is its schools.

The judge said, in the course of his remarks, that when President Hoover established his fishing camp in Virginia dozens of men were employed in digging the road to the camp and that President Hoover was surprised at the illiteracy evident in the vicinity of the camp. The president, Judge Barnes said, suggested that money be contributed by private individuals to build a school in the locality of the camp and that over $250,000 was subscribed, enough to build ten schools. That shows what the people are willing to do, Judge Barnes said.

He went on to speak of a bill now before congress providing for an appointment of a secretary of education and asked the people who are interested in the elimination of illiteracy to write their congressmen and senator requesting them to do all they can to secure passage of that bill. Judge Barnes then nominated Mr. McNeely, whose term expires this fall, for re-election to the town school board and there was no opposition to the nomination.

In nominating Charles L. Stewart as a member of the school board Mr. McNeely spoke of Mr. Lester's decision not to seek re-election at the expiration of his term of office, a year hence. We were very fortunate in securing Mr. Stewart as a nominee to succeed Mr. Lester, said Mr. McNeely. Like the previous nomination there was no opposition.

For the third candidate Mrs. Frank I. Royce nominated Mrs. Albert H. Chase to complete the unexpired term of James C. Macpherson, whose resignation was received Monday. Mrs Chase's nomination was unanimous.

Josiah Greenstein moved that the town committee be empowered to fill any vacancies that may occur on the ticket between now and the date of election and the caucus adjourned following a half hour session.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB MET AT MOHEGAN PARK

The Business and Professional Women's club of Norwich, held its first meeting since the summer recess Monday evening at Mohegan park. The meeting, which was attended by over thirty of the most enthusiastic members of the club, took the form of an out-door wienie and corn roast.

Miss Bernice Willy, armed with a weighty axe presided over the meeting, and such an effective weapon did she weild, that she was unanimously elected to the office of grand firebuilder.

Miss Lucy B. Abbott, who led an organized attack against the canine board, was supported by a zealous regiment, well equipped and armed with pointed sticks. Outsiders commented that this charge was accomplished in a most businesslike and professional manner.

One local literary light, who modestly declines to have her name published, was later awarded a croix de gurre, when it was discovered that in the heat of the battle, she did away with an even half dozen.

The affair took an unfortunate turn however, when it became necessary to court-marshall Miss Sarah J. McClellan on charges of seriously disrupting the general morale. It was definitely proven that the traitor had come to the scene of the battle, secretly equipped with toilet soap and towel.

The meeting, later in the evening, was given over to weightier considerations, in a discussion of the organization's business.

The chairman of the program committee, Miss Abbott, who was largely responsible for the success of the initial meeting, outlined the program for the coming year.

An account of the annual convention of the Connecticut Federation of Business and Professional women recently held at the Hotel Bond, Hartford, was given by Miss Edith Fellows.

Miss McClellan and Miss Willy reported on a joint state meeting held at Stamford, Sept. 14, at which they had officially represented the Norwich group. The account was particularly interesting to the relatively young local chapter, inasmuch as it described in detail the activities of similar clubs through the entire state.

A letter was read inviting members of the Norwich club to attend a meeting of the Waterbury chapter, Saturday, Sept. 20.

HENS AT STORRS ARE WAY AHEAD OF RECORD

At the close of the 45th week, the hens in the Storrs contest have bettered any previous full year's performance, and there are still six weeks in the home stretch. All earlier records for average annual production have been broken. The birds are already one-half an egg per hen ahead of last year's high record and they are literally dozens of eggs per hen ahead of records established in the earlier years of the contest. A statistical study of one of the breeds, namely Rhode Island Reds, indicates that the upward trend in production during the last 17 years has been at the rate of two eggs per hen per year. In other words the average Rhode Island Red in the Storrs contest is now laying 38 eggs more a year than she did when the contest first started 18 years ago.

First 300-Egger.

One day last week, a White Leghorn pullet 760,663, entered by Granite Springs farm from Granite Springs, New York laid her 300th egg in the current contest. The best part of the story is that this pullet is still in the pink of condition, all of which makes it perfectly possible for her to equal or better the record of 334 eggs set up in 1928 by a Rhode Island Red. Five eggs a week for this bird will do the trick but, of course, eggs come harder at this season of the year. Thus the management of the contest is hoping and praying but not guaranteeing. At present it appears that several other Leghorns and at least two Rhode Island Reds will reach the 300 mark before the contest closes.

In the 45th week the production for all pens was 3166 eggs or a yield of over 47 per cent. So many of the high pens for the week are in the Leghorn alley that what follows looks like a Leghorn landslide. William L. Gilbert Home of Winsted, Conn., and Hanson's Leghorn Farm of Corvallis, Oregon tied for top place with 55 eggs each. Alfred J. O'Donovan from Katonah, New York and Peetoocee Poultry Plant of Telford, Pa., tied for second place with 50 eggs each. Kerr Chickeries from Frenchtown, N. J., stood third with a score of 48 eggs. Three other pens of Leghorns entered by Cloverdale Poultry Farm of Cortland, New York, the University of British Columbia at Vancouver, and Richard Slosson of East Aurora, New York, all tied for fourth place with H. W. Van Winkle's pen of Barred Rocks from Camden, New York. These four pens did 47 eggs each.

The leading pens in each of the principal varieties:

UNITED WORKERS' APPEAL IS ISSUED IN LETTER

The following letter of appeal for support for the United Workers has been issued and mailed by the finance committee of the organization:

After 52 years of constructive progressive community service the United Workers of Norwich has come to a cross roads in its journey. These past years, supported almost entirely by legacies from far sighted and generous citizens, it has so grown with, and engrafted its work into, the general work in Norwich that it is a part of the city and the city cannot survive without it. The annual budget for the current year carries forward the social welfare work, both mental and physical, and the care of our dependent aged and very young. The United Workers assume the burden of this work gladly and pushes it forward—to the well-being of Norwich. Without the constructive effort to promote public welfare and health in the community the community must degenerate and die.

As it seems that Norwich cannot survive without the United Workers, neither can the United Workers survive through the future without Norwich. Each needs the other.

The United Workers has indeed reached a cross roads, and feels urgently the call for expansion. It cannot expand further as the lack of funds forbids it. Large as is the available income, still larger are the demands for aid. We cannot let the work mark time while the need moves forward.

To take the United Workers along the road to further community service we are inaugurating a new form of appeal for funds.

Always we are grateful for any contribution however small, for only by the concerted effort of many can the goal be attained.

Now the opportunity is here presented to further develop the work by subscribing to one of the memberships indicated on the enclosed card. Because ofa desire to conserve for the work the greatest possible amount contributed, the only acknowledgement of your subscription will be by the published lists of classified memberships through the daily press. It is our earnest hope that this change of appeal will meet the response the United Workers bespeaks for it, and that the work may go forward to the betterment of our fair city.

The letter is signed by the finance committee, Mrs. William A. Norton, Mrs. Albert H. Chase, Mrs. Charles B. Gilbert, and Miss Adelaide Butts, and is accompanied by a card showing the different classes of membership, one cent to $1, goodwill; $1 to $10, contributing; $10 to $25, sustaining; $25 to $100, maintaining; $100 to $500, honorary. Checks are to be made payable to the United Workers and mailed to Miss Ruby E. Vaughn, chairman membership committee, 34 Warren street.

PIRATES TAKE VENGEANCE ON THE PHILLIES

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 16—(AP)—Pittsburgh wreaked vengeance on Philadelphia for some past defeats today by winning a double header, 3 to 2, and 5 to 3, the opener going ten innings. The result put the idle Chicago Cubs on the waiting list in the matter of clinching the National league pennant, which would have happened had the locals lost a game.

CROWDER HOLDS CHAMPIONS TO TWO HITS AS BROWNS WIN

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 16—(AP)—Alvin Crowder, star right hander of the St. Louis Browns, ruined the first appearance of the Athletics since they clinched the American league pennant by holding the Mackmen to two hits today to win a 3 to 2 triumph.

Crowder pitched hitless ball in eight innings. The only Philadelphia runs came in the fourth when Simmons beat out a single and Foxx followed with his thirty-third home run of the season. After the homer Crowder did not allow a man to reach first.

Coen Beats Tilden

Coen displayed surprising ability in returning Tilden's shots and his placements were excellent.

N. B. A. DEFERS ITS ACTION ON CHAMPIONS

CHICAGO, Sept. 16.—(AP)—Action on the status of three world boxing champions, Sammy Mandell of Rockford, Ill., Andre Routis of France and Mickey Walker, Rumson, N. J., today was deferred by the National Boxing Association, until tomorrow. Today's sessions of the annual convention of the body were given over to work on the by-laws and constitution.

A short discussion revealed that the association members have not been impressed by the activity, and lack of activity of Mandell, king of the lightweights, Walker, middleweight titleholder, and Routis, featherweight champion, with Walker indicated as likely to be shorn of his title as far as the N. B. A. is concerned.

Eddie Kane, Mandell's manager, will appear before the championship committee tomorrow, while Routis' case probably will be temporarily settled by approval of a title match between the Frenchman and Bat Battalino of Hartford, Conn., at Hartford, September 23. It is expected that Battalino will be recognized as a logical contender for the featherweight title.

KAPLAN TO BOX CABANA TONIGHT FOR JEWISH BENTFIT

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 16—Louis Kid Kaplan, Meriden's Buzz Saw and the man who gave up the featherweight title for what has been thus far an unsuccessful quest for the lightweight championship, put the finishing touches to an ambitious program of training designed to put him in shape for his tilt tomorrow night at the New Haven Arena.

The Silver City chunky one goes against a sturdy youngster tomorrow in Emery Cabana, French-Canadian lightweight, and it is well that Louis the Kid is in good shape. Cabana is not rated as highly as Kaplan.

Tommy Jarrett, who jumped into the spotlight with two victories over Georgie Day, is ready for his session with Eddie Elkins, of New York; Jimmy Watts, Little Rock feather, is all primed for Milton Cohen of New York, another winner over Routis; Jack Red Knight is set for his tiff with Benny Martini, New York and the Italo raisers. Harry Goldberg and Jack Meany, are straining at the leashes to get going in their return encounter.

Keesey Bought by Athletics

PORTLAND Ore., Sept. 16—(AP)—Jim Keesey, Portland first baseman and one of the outstanding players of the Pacific coast league, has been sold to the Philadelphia Athletics for delivery next spring, Portland will receive an unstated amount of cash and one acceptable player.

You've all heard fish stories and fish stories but here's one I never heard before.

It seems a coupla local men who enjoy casting a line in the briny deep for the denizens of the deep blue sea went fishing last week off Block Island.

They went out with one of the fishermen from the island who uses a trawl to catch his fish. The two local disciples of Isaac Walton were after mackerel and they were running.

The boat came to anchor and the net was spread. One of the local men tossed over his line immediately there was a bite and he pulled in a mackerel.

He tossed again and in a second or two he had hooked another fish and so it went fish after fish came flopping over the rail and onto the deck.

The other member of the party was not so fortunate. His fish were coming few and far between. He did not seem to be having any luck at all.

And so it went for sometime one catching about five fish to the other fellow's one. Finally it was decided that it was time to pull in the net.

Well when they started to pull the net the secret of the lucky fisherman was revealed. It seems that he had been tossing his line into the net that had caught the fish before.

All he had been doing was catching the fish that had already been caught. But the fisherman claims that he had just as much fun if not more than his companion and that until the fish were in the boat they had not been caught.

This is something like the local fisherman who used to go out every spring and catch a nice mess of trout. Only he caught his fish in a well instead of a net.

No bets were paid on the number of fish caught but everybody had a good time.

TILSON'S VIEWS ON LAME DUCK SESSION

WASHINGTON, Sept. 16—"I believe there is no danger in continuing the system which has been handed down to us by the fathers of the nation, and that there is a very real danger in further tampering with the constitution," said Republican Floor Leader John Q. Tilson of Connecticut, in a recent interview, referring to the proposed change in date of presidential inaugurations, and the doing away with the short session of congress, now nick-named by scoffers; as "the lame duck congress".

"Proposals are now being pushed to change the constitution with respect to presidential and congressional terms, and a strong popular sentiment has apparently been built up in favor of such a change, as provided in the so-called Norris amendment, which was debated in the last congress and will undoubtedly come up again in the present one," continued the congressman.

"As I believe there is no real danger in continuing the system which has been handed down to us by the fathers of the nation and that there is a very real danger in further tampering with the constitution I am unalterably opposed to these proposals and believe that the time has come when the public should be made to see the difficulties which might arise from changes of this character.

"Some of those who propose an early meeting of congress are not satisfied to wait until March 4, but insist on changing the constitution to require congress to meet January 4 and the new president to be installed January 24.

"It is at present one of the most important duties of the old congress at its last session every four years to canvass the electoral vote for president and vice president. It is proposed to change this by constitutional amendment and require the newly elected congress to meet 20 days prior to the time fixed for the inauguration of the president, organize and canvass the electoral vote. I regard this proposition as the most dangerous element in the problem.

Organization Not Easy

"Upon the convening of the new congress it is necessary to organize the house, adopt rules and appoint committees before the work of congress can begin. Many times in the past difficulty has been encountered in organizing the house and at times great bitterness has developed. If more than two parties should be numerously represented in the house it is easily conceivable that, to organize at all, it might be necessary to enter into deals, secret or otherwise, among representatives of blocs or factions.

"If, in addition, the election of a president depended on the action of congress, as might be the case at any time, it might prove a serious matter if congress were not fully organized and ready to transact business. In the Hayes-Tilden election of 1876 the old congress was, of course, organized and ready for any action and action became necessary. The votes of Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida were in dispute. Congress appointed an electoral commission of five senators, five representatives and five justices of the United States supreme court who, by a vote of 8 to 7, decided the votes of these states in favor of Hayes.

"Whatever the opinion of after generations may be as to the decision of the electoral commission established by the legislation of congress at that time, all will agree that some decision was imperative and that even a wrong decision, so far as the two individuals directly affected were concerned, was far better than no decision, which might have been the case if congress had not been organized at the time.

"Under the proposed amendment congress is allowed only twenty days to organize and canvass the electoral vote. Frequently, when no presidential choice depended upon it, the house has required several times twenty days to complete its organization. It is far too important a matter to be by necessity thus hastily dealt with.

"I hope that it may never come to pass that the stability and good order of our government may be placed in jeopardy by having to depend upon the organization of a new congress before a new president can be inducted into office."

NORWICH TOWN

"Christianity's Adventures" was the theme of Rev. Gurdon F. Bailey at Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church. In the evening at 6:30, the Young People's Christian Endeavor service was in charge of Burton Johnson. The topic was: "Putting God Into the Budget." Scripture references were in First and Second Corinthians.

Mrs. Frank L. Coles of 169 Harland road was a motor guest Thursday to Hartford, of Mrs. Milo R. Waters of Norwich. Others in the party included Mrs. M. E. Maguire and Roswell J. P. Brown, the latter of Norwich Town. The party attended the show of the Horticultural society at the state armory. The same company of women spent Tuesday in New London.

About 6:30 Sunday evening a Ford sedan bearing Connecticut registration 129-23, while proceeding through Town street at a moderate rate of speed, came to an abrupt stop when the left back wheel was severed from the body, causing the axle to draw a few feet. There were four occupants in the car, but no one was injured. The difficulty was quickly adjusted.

Evening Services Resumed

Sunday following the vacation period, services were held in the Methodist Episcopal church, both Christian Endeavor and evening praise service, with sermon by the pastor. At the morning service there was an attendance of 60. The pastor, Rev. George Warren Potter preached on "Lost and Found" St. Luke 19:10. "The son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." The Junior choir under direction of Mrs. Lewis E. Aldrich, the organist, sang two selections. On the altar there was a bouquet of gladioli, placed there by Harold Rose and family in memory of Mrs. Etta Bushnell, for many years a faithful member and officer of the church.

Lewis E. Aldrich gave a very interesting talk at the service of the C. E. society of which he is the president.

At the evening service the pastor spoke on "Faithful Sayings," 1 Timothy 1:12. "This is a faithful saying and worthy of all acceptation, that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners."

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Evans Hanson were guests at the Methodist parsonage over the week end.

Visited Oldest Cottage.

When Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Lamb were leaving Willimantic Campground for home last week they were callers at "Kamp Kumfort," the summer home of Mrs. Martha Barrows, of Willimantic. This cottage which is in Church Circle next to the Norwich Town House, was the first cottage built on the camp ground, about 1860. During the call, Mrs. Barrows displayed some of the groups photographed during camp meeting week, for the past few years. Among them, the 1929 group features Mrs. Albert G. Miner, hostess of Norwich Town House for many years, Rev. George Warren Potter, pastor of the Norwich Town Methodist Episcopal church, and Dr. Lamb.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Something For Mother

"Gotta git somethin' fer Ma to own,"
We heard the two urchins say:
"Gotta git somethin' that's hers alone";
Their thoughts were of Mother's Day.

Something for Mother! Some little thing
Unprized for its cost in gold;
Some little thing as an offering
Expressing a love untold.

They thought of gumdrops, of choc'-
lates rare,
Stick candy would make her glad;
"The trouble with that, she'd wanta share
With all of kids an' Dad!"

Something for Mother! A flower would do
To start her on gay parade;
Yet flowers, somehow, make Mother blue—
They live for a while, then fade.

They thought of jewels, some priceless gem,
But pennies are humble things;
The jeweler only smiled at them—
They couldn't buy gems or rings.

They spoke of castles—some vast estate
Like villas the movies show;
But pennies must meet a penny's fate—
They never buy much, you know.

They thought of cookies as being fit,
They looked at a golden cake:
"It's somethin' like that we oughta git—
Then Mother won't haf to bake."

Something for Mother! Some little thing
To ease her of toil and sigh;
Then two urchin-souls began to sing—
They bought her a custard pie!

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

One of the many interesting creatures of the sea is the lobster. Many of the Wide Awakes have no doubt seen large red lobsters in fish stores, but not all of them know that the live lobster is a very dark green, almost black, in color. The lobster turns red when it is boiled. He is a salt water animal and is found abundantly along the North Atlantic coast.

His body consists of a head, thorax, and a clearly segmented abdomen. One of his great claws is always a good deal larger and stouter than the other. The larger claw is a weapon with which he fights, while the smaller one is an anchor, with which he clings to the weeds on the rocks at the bottom of the sea. One of the largest known specimens has weighed more than twenty-three pounds.

When the lobster swims, he stretches his body out, and then doubles it suddenly up. As he does so, the plates of the tail spread out and form a kind of very broad, and powerful oar, which strikes the water with such force as to drive the animal swiftly backwards. With a single stroke of his tail, a lobster can dart to a distance of forty or fifty feet, and that so quickly that even the swiftest fishes could scarcely overtake him.

When the lobster swims forwards, he uses five pairs of odd little organs underneath the tail, which we call "swimmerets." They spring from either side of the soft hinges by which the joints of the tail are fastened together, and each consists of two thin oval plates fringed with long hairs. Each swimmeret really consists of two tiny paddles, and by waving them to and fro the lobster manages to travel along with some little speed.

The mother-lobster glues her eggs to the hairs with which the swimmerets are fringed, where they remain until they are hatched. At first their young hold to the swimmerets by threads; later they cling by means of pincers, and after some days become independent.

The lobsters and crabs struggle hard for their livelihood. They spare scarcely any creature of the sea of moderate size, whether dead or living. They care but little for lost limbs, for these will grow again; and when wounded, so that they may not bleed to death, they throw off the shattered limb at the next joint, where a new skin quickly forms.

One lobster will produce 20,000 eggs, which she will carry patiently for six months under her abdomen, fastened together by gluey threads. Even after she has broken open the eggs by the movement of her tail, and released the baby lobsters, she will still carry them till their coat is hard and firm, and only then will she leave them to wander alone.

A Dream Ride

Dear Uncle Jed: I have written to the Wide Awake Circle and enjoy writing. This time I am going to tell you about my dream ride in an airplane.

One day I went with my father to the aviation field in East Hartford. My father said I could go for a ride if I wanted to. I told him that I would like to go. My brother went with me. When we got in the airplane they strapped us in and covered us with a blanket. Then we started off. Before we started I asked the aviator if we could go over Colchester. He said we might. We looked out and the people looked like flies on the street. When we got to Colchester we were low. It just happened that we were going over our house. I took my handkerchief and waved. We noticed many people wave back. All of a sudden we started falling and crashed into someone's barn. I gave a scream and jumped up and found myself in bed. My mother came to see what was the matter. I told her my dream. She laughed and told me to go back to sleep because it was still very early.

When I got to school I asked a girl who happened to be in an airplane if that was what happened to her when she was in an airplane. She said the same things happened to her only she didn't crash into anything or wave her handkerchief to anyone. I think that was an exciting dream. Some day I wish to go in an airplane but not in a dream.

A Midnight Alarm

Uncle Jed: Last year I went to Ocean View for my vacation. I had a wonderful time and also found a queer box in which there was a lot of money and jewels.

One night my father hid the box on a shelf in the hallway. During the night I felt very thirsty so I got up to get a glass of water. As I was coming out of my bedroom I noticed a man carrying away the box of money. Not knowing that the man was my father I screamed, "Stop, thief." By that time he had turned around and then I recognized my father. We all started to laugh, but my fright was so great that I took some time before I could realize my mistake.

A Visit To Brandford Farms

Dear Uncle Jed: On Labor day I didn't expect to go anywhere but I had a surprise, because I went to the Brandford farms at Groton.

There are chickens every place there. They are all white too. I brought home a nice fluffy bunch of feathers for a souvenir. Several chickens that were out of the coop I caught and put back. They squawked terrible but it didn't make any difference, because I put them back anyway. When the time to go home came I was sorry, because I was having such a lovely time.

My New Teacher

Dear Uncle Jed: Every year toward the beginning of school my teacher used to write me a letter about her vacation, and I used to answer her. But this year the time came when my teacher should write me a letter. I waited day by day. But it was all in vain. Soon a funny thing happened. Just a week before school my teacher came to see me. I was so excited I didn't know what to do. All of a sudden my teacher told me it was her last good bye. At this I felt very sad, because I was her pupil for five years and I knew her so well. I thought we would have new rules and everything would be different. That very night I could not sleep. I kept rolling about in bed all night. I was much worried about my teacher, whether she would be kind or bad. At last the first day of school came. The first day, our lessons were all the same. Then I said to myself, "Maybe it's because it is the first day of school. The second day passed as usual and the third day passed with the same results.

I was so glad that everything was the same and the teacher was kind and gentle. I think it was a good joke on me for feeling worried about school. Don't you, Uncle Jed?

The Baby Rabbits

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about the little rabbits the dog found last summer. We were out in the field loading hay.

The dog was running around and found a rabbit's nest, with five little baby rabbits in it. He was going to eat them, but we made him go away. Then we took the rabbits to the house. We fed them some milk. After a while they were big enough to eat clover. We kept them in a box.

After we had them about a week they got so lively one rabbit jumped out of the box and the cat caught it, but my sister got it away before it was hurt much.

Another rabbit died. Then I took the others out in the woods and let them go.

At Cape Cod

Dear Uncle Jed: My story today is about my trip to Cape Cod. Sunday morning my parents and two girls besides myself left for Onset Beach. We started at seven-thirty in our automobile.

We passed by several small towns and then entered Providence. The next city of any size that we passed through was Fall River. Here the streets are very wide. Eight cars can park at once on this road. Later there is a road for going on and another road to come back on.

From Fall River we passed into New Bedford. We did not stop anywhere on the road until we left New Bedford. Then we got some gas.

We traveled quite a while longer and then we came to Wareham. This is a small town about two miles from Onset Bay. Here there was a sign saying, "Onset, two miles."

In a very short time we came to Onset Beach. We drove around a while. We saw the beautiful Cape Cod water. We also saw many cute cottages and some amusements. There are many stores at Onset. Also a barber shop, a theatre, dry goods stores, restaurants and grocery stores.

We ate at one of these restaurants and then went up to the amusement park. We took all of this in and then went bathing. The water was lovely and we liked it very much.

We spent the afternoon there and that night we slept good.

My Trip To the White Mountains

Dear Uncle Jed: This is the first time I have written to the Wide Awakes, but I had such a nice trip to the White mountains I thought I would tell you about it. We started Saturday morning and had dinner at a log cabin camp in New Hampshire. There were overnight camps all the way up. We stayed in Meredith, New Hampshire, all night Saturday. We started out early Sunday morning for the mountains. The first stop was Cain, which is a stone face at the top of a mountain. We stopped at the Willey House camps and had lunch. There used to be a house there but it was burned down and the people were killed by a snow-slide. On the way home I saw the state prison in Boston. I got home Monday night.

The Runaway

Uncle Jed: Grandma and I were picking up apples down in grandpa's orchard when we heard Bill, the hired man, shouting "Whoa!" We looked toward the field, and there were old Dobbin and Prince hitched to a harrow, running toward us, trying a race with a train that was just passing. Grandpa was running to meet the team with his arms outstretched to stop them. The horses turned a little and got past grandpa, and on they came.

Grandma picked up one end of a long fence board and started to meet the team. I took hold of the other end, and we ran with it until we were directly in front of where the horses were coming.

The train had already passed. Dobbin and Prince were getting tired of pulling that heavy drag along and slowed down before they got to us. Grandma kept calling, "Whoa Dobbin!" She said afterwards that she could have made him stop without the board, just by talkin to him. Grandpa grinned and said, "Too bad you carried that board so far then!" Grandpa was pretty glad the horses weren't hurt though. He told grandma and I that we were a pair of crackerjacks.

Old Newgate Prison

Dear Uncle Jed: I am now going to tell about the "Old Newgate Prison." Sunday we went to Bloomfield to see some friends. After dinner they took us to the "Old Newgate Prison." This prison was used in the Revolutionary war. The prison was made of stone. The windows were about one foot in length and about six inches high with iron bars running through the windows. There was a mine in the bottom of the prison. You have to go down a ladder to get to the mine. There is a tower about in the middle of the prison which had been made of wood.

There were animals around the "Old Newgate Prison." There are white rabbits, foxes, coons and many other animals.

The cells in the prison are very small. At first this prison was a copper mine and then they built the prison over the mine and made the prisoners work in the mine. Part of the mine is in ruins.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Little Joe Otter Explains His Name.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

We choose our friends, but we are fated,
To have no choice to whom related.
—Little Joe Otter.

Flip the Terrier had met Little Joe Otter for the first time. They sat on the bank of the Smiling Pool, Flip sitting beside Bowser the Hound and Little Joe a short distance away. Flip was full of curiosity. There was one thing that was puzzling him. Little Joe Otter was far from being what his name implied. He wasn't little. Actually, he was bigger than Flip, but, of course, an entirely different shape. He was smooth and sleek and altogether a handsome fellow. Flip was full of curiosity.

"If you please, Little Joe Otter, are you related to Billy Mink?" he asked.

"Why do you ask?", inquired Little Joe.

"Yes, we are cousins," replied Little Joe. "Billy Mink and I are cousins. We both belong to the Weasel family."

"I guess I don't know that family," said Flip. "You see, I'm new to the country. I'm just getting acquainted."

"You've met one other member of the family beside Billy Mink and Little Joe," said Bowser the Hound chuckling.

"When?" demanded Flip in surprise.

Bowser chuckled more than ever. "The time you had to go off and live by yourself," replied Bowser.

Little Joe began to chuckle. "He must have met Jimmy Skunk," said Little Joe.

"He did," replied Bowser. "And he wasn't polite to him. But he's very polite now whenever they meet."

Such a funny look as here was on Flip's face. "Do you mean to tell me that Jimmy Skunk is a relative of yours?" he demanded, turning to Little Joe Otter.

"But he doesn't look the least bit like you," cried Flip.

"For which I am duly thankful," said Little Joe dryly. "Nevertheless, he's a member of the family. He is one of the Weasel cousins. It is quite a family, quite a family."

"If you please," said Flip, "there is one thing I should like to know."

"What is that?" asked Little Joe good naturedly.

"Why they call you Little Joe Otter," replied Flip. "I don't call you little. I call you big."

Little Joe chuckled. "It's just a name," said he. "It was given to me when I was little and it has stuck to me ever since. Wherever I go I am Little Joe Otter. You know the biggest people were little once. Even Bowser there was a little fellow."

"Oh!" said Flip. "That explains it. Would you mind if I asked some personal questions?"

"Not at all," replied Little Joe. "People who never ask questions never learn much. But before you begin I'll ask you to excuse me long enough to get a lunch. I feel just like a fish. I mean, I feel like eating a fish."

Bowser chuckled. "If I could swim the way you can I think I should feel like a fish," said he.

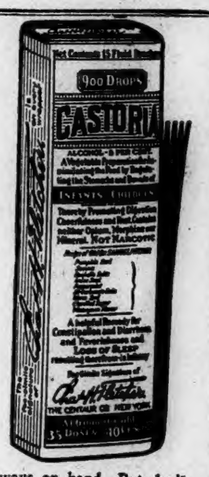
When BABIES are upset



Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them.

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

BULL PARTY HAS REGAINED CONTROL OF PRICE MOVEMENT IN THE STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept 16 (AP)—The bull party once more regained control of the price movement on the stock market today. Last week's bearishness reappeared for a time in the morning, but the stream of selling quickly dried up, and shorts hurried to cover.

Operators for the advance felt that the distress selling in evidence last week had been largely completed, and that the time was ripe for renewed operations. The pace of trading slackened, less than 4,200,000 shares changing hands, as contrasted to more than 5,000,000 last Friday, and traders regarded this as a good sign.

The heavy turnover of funds in connection with the treasury refinancing and income tax payments, involving of shifting of some $1,800,000,000, was accomplished without causing any notable repercussions in the call money market. Call loans were available at 7½ per cent all day. There was some disappointment that the treasury overdraft in connection with its new financing did not bring about temporarily easier credit conditions. Banks called some $85,000,00 in loans, however, which was undoubtedly a counterbalancing factor.

Bankers expect the treasury overdraft to stabilise the money market for the next few days, but it is felt that there may be some stringency toward the end of the week, as the overdraft is paid off. It was pointed out, however, that today's calling of loans may have been for the reduction of member bank borrowings at the reserve, so that they may be in a better position to aid the market later in the week.

Prominent in the day's news was confirmation of rumors that General Motors and Radio corp. are negotiating a plan under which General Motors will manufacture radio sets. Public offering was made of stocks of several new investment trust, including $160,000,000 of stock of the new Lehman corp., which was quickly oversubscribed. The fact that powerful banking interests continue to launch huge investment companies is interpeted as indicating confidence, in fundamental investment conditions, yet it is felt that sale of these new issues must impose further burdens on credit.

During the morning, a few leading issues such as U. S. Steel, American Telephone, General Electric, and International Telephone, sagged 2 or 3 points, but by midday a wide upward movement got under way, which continued to gather momentum until near the close. Such issues as General Motors Telephone were heavily bought, closing about 3, 4, 5, and 6 points higher, U. S. Steel, American Can Amer., respectively. There was considerable profittaking in the last half hour, and recessions of a point or 2 from the best levels of the day were common. Radio was heavily bought for a time, rising about 3 points, but it lost much of its gain in the final deals.

Several of the utilities made wide gains, American and foreign power selling up nearly 10 points to new high ground. Pacific gas and electric and Southern California Edison made gains almost as wide. Under the stimulus of Saturday's offer of an exchange of stock by public utility holding corp. Columbia gas was rushed up about 6 points to a new peak above 120 on an analysis by a prominent statistician pointing to its strategic position in the merger situation, but lost about half its gain later. The electric equipment stocks were buoyant, General electric and Westinghouse electric rising about 8 and 10 points, and Western electrical instrument mounting nearly 8 points to a new peak at 64.

A few of the oils, rails, chemicals, food shares, railway equipments, and specialties were well bought. Commercial Solvents, which is to be split 10-for-1, made an extreme gain of 29 points retaining 20 at the close. Royal Dutch reached a new peak at 64, but the upward move in the oils appeared to have been hampered by the upturn in California Crude production last week. Baltimore and Ohio, Louisville and Nashville, Timken roller bearing, Cutler hammer, and Hershey chocolate were among issues reaching new high ground with moderate gains. National lead jumped 15 points to a new peak, and Jones Manville was notable strong.

May department stores tumbled about 14 points on denial of rumors that it would be acquired by Sears Roebuck, and Ingersoll rand dropped 7 points. Eastman Kodak, United corp., U. S. freight, Grigsby Grunow, and American Safety razor were among shares to close about 2 points off. Abraham and Strauss and Jersey central dropped and 13 points in a few sales.

Commodities were irregular. Cotton futures sold up considerably on bullish weather forecasts, but lost most of their gains before the close. Wheat turned heavy, closed 3 cents a bushel and more lower on an increase in the visible supply, large receipts at the markets, and weakness in the Winnipeg market. Corn sagged a cent or so.

In the foreign exchanges, Sterling was a little firmer with sales at $4.8411-16. This is still below the incoming gold point, however, with the sailing of several fast steamers this week, more takings of London gold by New York is expected. The Japanese Yen mounted about ¼ of a cent.

MANY HOUSES BEING ERECTED IN FANNING AVE. SECTION

Considerable progress has been made on local buildings now under the process of construction during the past week, although the rainy weather of the latter part of the week slowed up work to some extent. The work of remodeling the building at 16 Broadway is well along and will be completed within the next few weeks by Contractor W. S. Spencer.

The office buildings for the Ponemah company at Taftville is rapidly nearing completion and will be ready for occupancy within the next few weeks. The building is entirely of brick and granite trim and conforms to the construction of the mill proper.

One of the sections of the city that is fast building up is that of Fanning avenue where considerable construction work is now in progress. Contractor P. F. Sweeney has recently erected two houses there and is now building a third one for Frederick H. Freeman. Several other houses are being erected by a local contractor on this street. Within the past few months at least a half dozen houses have been erected on this street.

During the past week Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft granted five building permits for construction work in the city. Of these five permits there is one for a small bungalow to be erected by Lyman Derosier on Gleason street.

The permits are as follows:

To Francis M. Toomey, contractor, to build a frame porch and to make alterations to the present frame house at 160 Spruce street for F. C. Leibenborn. The roof of the house will be raised about four feet and new walls and ceilings will be built on the interior. The porch will have a concrete foundation and floor with pagola roof. The estimated cost is $1,200.

To Lyman Derosier to build a three-room bungalow on Gleason street for himself. The bungalow will be 18x22 feet with stone and cement foundation. The exterior finish will be in composition shingles while the interior will be in hard pine and plaster. The estimated cost is $500.

To Charles S. Stamm to build an addition, 2x12 feet on his present frame house at 15 Ann street. The addition will be to enlarge one of the rooms and will be one story high and will conform with the present construction. The estimated cost is $100.

To Hyman Laskey to build a small addition to the present house at 117 Mt. Pleasant street. The addition which will be one story high and 4x11 feet will be used as part of a store. The estimated cost is $25.

To Antonio Cosentino to build a frame two-car garage, 20x20 feet on Hillcrest street. The garage will be of frame construction with concrete foundation. The estimated cost is $250.

SELECT LIGHTING FIXTURES THAT ARE DURABLE

Those finishing touches to a house, the lighting fixtures, are too often chosen merely for their artistic or pleasing appearance. The durability of their materials and the manner in which they are put together must be given consideration. By inquiry into such fundamentals as the quality of the foundation metal, many dollars in replacement money may be saved in years to come.

To avoid the toll of tarnish and rust which sometimes destroys the beauty of lighting fixtures, one manufacturer uses only heavy cast metal throughout. Such fixtures are not easily dented or bent, nor will they rust or corrode.

Free from burrs and sand marks, lines are clearly cut and surfaces are smooth. Concealed flaws are said to be avoided and a proper temper assured by using only pure ingots in building up the metals and by mixing according to formulas originated by the maker. Copper sheathing before plating with other metals gives a uniformity of color base. Metallurgists are agreed that such a copper surface forms a most suitable background for other metals.

By following these basically sound methods, the final finish is assured of durability no matter whether it is of silver, or of gold by the French formula method, or in color. Candelabras, side-wall brackets, or ceiling shields made by careful processes will take their place in the new home and will remain there during all the years of proud possession as beautiful as when the doors are thrown open for guests at the house-warming.

MAKE WINDOW ATTRACTIVE

The decorative value of the bay window can be greatly heightened by building in bookcases on either side, a cushioned seat, a wide sill for flowering plants or a shelf for antique glass. It is little touches such as these that make the bay window so charming.

WORN FLOORS NOW HIDDEN

That old worn floor that made a woman get down on her hands and knees is no more. At least, it is out of sight, safely hidden by a quaint but modern flagstone effect in embossed inlaid linoleum.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 16 (AP)—In a general selling hush during which big holdings were said to have been dropped, wheat prices underwent a severe smash today at the last. Enlarged domestic supplies, nearly double those of a year ago, together with more rain in Argentina further relieving dread of increased damage by drought, were largely responsible. Besides, export business in wheat from North America today was reduced almost to zero.

Sharpest breaks in wheat values today came after announcement that despite diminishing arrivals at Primary Centers, the United States visible supply had become more and more unwieldy, piling up 1,146,000 Bu. Increase for the week, the total domestic stock in sight was posted as amounting to the huge aggregate of 185,554,000 bu., compared with only 95,882, bu. a year ago. Facing this development and with no daequate immediate outlent known of, numerous wheat owners appeared to lose confidence, and selling pressure boadened out to a notable degree, tumbling values down fast as the day drew to an end.

New rainfalls in Argentina, with promise of additional moisture to follow, did much from the outset today to shake the nerves of friends of higher prices for wheat. Talk was current in this connection that with only average weather hereafter throughout September, October and November, Argentina might yet harvest a fair-sized crop not withstanding drought damage. There were also advices that reserves of old wheat in Argentina appear liberal, and that heavy shipments of Argentine wheat diverted from European continental countries are reaching Great Britain. Under such circumstances, a decrease of the amount of wheat on ocean passage was virtually ignored. Little need likewise was given to other encouraging factors such as word that the embargo on wheat shipments to Galveston had been modified.

Corn and oats prices broke owing to sympathy with the action of wheat. Setbacks in corn values were in the face of reports from Illinois, Indiana and Ohio suggesting that estimates of corn yield have to be curtailed.

Provisions averaged higher, responsive to upturns in the value of hogs.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In New London during the past week there were 12 sales of real estate as compared to four sales for the same week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $58,578 and $21,350.

NEW LONDON.

Bids will be taken soon for a gasoline station to be built on Thames street, Groton, for Sidney Sulman, 95 Glenwood avenue. Plans for the building are being prepared. They will call for a hollow tile and stucco station, with an imitation Spanish tile roof, steel sash and concrete floors. It will be 16x24 feet, arranged for an office and toilets.

A local architect has prepared plans for a frame bungalow to be erected for Isador Omonti on South Ledyard street. The house will be 30½x42 feet, arranged for seven rooms. There will be a brick veranda and a garage 10x20 feet.

Plans have been completed for a house to be built for William Holmes, Montauk avenue, and William Nichols on Cedar Grove avenue. The owners will have charge of the construction work. The proposed house will be of one-family type, 24x26 feet, with a sun porch 8x12 feet.

The permit has been issued for a house to be built on Briggs street by Andrew C. Miller. The owner's plans call for a frame dwelling, 26x36 feet. The estimated cost is $9,000.

That plans to move the radio station of the coast guard from Block Island to the new building at the state pier are virtually decided upon was disclosed recently. Although other locations have been considered in addition to the state pier, it has been learned through tests conducted by the coast guard authorities that the local site has every feature desirable for a radio plant.

PUTNAM.

The summer season of 1929 has been unusually active and fruitful for builders in this city. One would be safe in saying that more building construction began in Putnam this summer than in any other municipality of its size in the state. The banking house of the Cargill Trust company is the major feat of all building enterprises. In the past week expert stone layers have accomplished much in the lining up of the ground work and now a nucleus around which the rest of the work will develop is intact. Westerly granite of the finest type, laid in huge blocks constitutes the ground line of the exterior. The cellar walls have been lined with a fire and moist proof clay brick and from appearances, will be immune from any weather attacks. Before the first of October, it is expected that the new banking house of the financial institution will be pointing towards the skyline relative to exterior construction.

On lower Main street, the Beacon Oil company of Everett, Mass., has taken its place in Putnam's business life. A petroleum products distributing station is nearly ready for its opening. Workmen have completed the erection of the large gasoline storage tanks and are soon to commence work on a modern office structure which will, when completed, be the commercial headquarters of this organization, for eastern Connecticut.

The Miour block on Main street, a one-story building of brick is nearing completion. When completed, another of Main street's open lots will have been utilized.

The institutional wings being added to the mother house of the Convent of the Sisters of the Holy Ghost on Church street are also making rapid strides towards completion. These buildings are to be of the finest types of church structures. When dedicated they will be occupied by young Catholic ladies attending the finishing school.

Charles A. Seder, Putnam real estate man, who has contributed two excellent business blocks to the city and is now contemplating a third, has been granted permission by the city council to annex a one-story addition to his new store and office block on Main street. The addition is to be built of terra cotta brick. The building committee of the common council have also granted permission to many property owners in the residential sections of the city, to convert barns into garages, and to improve the exterior of homes that will add greatly to the civic beauty of these sections.

Thus a review of the building during the past season in Putnam points out Putnam's place in the commercial and educational spotlight of eastern Connecticut.

New Home of F. H. Freeman on Fanning Avenue

The above is a photograph of the new home of Frederick H. Freeman which is being built on Fanning avenue by Contractor P. F. Sweeney. The house has five rooms, bath and a pleasant den just off the living room. The rooms are large and pleasant with hardwood floors and hard plaster walls. One convenient feature of the house is the ample closet room on the second floor.

The bath is in tile with porcelain fixtures and the plumbing is in brass piping throughout. The heating plant is of the most modern type and is very compact. The lighting fixtures are exceptionally attractive.

The exterior finish of the house is in red cedar shingles on the side walls and composition shingles on the roof. There is a large porch in the front as well as a smaller one in the rear. The windows are of the four-over-one style and are very pretty.

12 "REAL DAUGHTERS" GET D. A. R. PENSION

WASHINGTON—(AP)—None of the 12 living "real daughters" of the D. A. R. will be present at the dedication of the $1,500,000 Constitution hall here in October.

The "real daughters," each of whose fathers fought in the revolutionary war, are all women past 80 years of age. They receive pensions from the national organization of $25 a month.

Were they able to attend the dedication they could tell thrilling stories of the revolution related to them by their fathers. Mrs. Anna Knight Gregory of Selinsgrove Pa., the only "real daughter" in that state, is 87 years old. Her father was a drummer boy.

BODY OF MRS. P. F. OLSON NOT FOUND DURING MONDAY

In a fruitless search for the body of Mrs. Russell F. Olson, of Westfield, Mass., who was drowned shortly before noon Sunday while attempting to go to the rescue of her husband, caught in the undertow at Misquamicut, Capt. George W. Streeter of the Watch Hil Coast Guard station had surfmen posted on the beach, Monday. Capt. Streeter was of the opinion that the body may have been caught in a trough running parallel to the beach and washed out by a turn of the tide. David A. Lowry, a Westerly young man who assisted her husband ashore, said that he caught sight of something floating in the water about 30 feet from him as he was swimming ashore. While she was not the powerful swimmer, her husband was, she may have been carried further to sea without fighting the current, Charles M. Lamb, Misquamicut winter beach patrol constable, is of the opinion that the body will be washed ashore, but much further down the beach. Mr. Olson was persuaded to return to Westfield with his friends Sunday night.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 16.—The deed transferring title in the property on Pequot and Montauk avenues, consisting of a mansion and two building lots, from Isaac Sack, Boston, to Henry R. Griswold, was received for record at the office of the city clerk today. The property was acquired by Mr. Sack, from George S. Palmer two years ago.

Silva Deed Recorded

Another deed transferring title in a house and lot on Denison avenue from Annie Silva to William Silva was also received for record at the city clerk's office. Silva recently caused title in the property to be transferred to his wife at a time when he was about to be made defendant in a damage suit for $10,000 brought by Louis Burdick, Shaw street, as guardian of his son, Louis. The youthful Burdick was seriously injured the night before July 4th when Italian bombs, hurled into a bonfire on Bank street, exploded, the steel-jacketed shells hitting Burdick. His injuries left him a patient at Lawrence Memorial hospital for several weeks.

THOMPSON PIER PROJECT CALLED DEFIANCE OF LAW

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 16—The matter in controversy between Clarence W. Thompson, the city council, director of law and building inspector, flashed up again this evening at the meeting of the council, when a petition was received from attorneys for Thompson asking an investigation of the acts of the building inspector and the city manager in denying Thompson the right to extend his pier on Pequot avenue. Director of Law Troland explained that Thompson had made three applications to the council for permission to build, none of which was in correct form. Thompson was a member of the common council at the time the building code was adopted and must have been familiar with its provisions. When he first made his application the permission was denied. He made two other applications and they also were denied. He went on with the work in defiance of the officials whose duties it was to prevent it. Mr. Troland said the officials of the city had done their whole duty, that they consulted with him and he advised them to stop the work and they did stop it. Thompson is defying the law, defying a law which he helped to enact. The petition of the attorneys for Thompson was characterized as a crack of the whip, a gesture, by Councilor Wilton, who moved that the petitioners be given leave to withdraw. That motion prevailed unanimously.

Mrs. Annabelle Douglas, through her son, Dr. W. L. Douglas, represented that the city had not kept faith in an exchange of deeds to land corner of Hempstead and Jay streets. That section is at the junction of Truman street where extensive improvements have been made. The Myers survey of 1707 shows that there are encroachments by property owners on that street, dozens or more. Mrs. Douglas is the owner of the Huguenot House at Hempstead and Jay streets, and that, too, is alleged to be an encroachment on city land. It seems an agreement was reached between Mrs. Douglas and representatives of the city by which the city would have abandoned a portion of the land claimed in order that the Huguenot House would be preserved intact, but there are other encroachments, the entire length of the street south to Blackhall street where Mrs. Douglas owns another piece of property and it is to straighten out all these encroachments that the city has delayed. The city does not deny the agreement made with Mrs. Douglas and accounts for the delay to make one job of straightening out all the encroachments.

There were 14 applications for building permits, five of them for dwellings.

The Standard Oil Co. of New York was given the contract to furnish gasoline to the city.

The sum of $22,375 was transferred from one fund to others, to meet various expenses of the department.

The sum of $8,000 was transferred from one bond issue to meet the expense of widening Main street, which seems to be more than what was calculated upon.

Others Oppose Thompson

The property owners on Pequot avenue protested against permission being granted Clarence W. Thompson to extend his pier on Pequot avenue, alleging that it was within the dwelling zone of the zoning law. They claimed it was a detriment to their property and it would deteriorate in value.

The sum of $705 was voted for procuring two transformers for fire engine houses in order that they might be warned of fires before the general alarm was given.

The council appropriated money to meet with Waterford the expense of indexing probate records. It was voted to make application for a share of state aid money for highways, in the event that improvements were made.

Residents on New and North streets petitioned for sewers.

The improvements on Raymond street were ratified by the council.

Property Ordered Razed

Mrs. Corey representing Edith Reid, owner of real estate on Atlantic street, appeared before the council and asked for definite information as to the repairs the city demanded on property which the city had condemned and ordered removed. The notice of removal is fixed as Oct. 15. Mrs. Corey said they were willing to make any repairs within reason and make the property tenantable to yield them some revenue. The building inspector and a disinterested contractor viewed the property and reported that it was not in condition to repair. They said it would be advisable to take down the property and build anew. Mrs. Corey is to be given tomorrow the facts in the case, as to what repairs are demanded.

Gadbois Roosters Too Noisy

A dozen residents on Nameaug Ave., asked for the abatement of what they claimed to be a nuisance, the crowing throughout the night of roosters owned by George Gadbois.

Mrs. Cecil Spicer and infant son, 12 Colver street, were patients discharged today at Lawrence-Memorial hospital.

FUNERAL

Charles Syracusa

The funeral of Charles Syracusa, of 222 Montauk avenue, was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Joseph's church and was attended by a large gathering of mourners, including a delegation of members of Circolo Caltavapuresi, of which organization Mr. Syracusa had been a member for several years. A solemn mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. William C. Fitzsimons, with Rev. Michael Reagan, deacon and Rev. Raymond J. O'Callaghan, sub-deacon. The quartet of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church sang, "One Sweetly Solemn Thought." The bearers were Antonio DeLaura, Thomas Muscarella, Guiseppi Sedrsico, Calogaro Muscarella, Vistiano Muscarella and Calogaro Chiappona. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Michael Chernick

Daniel Wilcryniski

Daniel Wilcryniski, 53, East Lyme farmer, died Sunday at Home Memorial hospital, where he had been a patient but a day.

Ira Perkins

Ira Perkins, 78, well known resident of Groton, died Sunday at Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where he had been a patient but a few days. Mr. Perkins for many years was employed as watchman on the Thames river bridge of the New Haven railroad and for the past few years had been station house keeper for the Groton police department.

Had No License

Charles Alquist, Waterford, was arrested today by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray charged with driving without a license and will be presented in the police court tomorrow.

Another Continuance

The continued case of Walter Tucker, 432 Vauxhall street, charged with manslaughter, was again continued, when called in the police court today, the latest continuance being until Oct. 22. Tucker furnished a surety on his bond of $1,000. Tucker was driving an automobile on Bank street two weeks ago when it struck Mrs. Isabel MacKenzie Douglas, aged woman residing at 70 Montauk avenue. Mrs. Douglas died at Lawrence hospital from her injuries two days after she was taken there.

Admonished by Court

Pedro Carchitti, charged with breach of the peace and intoxication, was given suspension of judgment. Carchitti was given by the court some sound advice as to his future conduct.

James Butler and Sam Hill, youths, were charged with train riding. They were given suspension of judgment. Butler and Hill were arrested yesterday by Special Agent Harold Swanson, New Haven railroad.

Francis Sullivan, 70 Mountain avenue, was charged with breach of the peace and was fined $5 and costs. Sullivan engaged in an altercation with Joseph Fisher, a taxicab driver, Sunday night when the former disputed a cab fare. During the altercation Fisher was struck a blow on the face by Sullivan, who was arrested by Patrolman George McCaskey.

Joseph Zelosky charged with breach of the peace and intoxication was sentenced to 20 days in jail.

Seven cases of intoxication were tried and in most cases suspension of judgment was meted out. A colored woman, a resident of Hill street, was sentenced to 30 days in jail. The woman, who is apparently of unsound mind, was arrested Saturday when she went to yards and pounded upon the windows of houses, complaint finally being made to the police because of the conduct of the woman.

A man who made his 25th appearance before the court was sentenced to 30 days in jail.

Complaint has been made to the police because of mischievous youths going to a house, corner of Connecticut and Cedar Grove avenues, that is in course of construction and smashing windows.

An automobile owned by Joseph Mc-Gee, Waterford, was stolen from its parking place last night, only to be found abandoned on Union street several hours afterwards by Sergeant John Courtney where it had been abandoned.

Miss F. A. Wetmore, Hall avenue, to-day made complaint to the police because of the conduct of a man who has annoyed her frequently of late. Miss Wetmore said the man followed her through Hill avenue, after she had alighted from a trolley car.

The confectionery and tobacco store of Marcello Canistari, 15 Willetts avenue, was entered by a thief Sunday night. The loss consisted of a small quantity of tobacco and a small amount of money. Entrance was gained by forcing a window and it is believed was the work of a youth.

BIG DEMOCRATIC CAUCUS—TWO CONTESTS AT STONINGTON

(Special to The Bulletin)

STONINGTON, Sept. 16. — The Stonington democratic caucus, with an attendance of between 600 and 700, was held in Stonington town hall on Monday night and was called to order by the Democratic Town Chairman Joseph H. McGuinness. Thomas L. Donohue, of Pawcatuck, was named chairman of the meeting and Dr. Owen Denehey of Stonington, clerk. The meeting was a turbulent one, in which there were charges and accusations that the Pawcatuck, or second voting district, was attempting to run roughshod over the wishes of the meeting.

Nominations were made as follows: Assessor, for three years, James L. Jordan, of Pawcatuck; for board of relief, Edward Wilson, of Mystic, declined nomination as did also Daniel Sullivan and Andrew Fallon; Frank L. Dunham, of Stonington, was nominated for two years. For a second member there were no nominations and the matter was left in the hands of the town committee. The real contest centered about the nomination of first selectman. The present incumbent, Joseph A. Vargas, of Stonington, was nominated by Andrew Fallon; Lawrence J. Purtill was named by Pierce J. Morrison. A check list was called for by formal motion, fifteen voters were counted as favoring its use, but a majority of the meeting apparently did not want the check list used, as the claim was made by the Stonington democrats that the list was inaccurate. Everett Wilson moved that the check list be not used, but the moderator ruled that its use would follow. George H. Foley asked if the meeting was to be run on the level and if not why the majority should not rule. A motion to adjourn was made by Patrick J. Gilmore, Jr., of Stonington, but was not entertained by the chairman. Balloting began and continued for 30 minutes when the result was announced as follows: Total vote cast, 286; Purtill, 137; Vargas, 146.

For second selectman, John E. Garrity, of Stonington, was nominated by James Shea and declared the choice by one paper ballot, when L. J. Purtill declined to have his name used for second selectman. Agent for town deposit fund, Joseph Vargas; auditor, William C. Robinson; tax collector, James Ryan; constables, first district, C. J. Ledwith; second, Manuel Davis; third, George Babcock; fourth, Everett E. Wilson; fifth, Christopher Klewin. For registrar of voters there developed a contest in the second, or Pawcatuck district, the candidates being Joseph H. McGuinness, the present incumbent, and Martin T. Devine. Other nominations by acclamation were: first, William C. Robinson; third, James F. Main; fourth, Harry B. McKenzie; fifth, Richard C. Walbridge. A paper ballot taken on the opposing nominees of the second district resulted, after fourteen minutes' balloting with check list. Total vote 198; Joseph H. McGuinness, 109; Martin T. Devine, 89. For school committee, three years, Thomas Hickson; two years, John F. Wood; one year, F. Walbridge; town committee, the nominees were: First, C. J. Ledwith; second, Michael Spellman; third, George A. Wheeler; fourth, Everett S. Wilson; fifth, Edward J. Nolan.

The election officials were: James Leahy, Joseph H. McGuinness, John J. Donohue, Francis J. McMahon, Michael Spellman, and Joseph A. Costa, Jr.

The town committee was empowered to fill all vacancies.

Broadway Theatre.

Every small town has its "wisecracker" and all-round "big shot" and Gentryville, Ohio, was no exception for it produced Elmer (Hurry) Kane, in his own words, "the greatest ball player in the world". Elmer is the favorite character of his creator, Ring W. Lardner, known as the "master of American slang," and became famous in the series of stories by Mr. Lardner in which he was featured. George M. Cohan collaborated with Mr. Lardner in the writing of the big stage success, "Elmer the Great," from which the all-talking photoplay "Fast Company," now showing at the Broadway, was made, and in which Elmer, played by smiling Jack Oakie, carries off the honors. Evelyn Brent is charming as Elmer's "girl," with Gwen Lee, a talented newcomer as a dangerous blonde. Richard "Skeets" Gallagher, Sam Hardy and Arthur Housman are prominent in the case, which also includes the entire line-up of the New York Yanks and the Pittsburgh Pirates in their famous extra-inning battle for the world's series pennant. Rib-tickling comedy and serious, thrilling drama are scattered throughout the picture which is registering a decided hit at the Broadway. The latest Paramount Sound News, showing among other headline shots, views of the ill-fated T. A. T. passenger plane just after its fatal crash, the Talkine Collegians in "Varsity Drag," and an all-talking comedy of colored high life, "Oft in the Silly Night," by Octavus Roy Cohen, are also on the program. There is great interest in the forthcoming production Thursday, at the Broadway of Welter Huston's greatest dramatic success "The Lady Lies," with Claudette Colbert and a cast of stars. "The Lady Lies" is a passionate story of sophisticated modern life and love which has swept all the reviewers by storm, and is acclaimed as the high spot of Mr. Huston's many dramatic presentations.

Palace Theatre.

"Cleanliness, Courtesy and Comfort," will be the watchword of the Palace theatre, which under the direction of Warner Brothers, pioneers of Vitaphone, opens with Al Jolson in "Say It With Songs," Saturday, September 21. Renovated and brought up to date in every sense, the Palace now has one of the finest acoustic effects of any theatre in the state, and by the time the Warner Bros. experts and workmen have completed their task, the sound reproduction at the Palace will be second to none. Free from all suggestion of echo or vibration, the interior of the playhouse will be a perfect medium for the transmission and clear distribution of the music and voices in the pictures which it will bring to Norwich.

Little Davey Lee, beloved by millions, found room in his heart for another favorite star during the making of "Say It With Songs." Marion Nixon, who plays Jolson's wife, and Davey's mother in this picture, is the new object of the child star's affections. Quickly Miss Nixon won the heart of the little fellow, so much so that their relationship was practically that of mother and son throughout the filming of the picture and afterwards.

The lovely woman and the talented little boy soon made friends, and good friends too, which is all the more remarkable when one considers that for some time now Al Jolson has been all in all as far as Hollywood is concerned, to little Davey. Although Davey probably doesn't realize it, it was his "Uncle Al" who discovered him and changed him from an ordinary unknown boy into one of the brightest juvenile lights the screen has ever known.

As a result Davey now has his "play mama" and his "play daddy". Perhaps a little good-natured rivalry developed over this fact between Miss Nixon and Mr. Jolson, but if it did, it only served to add to the reality and the beauty of the drama. So homelike and actual are the scenes in "Say It With Songs," so tender are the partings and so joyful are the greetings, that one who watches and listens to the picture cannot help sharing the emotions of the three principal characters.

One senses that the little lad lives through every bit of the drama. He is terribly downcast when his daddy is taken away, although he does not realize that it was through his own innocent testimony that the man was sent to prison. All through the film he seems a very real little boy.

Breed Theatre

"Zowie! What a picture. Humor, drama, romance, action, thrill. And how! 'Broadway Melody' talked and sang and danced its way into the Breed theatre Sunday evening as 1929's first four-star movie. Swell. Grand. Glorious. Glamorous. Colorful. Tender. Snappy. Smart. And more than that! A knockout, a sure-fire hit any way you look at it. Direction, dialogue, songs, continuity, scenario—all done by experts, as experts' best. And acting that is superb . . . Will make you laugh and cry as no other sound picture has managed to do.

ADVOCATES CALENDAR CHANGE TO MAKE YEAR OF 13 EQUAL LENGTH MONTHS

Calendar reform, which advocates of the simplified calendar hope to bring about by the first of January, 1933, so that there shall be 13 months of equal length in the year was interestingly explained by Paul H. Wilson, secretary of Graton & Knight Co., Worcester, Mass., to the September meeting of the chamber of commerce, which was held at 6.30 Monday evening at Milo Light's camp at Gardner lake. This was the final dinner meeting of the year.

About 75 members, a number of whom were accompanied by their wives, accepted Mr. Light's invitation to the camp and enjoyed an excellent turkey dinner which was served after the gathering had sung a verse of America and Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd of Park Congregational church had asked the blessing. Abner Schwartz was song leader during the supper.

After a brief business meeting called by President Joseph C. Worth, the report of the nominating committee was presented by John F. Lyston, and the six directors recommended were elected unanimously as follows: Albert E. Van Wagenen, William Fitzgerald, William H. Stebbins, B. H. Palmer, Jr., Frank R. Murdy and Glen Merithew.

President Worth asked for any expressions of opinion regarding the proposed action of the New Haven road in replacing the watchman at the Eighth street crossing by an electric signal system, and after Edward A. Rich had stated that his observation had led him to the conclusion that it might be a good change, Mr. Lyston moved that the directors take the matter into consideration and do what seems to them desirable. This was voted.

Mr. Wilson was introduced by President Worth to speak upon the subject of "Calendar Reform," which he introduced by stating that the thirteen month year had been used in the Worcester concern since 1912 with great satisfaction in the accounting department. It has had endorsement from people in all walks of life and the league of nations has stated that the world is in need of calendar reform.

It is desired to put the proposed change into effect in 1933 because this is the first year in which Sunday falls on the first of January. In the plan there would be thirteen months in the year, each of 28 days, and each month containing four weeks of seven days. This would give 364 days and there would be an extra day each year, which would come at the end of the year and be called the year day, or an extra sabbath or holiday. In leap years there would be two extra days, one inserted at the end of June and the other at the end of the year. The extra month would be inserted between June and July and would probably be called Sol. All holidays in the year would come on Mondays. With the approach of the five day week, which Mr. Wilson said he believed was coming, it could be seen what a fine week end there would be. In the plan the dates for the days of the week would always be the same, each month starting with Sunday.

Mr. Wilson said that the defects in the present system were that the months had a varying number of days, the quarters in the year varied from 90 to 92 days and the half years from 181 to 184 days. This made difficulties in comparing statistics on business, which would not exist if the months were all the same length. Easter would always be on April 8, which would stabilize business in the clothing and shoe lines and also fix a regular time between the Easter and Christmas holidays for the benefit of the schools.

There are objections to the change from the Hebrews, from the Seventh Day Adventists and the Seventh Day Baptists. The Hebrews claim that it would result in persecution as they would not be able to follow their religious practices.

Advantages of the simplified calendar were that the days of the week would always be on the same date in each month and the chance would work out to give us twelve weeks of summer. All holidays would be on Mondays, but this change would not cause them to lose their significance, in the opinion of Mr Wilson.

In closing he invited his hearers to visit the Graton and Knight plant if they wanted to see the plan in practical use.

He was given a vote of thanks for his talk, and President Worth stated that the chamber of commerce has appointed a special committee to consider the matter.

Before the meeting adjourned by singing a verse of the Star Spangled Banner. Mr. Light was introduced and spoke briefly extending a cordial invitation for Norwich people to visit the camps next year and become better acquainted with what they are doing for the boys and girls.

SUIT AGAINST GUARANTOR OF BREAD PEDDLER'S BILL

Suit to compel Solomon Wener of this city to make good on his alleged guarantee of bills contracted by a bread peddler by the name of Weisman has been brought in the common pleas court by Mrs. Lena Miller of this city, asking damages of $400. Property on Sachem street owned by Wener has been attached.

The plaintiff claims that she is and for a long time was engaged in the business of a baker. On or about Jan. 1st, Wener called upon her in company with one Weisman and informed her that Weisman was about to engage in the business of a bread peddler, and that if she would furnish Weisman with such bread as he might thereafter desire on credit, that he (Wener) would guarantee the payment of all bills for bread of Weisman to the plaintiff (Lena Miller).

The papers claim that relying upon such guarantee, the plaintiff furnished bread to Weisman from a period from March 10 to March 29, 1929 inclusive, and to the value of $361.36, which sum is still due and unpaid.

MOTOR VEHICLE CASES IN THE CITY COURT

Thomas Eddleman, 26, of the submarine base, was fined $15 and costs in the city court Monday a. m., on a charge of operating a motor vehicle with improper markers. He was arrested Saturday night by Officer Clifford Crary and State Police Officer Peter Busch when it was found that he was operating a Ford machine with number plates issued for another machine. He paid the court $26.06.

Three motor vehicle operators each paid the court $20.50 in settling their fines of $10 and costs for speeding. These were Herbert Hicks and James J. Mullins, both of this city, and James L. Panciera of Westerly. The first two were arrested in the Greeneville section by Officer Clifford Crary Saturday night and the Westerly man in Thameaville Saturday afternoon. The first charge made against Panciera was reckless driving but this was changed to speeding when City Attorney Charles W. Cassidy learned fully about the case.

Brings Suit on Note

Nine hundred dollars damages are claimed by T. N. M. Lathrop, Inc., of New London, from Albert G. Rodgers and Minnie A. Rogers of this city, according to papers served by Deputy Sheriff George H. Stanton. Property owned by the Rodgers located on Talman street has been attached in connection with his suit.

The New London concern claims that on April 1, 1929, Rodgers gave them his note for $123, payable four months after date at the Thames National bank. The note bore the endorsement of Mrs. Rodgers. The plaintiff concern claims that they are still the holders of the note which is due and wholly unpaid.

FOUR NORWICH HUNTERS LEAVE FOR CANADA

Among those who left Norwich early Sunday by auto for Canada on a hunting trip were Dr. James J. Donohue, Fred Dugas, Ernest D. DuBreuil and Dr. W. T. Driscoll.

It will be of interest to local sportsmen to know that last year their Indian guide pointed out tracks of bears, to some of these sportsmen as they travelled through the woods. One very interesting story the old Indian guide told some of these huntsmen last year was one worthy of repeating to sportsmen.

Quite a number of years ago, Chiko left his little log cabin (where he lives each winter alone while he hunts and traps and prepares the furs for sale) and started down the narrow old worn foot path, towards the river quite a distance away from his cabin, to see if his traps had trapped foxes, etc.

He walked across the frozen river towards the bank, where one bear trap had been set, and from a distance he saw a huge black bear which was evidently trapped. He then shot the bear and a few minutes later dragged the bear across the ice, and began to skin the bear, to use the bear meat for trap bait.

While busily occupied, his dog frisked about but suddenly ran back to the Indian, crouched at his feet in terror, and the hairs of the dog stood up with fright. Chiko, sensing danger, looked up, and there ahead of his, about 500 feet away, three large wolves were running towards him across the ice, with their teeth bared. Chiko aimed carefully, shot two of them, missed the third wolf, but shot again, killing the third wolf when less than a 100 feet away from him. Chiko likes this one story of his many adventures the best, because he was never so near danger before.

But to appreciate the realness of the story one must see the old Indian and must sit in his little log cabin and listen to him, as he explains and relates every little detail of the incident as he smokes contentedly and now and then in Indian fashion points to the gun in the little log cabin, that did the trick.

There is no doubt about this, these local sportsmen will again enjoy listening to Chiko's stories, after their daily hunting trips in the dence woods with old Chiko.

WEDDING
Eccleston—Deschamps

Alma Olive Deschamps, daughter of Napoleon and Aldea Deschamps of 222 Norwich avenue and Enos I. Eccleston, son of Irtis and Ida Eccleston of 48 South B street were united in marriage at the Sacred Heart church Monday morning at 8 o'clock by Rev. Omer T. Mandler. The maid of honor was Miss Agnes Deschamps, a sister of the bride and Augustine Dugas was best man. During the ceremony a musical programme was given by Miss Alice Frechette, the church organist.

The bride wore a gown of white satin trimmed with Spanish lace and rhinestones and carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her maid wore a gown of yellow satin trimmed with lace and carried an arm bouquet of yellow gladioli.

Following the church ceremony a reception and wedding breakfast was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eccleston left on a wedding trip to New York city. Upon their return they will make their home with the parents of the groom.

Both Mr. Eccleston, who is very prominent in local athletics, and his bride have a wide circle of friends who extend them their best wishes for a happy and prosperous future. Mr. Eccleston has played on a number of the local baseball clubs this season, the Y. M. C. A. in the Industrial league and also with the J. B. Martin

The biggest crowd of the season was reported at the ball game between the House of David and the J. B. Martin baseball association at the J. B. Martin diamond on Sunday afternoon. The game was scheduled at 3.15 and soon after 2 o'clock the grand stand was filled to capacity. Cars were parked from Tafts Station to Donais' store on Norwich avenue and from Baldwin's store over the bridge onto the Jewett City road, and parked two-deep beyond the outfields. Before the game the House of David put on a fine exhibition of baseball practice and trick stunts with a baseball. The first baseman endeavored to prove the old saying that "the hand is quicker than the eye" and won hearty applause from the spectators. There was also an exhibition of juggling by a one-armed ex-service man. Baseball fans came from far and near to watch the bearded players in one of the best games of the seasons. The J. B. Martin team is to be commended for getting the best teams and giving the fans real baseball.

The new residence which Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Wood are building on the Old Canterbury Turnpike is fast nearing completion.

Old Ships

Beside the wharves, the battered ships are dreaming
The worn ships, the torn ships, with many a draggled mast.
The gray old ships are musing of those creaming
Waters that weltered in the days long past.

Maybe they dream of how the idle ocean,
A glittering dragon, with rippling scales of gold,
Would writhe and twist with sleepy crafty motion,
Suddenly frothing where the hushed bark rolled,

How still they sway and think upon the glories
Of shimmering lagoons that lit the tranquil morn!
How soft they sigh, remembering the stories
Of Africa, Bermuda and the far Cape Horn!

By what fierce tempests were they hurled and harried?
Or did they groan on any foamy shoal?
And what strange freight or cargoes have they carried;
Bulging green bananas or the bins of coal?

But now they creak and startle from their napping—
They fall to dreaming of the days long past.

A Stroll In The Rain

I love to walk on a rainy day,
To hear the scampering drops at play
Just over my ear with trip and thud
On the taut umbrella, or see them scud
With street Arab joy across the mud.

I love to walk on a rainy day,
To watch my little dog bound away
Over puddle and ditch with primitive glee,
Then back with a bark that—plain as can be—
Says: "Come, be a sport and race with me!"

And gaze on the shimmer of silver-gray
That lies o'er the fields like a fairy veil
So delicate and so dreamy-frail.

Though woods, where the lichened birch is gay,
Where the pine-needles wear a coppery gloss,
And a faint late sunbeam flits across
The malachite green of the tufted moss.

HOOVER TO PROMOTE VAST PUBLIC WORKS PROGRAM

Has Appointed Brigadier General Lytle Brown as Chief of Engineers—Three Army Engineers Are to Assist Brown in Important Inland Waterway Projects—Plans Call For Selection of Men Who Can Carry on Over a Period of Years to Assure Continuity of Construction—Projects Contemplated Will Exceed in Magnitude Work on the Panama Canal.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—(AP)—Administration plans to reorganize the army engineer corps for the vast public works programs were announced today by President Hoover in connection with his appointment of Brigadier General Lytle Brown as chief of engineers with the rank of major general.

Three army engineers are slated to assist the new chief in work on important inland waterway projects, each of which the president expects eventually to exceed work on construction of the Panama Canal. Plans call for selection of men who can carry on over a period of years in order to assure continuity of construction.

More definite responsibility for the success of the undertakings would be given them, along with authority for local administration which would prevent undue interference from Washington.

One of these engineers would be responsible for the whole new flood control and other works on the lower Mississippi river. A second would be charged with the improvement of the upper Mississippi, Missouri, Ohio, Illinois and their navigable tributaries. The third would be designated to administer the development of the waterways of the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence river.

President Hoover said he and Secretary Good proposed the important changes because the "very large increase in public works programs during the last two years have made it desirable that we shall have more definite responsibility, more localized administration, and more continuity in direction than hitherto."

The appointment of General Brown to succeed Lieutenant General Edgar Jadwin, who retired because of age August 7, was in line with President Hoover's desires to put a man in that post who could remain for a full term of four years.

As a consequence, several of the score of eligible officers, who ranked General Brown in point of service were disregarded when Secretary Good made his recommendation to the chief executive.

General Brown, who is in command of Fort Damis, in the Canal Zone, is in Washington on leave. He is not expected to assume his new post until his nomination is confirmed by the senate.

LEADERS ELECTED AT I. O. O. F. CONVENTION

HOUSTON, Tex., Sept. 17—(AP)—After choosing their leaders for the next year Odd Fellows attending the 105th world convention of the I. O. O. F., resumed their secret business sessions today. Considerable time was occupied in discussion of the next convention city and the proposed junior lodge but no action was taken.

Charles D. Rinehart of Jacksonville, Fla., was chosen deputy grand sire and thus placed in line for selection to the grand sire's post next year. Rinehart, a lawyer, had been chairman of the judiciary committee for 19 years and had attended 23 consecutive world conventions. He lacked only three votes having the necessary majority on the first ballot after which the other candidates withdrew.

BANKER $79,000 SHORT; PLAYED STOCK MARKET

LEWISTON, Me., Sept. 17.—(AP)—Wilbur H. Davis, treasurer of the People's Savings bank, tonight was in jail charged with embezzlement of funds, officials said would total $79,000.

According to a statement issued by his attorney, Dana S. Williams, he had been "playing the stock market."

Davis had destroyed all records showing the bank's holdings of bonds and bank officials said they would not know definitely for some time just how much was missing. They found $75,000 in Liberty bonds and $5,000 in cash gone after a cursory check.

Depositors swarmed into the bank during the day, but the officers enforced the state law which permits them to limit withdrawals to $100, unless 30 days' notice is given.

Everett A. Davis, president of the bank, said the depositors would not lose anything as the $370,000 surplus of the institution would more than protect them.

WARRANTS RECOMMENDED CHARGING KIDNAPING

DETROIT, Mich., Sept. 17 (AP)—Warrants charging kidnaping were recommended today for Edward Wilds, 26, and Frank Hohfeil, 36, identified by Matthew Hoidreith, 24, as the men who held him prisoner without food or water in a Detroit apartment for six days.

Holdreith, son of Matthew Holdreith, Sr., restaurant proprietor, was rescued last night by police who found him chained to a cot in the apartment. Sunday night the elder Holdreith had paid the kidnapers $5,000 for his son's release.

Identification of the suspects came today. They were arrested Sunday night in a stolen taxicab after a gun battle with police. More than $4,000 found in their possession at the time is believed by police to have been the Ransom money they had secured from Holdreith shortly before their arrest. Holdreith's release came last night after he had managed to attract the attention of persons passing the window of the ground floor apartment where he was held prisoner.

Seeks Control Of 16 Railroads In East

Permission Has Been Sought by D. & H.—New Haven Road Included.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Permission to obtain control of 16 railroads in eastern and New England states was sought today from the Interstate Commerce commission by the Delaware and Hudson company to form a comprehensive terminal system for the north Atlantic seaboard.

The proposed system would consist of 13,663 miles of line covering New England and parts of Canada and extending as far south as Norfolk and as far west as Deep Water, West Virginia and Pittsburgh Junction, Ohio. The aggregate investment on December 31 was $2,629,391,328.

The application, signed by L. F. Loree, president of the Delaware & Hudson, asked permission to obtain control of the Bangor and Aroostook railroad, Boston & Maine, Buffalo & Susquehanna, Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh, Central Railroad company of New Jersey, Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, Lehigh & Hudson River, Lehigh & New England, Maine Central, New York, New Haven & Hartford; New York, Ontario & Western; Pittsburgh & Western Virginia; Reading company, Rutland Railroad company; Virginian, and Western Maryland.

In addition, the Delaware & Hudson sought trackage rights over the New York Central between Albany and Cornwall, N. Y., and said it expected, if the application was approved, to ask for additional trackage rights or permission to construct new connecting lines of railroad if this were found desirable.

The largest railroad, in terms of mileage, which the Delaware & Hudson seeks to acquire is the New York, New Haven & Hartford which operates 2,119 miles. The Boston & Maine ranks next with 2,109 miles. The Delaware & Hudson operates 845 miles of line in New York, Pennsylvania and Vermont. Six of the roads it is attempting to acquire have more mileage than the Delaware & Hudson.

"It is of importance," the applicant said, "that the Atlantic seaboard, from the Canadian boundary to Hampton Roads, should be served by at least one system of railways wholly or substantially contained within the states bordering upon the Atlantic and extending to all the chief ports of the North Atlantic coast of the United States. The proposed system would meet that requirement."

Buckland, chairman of the board of directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, said here tonight that New England roads would not submit to a consolidation of eastern lines as proposed by the Delaware and Hudson railroad in an application filed with the interstate commerce commission at Washington, today.

Mr. Buckland said that the New England lines would not consider a merger with other roads east of the Hudson river. If the New England roads are to be consolidated, it will be as a distinct New England group, he stated, adding that since the Storrow committee, which investigated the matter of eastern consolidation made its report in 1923, there has been an overwhelming sentiment for an all New England merger.

Dangerous Fires Are Confined to the Extreme North and Extreme South.

(By the Associated Press)

The perennial battle between man and fire in the dry autumn in the far west ranged Tuesday night along a far flung front that reached with lapses from Canada to Mexico.

Major conflagrations were confined to the extreme north and the extreme south of this front with many minor blazes in brush and grass land in between. On the whole it appeared that the crimson monster had been bested and presently would come under the control of hundreds of workers, some of whom have been battling against odds for a week.

In the north, which Monday was the scene of the most dangerous situation on the coast, conditions were reported improved. The worst of the northern fires was around the town of Estacada in Oregon. Here some 19,000 acres in the Clackamas river valley, were blackened and scorched. Six families were made homeless, one fire fighter was driven insane and $200,000 in estimated damage done. Many were ready to flee the scene with their personal effects in case of renewed danger.

Two hundred fire fighters, who had been trapped in the 19,000 acre La Dee district fire, made their way safely into Estacada yesterday.

The fire around Yacolt, Wash., appeared to be under control and some residents were returning to their homes.

The situation in this district had been so threatening that preparations were made Monday to summon several hundred United States troops from Vancouver (Wash.) barracks to fight the flames. One man was killed there, two injured and unestimated damage done to 1,000 acres.

In southern California the fire demons dancing on a score of hills around the Los Angeles area filled the air with smoke. The worst of the fires was between Santa Paula and Ojai. The heat caused an oil tank on Sulphur mountain to explode. This started a wall of fire down the mountainside toward the Ventura oil field with a fury that threatened that vast center of oil production.

Other fires, covering a total of 30,000 acres roared over the southland and met defiance at the hands of more than 600 men. Eight fire fighters had been injured or burned.

The first arrest for starting a forest fire was made Tuesday. M. J. Ryan, a surveyor for the Los Angeles city bureau of water and power, was taken into custody on a charge of smoking in a closed area. It was alleged that 2,000 acres was burned over by a blaze he started.

Barring unexpected unfavorable developments officials expected all western fires now burning to be in hand by Wednesday night. Meanwhile the hope for rain was widespread and fervent. It has been the driest year in a decade and the fires have covered a larger area this year than in any previous season for as long a time, although very little of the big standing timber has been damaged.

FOREST FIRE IS STRUNG OUT ON 19-MILE FRONT

VENTURA, Cal., Sept. 17.—(AP)—A driving east wind swept into the dry, bush covered Santa Paula mountains today, carrying before it a wall of fire which in 24-hours had laid waste at least 10,000 acres and destroyed an estimated $2,500,000 in property.

A weary fire line of 250 men fought in the face of intense heat to hold their ground on a six-mile stretch between the flames and the Ventura avenue oil field, which was in imminent danger.

Forest rangers said 30 oil derricks scattered through the mountains had been destroyed and eight ranch buildings burned to the ground.

One man was killed, one seriously injured and six others burned slightly. Norman Beems, a forest service official who was reconnoitering the fire area by motorcycle, plunged headlong into a truck on a smoke obscured road and died soon after. Tom Lopez, an oil worker, was burned seriously as his car gunded a bend and was enveloped in the brush flames.

BRUSH FIRE THREATENS VENTURA AVE. OIL FIELD

VENTURA, Calif., Sept. 17.—(AP)—The brush fire threatening the Ventura avenue oil field had advanced late today to a point three miles from the forest of derricks. Rangers said the sparse growth on the intervening ground from Creek canyon to the oil area probably would prevent the flames from reaching the field.

MAIL PLANE PILOT KILLED IN A CRASH NEAR MERIDEN

During Heavy Fog Last Night the Plane Struck Mount Lamentation—The Flier's Body Was Burned Beyond Recognition—Passengers in a Bus Heard the Crash and Were Thrown Into Excitement as They Saw the Flames Immediately Follow.

BERLIN, Conn., Sept. 17.—(AP)—Flying low in an effort to find his way through a heavy fog, Henry A. Tallman, 32, of Ridgewood, N. J., pilot of a south-bound mail plane, was killed instantly here tonight, when his plane crashed into the side of Mount Lamentation.

Burned beyond recognition, the flier's body was found by the side of the wreckage of the plane, which burst into flames immediately. The crash occurred a short distance east of the main state highway, about two miles north of the Meriden line, in the rear of the farm of Alexander Bruce.

Bruce said that he was attracted by the fact that the plane was flying so low, and saw its running lights as it passed close to his house. A moment later he heard a terrific crash and then the side of the mountain was lighted as flames spread through the wreckage.

Tallman's identity was obtained from officials of Brainard field, Hartford, from where the pilot took off at 9:05 o'clock with his cargo of mail destined for New York. He had been flying only about ten minutes when he crashed into the mountainside.

Rising sharply in the rear of Bruce's pasture, the mountain is close to the highway. A Meriden-hound New Britain bus was passing the spot, passengers being thrown into excitement as they heard the crash and saw the flames immediately follow.

Soon after the crash, C. L. Wright, of the Colonial Air Transport, and Deputy Aviation Commissioner H. W. Generous were at the scene to make their investigations.

Tallman, whose plane was carrying a full cargo of mail when it left Hartford, was a veteran commercial pilot. He is survived by a widow and two children.

The pilot apparently supposed he had passed the hanging hills, which surround Meriden on the northeast and northwest, and thought he was circling over the plain south of the mountains, in an attempt to pick up a landmark. He was flying about 200 feet high, and from that elevation could not see the mountain. His plane crashed into the tops of the small trees which cover the mountainside, and the tops of about 30 of them were broken off where the plane passed.

Nearly an hour after the crash, and while a number of persons were standing looking at the gruesome scene, the pilot's body was still burning. Flames shot up from both sides of his back, and he might have been entirely cremated had it not been for John Wessman, a taxicab driver of Meriden, who pulled stones out of the ground with his hand, and scraped up the dirt between them, and used it for extinguishing the flames.

The mail carried in the plane was practically destroyed, although a few charred envelopes upon which the addresses could be read were raked out of the fire. Nothing was left of the plane but the bent and twisted framework.

PILOTS SAID LOAD WAS TOO HEAVY FOR PLANE

Pilots said his plane was not strong enough to carry the 500 pounds of mail he had brought down from Boston and had offered to relieve him of part of the load.

"Listen, buddies," they quoted him as saying, "I've flown planes before. Don't worry about me."

TOOK PLACE OF THE PILOT KILLED AT STAFFORD SPRINGS

BOSTON, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Pilot Henry H. "Hawk" Tallman, who was killed when the Colonial Air Transport mail plane he was flying crashed at Berlin, Conn., tonight, had flown the mail route between here and New York since January. The weather was misty here when he took off at 7:15 (E. D. T.). He had flown the Pittsburg-Cleveland mail route and had more than 3,000 hours of flying experience. He was a World war veteran.

ADMINISTRATION GROUP IN SENATE WON FIRST VOTE ON TARIFF BILL, 40-32

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The viewpoint of the administration group in the senate prevailed today in the first voting of the tariff bill.

By a 40 to 32 vote a committee amendment was adopted requiring that imported articles be marked conspicuously with the country of origin except in certain instances.

The ballot was taken on reconsideration of a previous rejection vote of 33 to 28. Eight republicans joined thirty democrats on the first roll call against the amendment, the eight being Senators Borah, Cutting, Howell, Lafollette, McMaster, Norris, Nye and Reed.

The last named—a Pennsylvania republican, subsequently complained about that part of the amendment relating to place of marking and asked reconsideration on the ground that a majority of the members did not know what they were voting on. Others differed with him.

On the second roll call, six republicans combined with 26 democrats against the amendment, while five democrats joined thirty-five republicans for it. Senators Reed and Howell were the republicans to change, while Senators Trammell, Fletcher, Ransdell, Broussard and Pittman were the democrats to go over for the amendment.

Much debate preceded the vote, the democrats contending for the house language making it discretionary with the treasury in excepting articles from the marking requirements and the republicans claiming there was too much discretionary power already lodged with the head of that department.

President Hoover as well as Secretary Mellon figured in the ensuing debate, Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, a member of the finance committee, suggested that the president disclose the truth about reports that he, (the president) had asked the committee republicans to place manganese on the free list

LAGUARDIA SWAMPS BENNETT FOR REP. NOMINATION FOR MAYOR OF NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Sept. 17—(AP)—Returns from a little more than half of the city's voting districts tonight gave Representative F. R. LaGuardia a lead of nearly five to one over former State Senator William M. Bennett in their fight for the republican nomination for mayor.

LaGuardia had rolled up a total of 27,675 votes, as against 5,737 for Bennett.

When earlier returns showed the balloting overwhelmingly against him, Bennett refused to believe the reports and charged that inspectors of elections had "done some peculiar counting." At 11 o'clock, when additional returns continued to roll up a large majority for LaGuardia, Bennett notified the clerk at the desk of his hotel not to put through any more telephone calls to his room, as he was retiring and did not wish to be disturbed.

As his lead over his opponent increased, LaGuardia indicated his complete confidence in victory by stating that "just as sure as you are sitting here I am going to lick 'em."

"There wasn't any doubt of that when I started this fight," he added. "There isn't any tonight. There won't be any on election eve."

Mayor James J. Walker was unopposed for the democratic nomination, as were Richard Enright, former police commissioner and candidate of the "square deal" party, and Norman Thomas, socialist.

Although somewhat slower in reporting, early returns from the bitter battle in Queens for the republican nomination for borough president gave Borough President George U. Harvey a leader of more than three to one over former State Senator John L. Karle, who had the support of Joseph H. Debrazza, republican boss of the borough for 20 years.

Early returns gave former Borough President Bernard M. Patten, one-time associate of ex-Borough President Maurice Connolly, who is now under sentence on charges of graft, was leading the three cornered fight for the democratic nomination for borough president in Queens. He was being closely pressed, however, by Representative William F. Brunner, choice of a group allied with Mayor Walker and County Clerk Edward W. Cox, organization designee.

WARRENVILLE REPUBLICANS NAME PARTY TICKET

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 17—The matter of furnishing transportation for Ashford pupils to the Willimantic State Trade school may become the bone of contention in the coming elections of the town. This possibility arose at the republican caucus held in the town hall at Warrenville Monday evening when the matter was taken up and threshed over for some time before adjournment. Allen B. Lincoln brought up the issue in advocating town action to provide transportation. He said that he had learned that the two boys now attending the trade school in Willimantic secured transportation in the morning at private expense. In the afternoon the boys had to "hitch-hike" back over the 16 mile route home. Herbert Brown contended that the matter had been settled at a recent special town meeting when it was voted to take no action. Mr. Lincoln disagreed with Mr. Brown on this point and a general discussion followed.

The caucus resulted in the following unanimous nominations: Assessor, Robert M. Balch; board of relief, John M. Chism; selectmen, Clarence H. Barlow and Clarence H. Buck; town clerk, treasurer and agent of town deposit fund, James E. A. Knowlton; auditor, Fred M. Wright; tax collector, Frank M. Mowry; constables, Ernest T. Martin and Everett M. Burrill; grand jurors, Otto Hattin and Justin M. Burrill; registrar of voters, Nathan G. Armitage; school committee, Henry N. Amidon; library directors, Mrs. Abbie M. Balch, Mrs. Jessie M. Brown and Miss Emily J. Chism; trustees of the Babcock trust fund, Orrin P. Durkee. Walter C. Brown chairman of the republican town committee called the meeting to order. Howard F. Goodwin was chosen moderator and Robert M. Balch, clerk.

Two boys, Michel Caron, 17, of 62 South street and Arthur Cloutier, 17, of 24 Greystone street, received suspended sentences of ten days in jail at a session of the police court today when they pleaded guilty to taking a car without the permission of the owner. They pleaded through Probation Officer William V. Palmer, Sr. After imposing the sentences Judge Frank H. Foss admonished the youths and ordered them in the custody of the probation officer for six months. They are to pay the costs of the case.

The boys were arrested this forenoon by the police. They had taken an Oldsmobile sedan, belonging to Albert Prue, from the latter's garage at the corner of South and Bain streets, Monday afternoon. They took the car about 1 o'clock according to neighbors. Later in the afternoon Prue went to the garage. The car had been driven 65 miles, had one flat tire and out of a supply of seven gallons of gasoline about one gallon remained in the tank.

Prue claimed that the car had been taken from the garage two or three times last week and for that reason he began making a check-up on the mileage. At police headquarters the boys said that they had gone to Hartford in the car. They were found to possess a key fitting the door of the garage and a key for the automobile transmission.

TALKING OVER CAUCUS— TOWN CLERK APPRECIATED

The aftermath of the Monday evening's democratic caucus was the front line topic Tuesday, furnishing plenty of material for spirited pro and con arguments. The chief contention centered around the four ballots, necessary in the nomination of a collector of taxes. U. E. Jodoin, who has held this most important office for some years, did not chose to run again. The four nominations from the floor included Theodore Boule, Chester Stafford, John Blake and Robert McKenna. In the first two paper ballots Mr. Stafford received a plurality. At the close of these two ballots, Blake and McKenna had dropped out. The counting of the third ballot disclosed that Mr. Boule had received a plurality.

In the fourth ballot Boule, with 201 votes cast, received a majority of 5 votes, so was declared the choice. A feature of the two main party caucuses was the unanimous nomination by both, democratic and republican bodies, of John Welsh as town clerk and treasurer. On town meeting day in October, Mr. Welsh will receive the solid vote of the entire town of Griswold.

A Norwich civic official who is interested in land rights, deeds and property titles all over the state, said that never had he found a town official so conversant with and accurately informed, relative to his town's property, boundaries and values, as is Mr. Welsh. Caucus nominations and town elections for some years stand to prove that when this important office is considered, party lines are eliminated for the common good.

DANIELSON

TOWNSPEOPLE MOURN OVER DEATH OF ANGUS PARK

DANIELSON, Sept. 17—The people of the town of Killingly will share with great numbers elsewhere in eastern Connecticut and other parts of the state sincere sorrow over the death about noon today at Bethlehem, N. H., of Angus Park, president of the Assawaga Woolen company of Dayville. In failing health for several years, he had been seen infrequently here for two or three years, yet announcement of his death caused this community to pause in respect to his memory.

The town of Killingly, and especially Dayville, owes a debt of gratitude to Mr. Park for the development of the Assawaga Woolen company into one of the finest industries of its kind in southern New England. Yet it was only one of the various manufacturing enterprises in which he was personally and so closely interested.

Mr. Park became interested in the Dayville concern in March, 1903. The varying degrees of success with which the plant had been operated in years prior to that time no longer varied under his masterful direction; it promptly became a highly successful mill, with a reputation of producing some of the finest woolen textiles in America. Through the years—even through periods of very general depression—it ran steadily. It not only did this, but under Mr. Park's ideas of how a mill should be run and how its operatives should be considered it paid better than the average wage scales in force in similar plants in New England.

As long as 16 years ago Mr. Park was advocating the introduction of the 44-hour week, a proposal not over popular with textile manufacturers at that time. He voluntarily took the attitude of shorter working hours for the employes of his Dayville plant, and others in which he was interested, and contended that the mill would be as much of a success under the shorter working schedule as the one almost invariably in force in this area.

During the years that Mr. Park has been the president of the Assawaga Woolen company the plant has been enlarged, modernized and made highly efficient. Many changes and improvements also have been brought about in that part of Dayville owned by the company and more recently under the personal direction of N. Lorne Greig, a son-in-law of Mr. Park.

Mr. Park was personally interested in his employes, was acquainted with practically all of them and was deeply respected by them. They regret his death individually and collectively, feeling that they have lost a real friend.

Matters to be Considered at Annual Town Meeting

DANIELSON, Sept. 17—The town school committee has filed with the selectmen a request that there be inserted in the call for the annual town meeting to be held the first Monday in October a clause providing an appropriation of $600, to pay for an instructor of the Killingly High school band. This amount would be in addition to the usual appropriation of 1,450 for musical instruction in the schools of Killingly.

The band, with upwards of 30 members, was organized in the late winter period of this year. It has made very favorable progress. During the long vacation season many of the members practiced diligently and now, with another school year opened, the band seems destined to get along famously if given the necessary support. Financing the band has been a difficult thing for the members and the school faculty to do up to this time, but it holds such promise as a school organization that a request for an appropriation is now filed by the school committee.

In addition to this request the selectmen have received a petition signed by 20 voters asking that a clause be inserted in the warning for the annual town meeting to see if the town will vote an appropriation of $1,200 for the care of trees. A similar proposition was before the annual town meeting a year or two ago, but was defeated, though receiving very considerable support.

There may be some delay in erecting road signs of a warning nature and relectors where routes No. 12 and U. S. 3 at North Main street and Westcott road and also at dangerous points in and near Attawaugan, where there is an intersection that it is intended be better marked and where Route No. 12 and a state road leading from Dayville into Attawaugan meet. First Selectmen Charles A. Tillinghast and an inspector from the motor vehicle department in Hartford yesterday made an inspection of the points referred to.

Insofar as Danielson is concerned the text of a law under which the desired action to be taken is not quite as clear as officials would like to have it as to whether the signs should be erected by the town or the borough working in conjunction with the department at Hartford. One provision of this law would apparently give the borough authority to erect the signs, inasmuch as it has 10 police officers, and that is a determining factor, but there remains the fact that only two of these officers are on duty regularly, and that is something else again. Therefore, the prospective delay until it can be determined whether the town or the borough shall become the active party at the junction of U. S. Route 6 and State Route No. 1.

Mr. and Mrs. Hermanigilde Lajeunesse of Maple street have had as their guest Alex olesey of St. Lamberts, P. Q., a friend Mr. Lajeunesse had not seen for 35 years. Other guests at the Lajeunesse home were Amadee and Joseph Lajeunesse of Providence.

Russell Danielson, graduate of Killingly High school in June, has gone to Hanover, N. H., to begin a course of study at Dartmouth college. His brother, Alden, is to enter the Connecticut Agricultural college at Storrs this fall. They are sons of James Danielson of the River road.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cudworth of East Franklin street are entertaining Mrs. James Baron of Lowell, their former home.

There is a considerable list of applicants to be made voters when the selectmen and town clerk are in session next Staurday to examine the qualifications of those who would be admitted as electors.

There is advocacy here for the formation of a Parent-Teachers' association. Danielson is one of few the larger communities in eastern Connecticut without such an association.

Mrs. Hugh Mason, Miss Eliza D. Putnam, Miss Mary L. Young, Mrs. C. E. Tayntor, Mrs. Harry E. Back, Miss Annie M. Hutchins, Mrs. Harold H. Tayntor and Mrs. W. K. Lienback will be the hostesses when members of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., meet Thursday afternoon. Mrs. C. H. Wickham of Hartford will address the meeting, at the Westfield Congregational church parish house.

Through Wauregan village where the trolley road wound a torturous way for nearly a quarter of a century, rails and ties are being removed. Similiar operations have been underway for weeks past all the way from Wauregan to North Grosvenordale, at different points on the road.

Alton Eldridge of Broad street an-nounced that negotiations are going forward with a view to holding an old-time fiddlers' convention in Danielson in the near future, with fiddlers in attendance from various actions of southern New England.

Entrances to the one time ornate band stand on Davis park have been closed. The stand, now in need of considerable repair, has been more or less abused all season by young people who have frequented it, especialily at night.

Again today the only business await-ing the town court was an intoxication case, Judge W. Fenner Woodward imposing a sentence of 30 days in jail on Samuel Aubrey of Goodyear, who has previously been before the court.

Indications are that it will be late in the fall season before the stretch of concrete highway being built in the town of Plainfield northward to Central Village is completed and the new bridge over the Moosup river opened to traffic.

Mothers of pupils attending Killingly High school were invited to be at the school this afternoon from 4 to 6 o'clock to meet Principal Ernest R. Warren and members of the faculty, and to enjoy a program of entertainment arranged for them.

The town's road planer was in ser-vice today, smoothing the surfaces of Academy and School streets. The surface of School street became particularly bumpy during the hot weather season.

Announcements have been made of the marriage of Miss Helen P. Given and Mr. Lawrence McCarthy of Middleboro, Mass. Miss Given was formerly a teacher here and her many friends are wishing her happiness.

Friday evening, a linen shower was given in honor of Miss Mildred Leanna at the home of Miss Kathleen Varney. Games were played and refreshments were served by Miss Varney, Ethel Birch and Miss Sadie Gorman. The refreshments were sandwiches, punch, cake and ice cream, and the house was very prettily decorated in rose. The bride to be received many beautiful gifts.

The guests were Miss Beatrice Legace, Anna Samboski, Wanda Niedjilk, Marjorie Bernnan, Agnes Phelan, Mary Kilgarif, Sadie Gorman, Yolanda Camerbo, Ethel Berch, Jeanette Grenon, Mrs. Marie Poirier, of Putnam, and Miss Thelma Cogan of Hartford and Gertrude Poirier.

PUTNAM

DEMOCRATS IN PUTNAM CHOOSE THEIR TICKET

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 17.—Following the democratic town caucus which was held last evening and resulted in the selection of the ticket a lively campaign is forecasted to take place by workers of both parties. The republicans will fight to maintain control of the town government while the democratic faction will battle to tighten their grip on town affairs which began last year with the electing of two democrats to represent the town in the state legislature. The democrats have placed the following in the field: Selectmen, Edward F. Girard and Edmund Dubois; collector of taxes, Alfred Bonneville; board of relief, Adelard P. Pepin; assessor, Daniel J. Labossiere; auditor, John J. McGarry; registrar of voters, George Potvin; constables, Thomas Duquette, Edward Benoit, Edmund Keane and Joseph Page. Because of the town committee's failure to secure a party member who would permit his name to be offered as a candidate for the town clerk, agent of the town deposit fund and town treasurer's offices, a vote was passed authorizing the committee to make the appointment in the event a candidate was available.

The names of Edward Mullan, prominent Putnam merchant, and James J. Charron were offered as nominees for positions on the town school committee. A unanimous vote resulted.

With the exception of Town Clerk Henry N. Benoit, who is also town treasurer and agent of the town deposit fund, every republican nominee named at the party caucus last Thursday evening will meet with stiff opposition. Edmund Dubois, the democratic choice for selectman, is certain to gain a large vote. Mr. Dubois is an extremely popular public servant. He is at present serving his fourth term as alderman from the second ward in the common council. In this capacity he has established an enviable record. Edward F. Girard, minority member of the board of selectmen, running mate of Dubois, is likewise a strong candidate and in past elections has polled large votes.

Alfred Bonneville, the democratic nominee for town tax collector, will encounter the most opposition of any candidate in his fight for office. Although Mr. Bonneville is a popular figure in town politics he is pitted against the present incumbent, Attorney Irving H. Miron, who has built up a strong republican machine that is yet to be defeated. In a statement to The Bulletin last evening following his nomination Mr. Bonneville asserted: "I will make every effort to win." The democratic nominee was formerly collector of city taxes. He retired from this office seven years ago, carrying with him an excellent record as a municipal servant.

Former Alderman Edward W. Mullan and James J. Charron are their party's choice for positions on the town school committee. Both are prominent Putnam business men and have had successful political careers thus far. Their nomination insures an active campaign for these offices. The republican present incumbents who have been re-nominated are: Silas M. Wheelock, an official of the Putnam Woolen company, and Joseph A. P. Gagne, local druggist.

DEATH OF WILLIAM E. DAVISON TUESDAY MORNING

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 17.—This city suffered the loss of another of its prominent and influential citizens today in the death of William E. Davison of Alpha street, who expired shortly after 4 o'clock this morning following a heart attack. Word of the death of Mr. Davison was received as a shock by many Putnam people, among whom he had spent the greater part of his life. Mr. Davison was born in Putnam, June 20, 1858, the son of Elisha and Mary (Cutler) Davison. He received his education in the schools of Putnam and following the completion of his studies confined himself to the study of the designing of textile fabrics. He was employed for several years as a designer in the Putnam Woolen company and about 10 years ago accepted his present position, that of agent of the state department of agencies and institutions. Mr. Davison was chiefly devoted to the relief of the poor.

Last September, when the republican voters of the town convened in caucus to select their candidates for town and state offices, Mr. Davison was nominated as a candidate for representative in the state legislature. He waged a strong campaign, but was defeated in the fall elections by his democratic opponent, J. Otis Fox. Fraternally Mr. Davison was a member of the Quinebaug lodge of A. F. and A. M., and was a member of the Israel Putnam lodge of Odd Fellows. He was a member of the Congregational church of this city.

Surviving him is a daughter, Mrs. Arthur Loomis, of Mechanics street, and a son, Arthur Davison, of Plymouth, Mass.

Welcome Baker, a lad of 17 years, was before Judge M. H. Geissler in police court this morning on charges of breaking and entering and theft of two watches and a small sum of money. Baker, through his guardian in the matter, Henry N. Benoit, in the capacity of probation officer, entered a plea of guilty to both offenses. Upon a recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Eric H. Johnson, Baker was ordered bound over to superior court. In default of bonds posted at $500 to affect his release, he was committed to the county jail at Brooklyn to await trial.

Baker was arrested late yesterday afternoon by Sergt. of Police George H. Liard following a two-day investigation of the theft committed at the home of Mrs. Joseph Shepherd of Prospect street on Sunday. Captain of Police William J. Jarvis who led the investigation that culminated in the arrest of the boy, said today that Baker came to Putnam on Sunday morning after spending a night in the woods where he slept beneath a tree. Observing Mrs. Shepherd's custom of going to late church services Sunday mornings, he decided to commit the offenses at noon. He went to the house, armed with a revolver, which he intended to use in the event he met opposition, and ransacked the house. Two watches, belonging to boarders at the Shepherd home were found and taken and the sum of $9 which was laying exposed on a shelf in one of the rooms. Sunday evening Baker went to Auburn, Mass., where he paid the stolen funds to a debtor who held a claim against him and who threatened action if he did not raise the money. Baker told Captain Jarvis that fear of the Auburn claimant led him to steal the money and the watches. The loot was partly recovered and is in possession of the police.

Baker is a former Putnam boy. He attended schools here sometime ago. Following the removal of his family to Auburn, he started to roam and later was convicted of a major juvenile offense for which he served two years in the Lima school for boys in Boston. He was paroled on the strength of his good record about a year ago and was placed in care of his father. Since then he has been living in Putnam and in Auburn.

OBITUARY

Lorena Manville

Lorena Manville, 8-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Manville, of Battey street, died Sunday afternoon at her home after a brief illness. It was disclosed that death was caused by an acute case of diphtheria. The death of the little girl was a sad incident. She was the only child and was an exceptionally talented scholar at St. Mary's school where she was enrolled in the primary department. On Friday Lorena came home from school and complained to her mother of some affection in her throat. Mrs. Manville became alarmed and summoned a physician at once. The presence of the almost fatal disease was recognized at once; an effort was made to save her life, but the malady which she had in some unexplained manner contracted developed so quickly that medical science failed.

Diphtheria being regarded with such fear by the local health officials it was necessary that funeral services and burial take place at once in order to prevent any possibility of an outbreak of the dangerous disease in the community. The funeral was a most pathetic scene. Only the parents and a few relatives who were forced to remain outside the house, were allowed to attend. Burial took place in St. Mary's cemetery. Committal services were by Rev. Ernest J. Boileau, curate at St. Mary's church, of which the little girl was a member.

Lorena Manville is the second victim of diphtheria in Putnam within a year. Only a few months ago a schoolmate of hers, Lauretta Gregoire, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adolphus Gregoire fell a victim of the same malady.

Mayor Charles A. Richard left this afternoon for Boston where he is to attend a republican banquet this evening at the Hotel Statler in that city. The gathering was tendered in honor of United States Senator Felix Herbert, of Rhode Island. The chief executive was among scores of other mayors of Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts cities present.

Thomas McDermott, of Bristol, R. I., former Putnam baseball manager and one time owner of the well known eastern Connecticut diamond nine, "McDermott's Braves," was in this city yesterday visiting among friends.

Miss Elizabeth F. Finnery, of Edge-wood, R. I., injured yesterday morning in an auto accident which occurred in North Grosvenordale, was still a patient at the Day Kimball hospital suffering from injuries. Miss Finnery is under arrest and upon her discharge from the hospital will be arraigned in town court in North Grosvenordale to answer to a charge of operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor. Her condition was reported as improved.

A method of making "cod liver oil" from yeast has been developed, the substitute having the same chemical substance, ergosterol, which prevents rickets.

FURTHER LIMITATION

It is a good sign when nations evidence a willingness to enter a conference which has for its purpose the limitation of armament. Getting together doesn't necessarily mean that there will be a successful outcome, for it is a matter of record that two gatherings in Europe have failed to accomplish anything, but there is the precedent of the Washington conference which cannot be overlooked, and neither can the several nations which participated therein disregard the beneficial effects of the naval pact agreed upon there.

Thus when it is shown that the nations which gathered at Washington are ready to enter another conference, it indicates that they are interested in the matter of limitation and it is fair to infer that they are hopeful that definite results may be obtained.

In the past seven years there has been an opportunity to study the advantages of the limitation which was placed upon battleships. There are also the facts resulting from the exchange of views in the conferences in Europe and now interest has been whetted by discussions which have been undertaken between this country and Great Britain.

In the Washington conference there was a desire to extend limitations beyond the point finally agreed upon. It was not regarded with favor by certain of the nations and had to be abandoned. The seed that was sown then did not fall upon barren ground. If we judge arigha it took root and has been slowly growing ever since, until the time is approaching, from all indications, when it will bear fruit.

The progress that has been made is reflected in the willingness of the five powers, which negotiated the naval agreement, being willing to meet again for further limitation which may include all naval craft. With an Anglo-American understanding in regard to cruisers one obstacle will be overcome. With a limitation on that class of warships, outside of tonnage, some advancement will be made, but there appears to be a possibility that submarines may go and the agreement concerning battleships may be extended. Such a goal is most encouraging, and there is good reason for believing that the agreement already in effect has done much to bring about the changing attitude.

ANGUS PARK

In the death of Angus Park of Sprague and Norwich there has been removed a man of sterling worth, a leader in many important enterprises and a citizen who was held in the highest esteem by a wide circle of associates and friends.

During the past 30 years this part of Connecticut has especially felt his influence and recognized his ability. During his career of 70 years he has given a fine demonstration of what can be done by those who make the most of their opportunities. With no more advantages than those afforded by a common school education he came to America and began to learn the woolen manufacturing business from the ground up. Because of his zeal and ability he steadily progressed until the time came when he had recognized the advantages of the mill property at Hanover, acquired it, reequipped and developed it and created the nucleus of a most successful woolen manufacturing business, with similar connections in other towns, while a state senator, he did much to encourage sheep raising in Connecticut.

Most of his years were spent in the woolen manufacturing business and the transformation of Hanover village can be attributed to his interest and enterprise. His was the force behind the change quite the same as it was behind the success of his mill operations. He knew his business thoroughly and he knew his employes.

Equally successful has been his last years as a banker in this city and in that circle alone his death will mean a distinct loss to Norwich. True to every trust, a loyal and sympathetic friend, a diligent and consistent worker in every good cause and a wise counselor, death has removed a man who will be greatly missed.

CRIME INFORMATION

In the effort to catch those who have committed crimes it is recognized that time plays an important part. Once a crime is committed the plan is to flee but if the information concerning the act and the suspicions concerning who is responsible can be quickly conveyed to other places the chances of catching the guilty ones are good.

It is possible to employ the telephone in this respect but the idea of having the cities of this state, and more recently the cities of Connecticut, Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania, united in a telegraph system whereby the information is transmitted to all points at the same time has been advanced and is finding favor. This would make possible not only the sending of crime news from the large centers, such as New York, Boston and Philadelphia but from any one of the cities connected with the system. There would be much of the information that would be of little use but it would be all available for the benefit of such help as might be rendered.

The purpose is to block the criminals who are these days employing the high powered automobiles in their work and covering long distances in short periods of time. Time is an important factor in this respect and whatever early information can be placed in the hands of the authorities of other cities is bound to operate to the advantage of those who are combatting crime.

With such a system covering the states like a net work, the news of a crime placed on the wire would go to all cities instead of a few and thus overcome the task of trying to guess which direction was taken by the criminals. That such a system will come eventually if not in the immediate future seems probable.

INSPECTING AUTOMOBILES

Occasionally there are started campaigns for the inspection of motor cars, with the result that it is possible to disclose the fact that many of the requirements of the motor vehicle laws are violated. It isn't always that it is done intentionally, and allowance is made for that by permitting the owners to meet requirements immediately. The result is that there is a valuable contribution made to the safety of the highways, while auto owners are brought to realize more seriously the need of complying with the regulations. They are helped to realize that the rules really mean something.

By this method only those cars which happen to pass the point where the inspectors are located are looked over. Some of the worst may never get a once over. In the states of Pennsylvania and New Jersey the owners of automobiles must submit their cars for inspection during the coming month. This means that they must drive their machines to designated points and pass the test or be subjected to the penalty that is imposed by the law. It is a move that is calculated to reach all cars, as a checkup will of course show, and by this plan there is a much more thorough scrutiny of the automobiles of those commonwealths than there would be if inspectors appeared here and there at different times for the same purpose.

In connection with this required inspection it is stated that numerous stations will be designed so there will be an elimination of delay and congestion. This indicates that there is a disposition to avoid discrimination. If inspectors can be placed in or sent to the centers of population for this purpose it is certain to bring much better cooperation from the motor vehicle owners than would be the case, if they were required to drive varying distances to inspection points and then stand the chance of being unable to get the inspectors' attention for lack of time and be required to keep trying until accomodated.

The requirement of Pennsylvania and New Jersey is an excellent one and their consideration of the auto owners is such that it should result in the heartiest cooperation on their part. In the interest of highway safety noticeable results should be obtained.

SAVING OLD IRONSIDES

England through popular subscription saved Lord Nelson's flagship, the Victory, was a lasting relic for all time; Japan is doing likewise for Admiral Togo's flagship, the Makasa. Can we do less for our immortal vessel, the Constitution?

This is a question that is asked by the committee that is organized to save Old Ironsides. It is a question that remains for the people of this country to answer.

The work of restoration of the old frigate has been underway for many months. It was made possible in the beginning by the contributions of the school children of the country who provided a substantial sum. In March congress authorized the secretary of the navy to receive contributions from the citizens of the country for the rebuilding and refitting of the famous ship, and according to reports that work has been about 75 per cent completed. In the hope that the remainder of the needed amount may be secured a new appeal is being made by the committee in the hopes of getting the funds in hand this month.

From one end of the country to the other there is a deep interest in this old flagship of Bainbridge, Hull, Stewart and Decatur. It stands out in marked contrast to the modern warship, but for the service that it rendered in other days and the inspiring picture which such a type of vessel makes it should not and will be preserved. Not only will it be saved from decay but its restoration will be of such a character that it will again sail from port to port. It will not become simply a relic established at one base, but will circulate along the coasts of the country and plow the ocean as in days of yore.

Here is an oportunity for participation in a valuable work of restoration that will be regarded as a patriotic duty. It is that same admiration for the record of this ship that made it possible to get the funds to keep it in such good condition until this time. Age has had its inevitable effects and the most elaborate reconstruction work ever attempted upon it is underway now. Americans who appreciate the part that it played in the early days of this country should and doubtless will be eager to participate in this undertaking. It is another one of those instances where many hands make light work

The man on the corner says: There is much talk about over-eating but how many listen attentively?

Among other things, that coming onion conference in the Connecticut valley ought strengthen things up a bit.

THE ODD JOB

"Are you good at odd jobs?" read the sign in the window. "Then you can save big money on these bookshelves, $4.95."

Bookshelves always interest me. I need such rows of reference books to keep my adventure stories straight. It would never do, for instance, to have my hero climbing a banyan tree to escape a panther when he should really be skipping up a baobab to dodge a tiger. This bookshelf, I could see, would just fit the end wall of my room in the Widow's.

"Yes, sir," said the man in the store, "you'll save $20 on this bookshelf by finishing it yourself."

"Finishing it?" I said. "Isn't it—er—completed?"

"Oh, yes," said the man, "it's completed, but it isn't finished. You can see for yourself it's not painted yet."

"Ah," said I, "I thought there was something strange about it."

"If you're good at odd jobs," continued the man, "you can easily finish it in any color you like."

"An excellent idea," I said. "And what finish would you recommend?"

"Oh, just use your own," said the man, adding under his breath, "it isn't very far away either."

"Send the bookshelf round," I said, "to the Widow's."

"The Widow's?"

"Eleven forty-four Acacia street," I corrected myself, and as I left the shop I heard the man muttering, "The Widow's!" he was saying. "Trust some dame to have her hooks into a simple fish like that." I had half a mind to go back and tell the man that I had roomed for three years at the Widow's and knew she was too kind-hearted to put hooks into anything, and who was he calling a fish? That's what one of my heroes would have done, but I finally pretended I hadn't overheard the fellow.

On the way home I stopped to get the paint.

"What's a good finisher?" I asked.

"In an argument," said the man, "there's nothing like a baseball bat."

"This is for a bookshelf," I said.

"Chinklak's what you want."

"I'd like to have it red," I said. "What's a good shade of red for a bookshelf?"

"Dark green," said the man, reaching down two cans. "Here it is, with the white undercoater. You need a thinner, too."

"But," said I, "I take exercises every morning."

"You still seem kinder thick to me," said the man, "but anyways the thinner's for the Chinklak. Have you a brush?"

"Oh, yes," I said, "several. Two hairbrushes and a whiskbroom——"

"There," said the man, tossing in a peculiar flat brush, "that'll be $5." And as I walked away I could hear him muttering, "There's more than bookshelves that's turned out unfinished." Then "Hey!" he called, "Don't try to paint that bookshelf yourself. I'm telling you as a friend. You'll get all the Chinklak on your clothes and none on the bookshelf. Slip a coupla bucks to some odd job man and you'll save $50."

As I was already saving $20 by finishing the bookshelf myself, this would bring my total savings to $70, which I thought was pretty good for one afternoon.

When I reached my room the door was open. Inside, the Widow and the professor, as the other roomer was known, stood gazing at the end wall against which rested a beautiful walnut bookcase.

"What's this?" I exclaimed. The professor jumped, and the Widow started round, so plump and rosy she reminded me of Mrs. Santa Claus.

"I thought this would be nice," said the Widow, "for your books in the new year."

"That isn't what I wanted for the new year," I said, whereupon the Widow's face clouded so suddenly I felt myself doing what my heroes always do on the last page—seizing her firmly around the waist and planting a solid smack on her lips.

"Isn't this—isn't this," murmured the Widow, "an odd job for you?"

"It is," said I, "but I'm going to make it my regular business."

"A very sensible resolution," said the professor.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 17—In these days of tariff revision discussion it is interesting to note that so learned an authority as James G. Blaine found no more than a half century ago that there was nothing new even then in the terminology of the debate.

Blaine's reflections are recorded in his "Twenty Years of Congress, 1861 to 1881," printed in 1884. In its preparation the author read all of the tariff debates in congress from the first session to his day. And he makes this observation on his reading:

"It is a circumstance of curious interest that nearly if not quite all the arguments used by supporters and opponents of a protective tariff system were presented at that time (in the first congress) and with a directness and ability which have not been surpassed in any subsequent discussion.

"The 'ad valorem system' of levying duties was maintained against 'specific' rates in almost the same language employed in the discussions in recent years (the '80's).

"The 'infant manufacturers', the need of the 'fostering care of the government' for promotion of 'home industry,' the advantages derived from 'diversified pursuits,' the competition of 'cheap labor in Europe,' were all rehearsed with a familiarity and ease which implied their previous and constant use in the legislative halls of the different states before the power to levy imposts was remitted to the jurisdiction of congress."

The Old Story.

Were he still living, Mr. Blaine might repeat in 1929 what he observed in 1884. The terminology of tariff debate remains the same now.

And there is another aspect of his study of the beginnings of and reasons for the American protective tariff policy which might equally well be brought up to 1929 date, only with the boot on the other leg.

For Mr. Blaine accounted in part for the situation in the period just before the beginning of the war between the states, and which made the tariff question, in his judgment, one of the major contributing causes of that war, by the fact that a "prodigious capacity" for industrial production had been set in motion in England "by the agency of steam."

Today the term used is "mechanization" of industry and it is America, not England, which leads the world in productive capacity.

Blaine argued that this factor led to the production peaks and following commercial depression periods and that it was "beyond the operation of duties either high or low" to correct.

Brought Up to Date.

By a freak of chance, the Bystander stumbled over this bit from Blaine's writings just after he had read Secretary James J. Davis' discussion of "American Labor Problems" in a September issue magazine.

The problem of finding employment for those workers thrown out of jobs by the constantly increasing mechanization of American industry is placed first in the secretary's list.

"This great machinery of production we have put together turns out a volume of goods that it may tax us to consume," Mr. Davis said. "We cannot permit the growth of unemployment through too rapid improvements in mechanical means. We must learn to create new public wants and new industries to supply them."

YOUR HEALTH

An Adequate Alkali Reserve.

By William E. Gardner, M. D., Louisville, Ky.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

To one who has, for many years, had the privilege of observing individuals from the standpoint of their nervous and mental makeup, mental health appears as an important factor in the study of preservation of health during the warm months.

Statistics have shown that the number of admissions to mental hospitals during the months of the spring and early summer is usually quite large, and while many valid explanations have been offered to account for this, there is one which we believe has not been given adequate emphasis; and that is a physical condition known to the medical profession as "a low alkali reserve."

There are pretty well defined normal limits within which the alkali reserve of an individual should be maintained if his mental integrity is to be preserved in times of stress and strain. It is not unusual that after a great deal of arduous indoor work of the winter months, during which the individual has subsisted on a rather high fat and protein diet, and in addition may have either mild or severe infections of the respiratory tract, a condition of relative acidosis will appear. If such a condition be suspected it can be determined by well known laboratory tests of the blood and urine, or of the air expired from the lungs. If present to any marked degree, and allowed to go uncorrected in an individual who is at all unstable in his nervous and mental makeup, serious consequences may ensue.

Simple transitory conditions of so called acidosis, such as are manifested by a persistently red tongue or a slightly pungent odor of the breath, can usually be corrected by a liberal diet of sweet or starchy foods and the administration of moderate amounts of alkali. In those individuals, however, who do not respond to the ordinary methods of treatment, symptoms of mental hebitude or even a definite confusional state of mind may make their appearance. When such symptoms are sufficiently well established that a diagnosis of a "toxic" or an "infective exhaustive" state of the brain can be made, it is at once apparent to the experienced observer that several months of hospital care will be required to bring about a complete mental restoration.

We suggest, therefore, that those individuals who have had any sort of an illness with fever during the winter months, or who, in the spring and early summer, have either lost considerable weight or note that they are persistently "tired out" and do not feel refreshed after a good night's sleep, should consult their usual medical adviser and request that he not only give them a thorough physical examination, but also look into the question of their alkali reserve.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Little Joe Otter's Queer Feet.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

'Tis true, e'en though it be not clear,
That nothing actually is queer.
—Old Mother Nature.

Little Joe Otter had slipped into the Smiling Pool. There was no splash when he entered the water. He entered it so smoothly that there was no splash at all. Sitting on the bank, Bowser the Hound and Flip the Terrier could look down into the water and could see for a considerable depth. They saw a fish suddenly shoot across their line of vision. "Shoot" just expresses it, that fish was moving so fast. Behind that fish shot a long, round form. It was Little Joe Otter. A moment later, on the farther side of the Smiling Pool, Little Joe's head suddenly popped out of the water. In his mouth was a fine trout.

Little Joe swam back and climbed up the bank. He sat down a short distance from Bowser and Flip. At once he began to eat that trout. "I don't suppose," said he, "that it is of any use to offer you any of this fine fish."

"No," replied Bowser, "we prefer meat. Besides, we are not hungry."

Little Joe turned to Flip. "I believe," said he, "you have some questions you want to ask me."

"If you please," replied Flip, fairly quivering with curiosity, "Is that the fish we saw shooting through the water just ahead of you a few minutes ago?"

"I presume it is," replied Joe.

"Then that means that you can swim faster than a fish," said Flip, looking as if he couldn't believe it.

"If I couldn't swim faster than a fish I guess I should go hungry pretty often," replied Little Joe. "A fish has got to go some to get away from me."

"Oh!" exclaimed Flip. "I thought Billy Mink must be the greatest swimmer in all the Great World. But I see I was mistaken."

"I told you there were others," replied Little Joe carelessly.

"What makes your feet look so queer?" asked Flip. He had been staring for some time at Little Joe's feet.

Little Joe held up a forefoot, spread his toes and looked at it. "What is there queer about that?" he inquired.

"Why—why," stammered Flip, "it reminds me of a duck's foot."

Little Joe chuckled. "You mean the webs," said he. "Yes, my toes are webbed just as the foot of Honker the Goose is, and the foot of Quack the Mallard Duck. All my toes are joined by webs." He held up first one foot and then another. Flip saw that all four feet had those curious webs between the toes.

"If you please," said Flip somewhat timidly, "what are those webs for?"

Flip nodded.

"Well," continued Little Joe. "I wouldn't be able to swim like that but for these webs between my toes. They make big paddles of my feet when I stretch my toes and drive me feet when I stretch my toes and drive through the water. You can swim without webs, but if you had webs you could swim ten times faster and easier."

Flip sighed. "I wish my feet were webbed," said he.

"If they were you wouldn't be able to race around on land the way you do now," spoke up Bowser. "Little Joe can travel on land, but he can't run and race the way you can."

Flip thought this over for a minute. Then his face brightened. "Well," said he, "if I can't do both I guess I would rather race and run than swim."

WORKS HARD IN THE FIELD

Relies Upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Rankin, Illinois.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a tonic before and after my first child was born six years ago. Then when my second child came and I felt weak and rundown, I took it again. I am still taking it and I am feeling better. My mother used it for herself when I was small and always got good results. She still takes it. I do all kinds of heavy work, including my housework and I also help in the field. I recommend the Vegetable Compound and I am willing to answer any letters."—Mrs. Ben Obenland, Route 2, Rankin, Illinois.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Two Dangers

Dear Editor:—You wrote about the raging forest fires sometime ago and the care we should take with matches and cigarettes. The best thing would be to cut out cigarette smoking entirely if we wish to preserve our woodlands and guard our property. Everyone ought to be able to make a little sacrifice for the sake of his country. Smoking is being entirely overdone in these days to the detriment of health and property.

There is another peril threatening our trees and forests. It is the caterpillar and other insects. We find many nests of larvae hanging over our trees like swarms of bees. It would be easy to burn these and destroy the pests, but most of us are saving our fireworks for the "Fourth." Here is a hint for the park commission.

Mother and daddy went to admire the beautiful baptistry.

"Let's come to this church," said Peggy, "then I can learn to swim."

Know Mother's Habit

Betty's mother had a reputation at the store and among friends and neighbors for buying things and then returning or exchanging them. One morning Betty's father took her in to see her baby brother, who had arrived the night before. She was very much pleased with the baby and asked several questions about him and then said: "I think he is lovely and wish we could keep him, but I know mother will send him back because they forgot to make him some teeth."

HELPS NORWICH FAMILIES WHEN IN MISFORTUNE

Describing the field in which the family welfare department of the United Workers is active, a member of the committee said Tuesday:

"Can you imagine anything more from illness, lack of employment or any other cause over which one has no control than to be "down and out" trol, to see wife and children suffering for the actual necessities of life and to be powerless to change conditions."

"Many a man has faced this tragic situation and many a widow left with dependents to house and feed, has felt that she was indeed forsaken by God and man, until a sweet faced social worker hears of the case and comes to see what may be done to relieve the suffering.

"By tactful inquiry, the worker draws out the story of the misfortunes, gains the confidence of the household and finds out the immediate needs of the members of the family. Even the pouring of the story into sympathetic ears has relieved the tension and when the larder is stocked with plain but nutritious food, warm clothing supplied and the coal and wood boxes filled with several days supply of fuel, the morale of household has had a tremendous boost.

"Nor does the worker satisfy herself with supplying immediate relief. She makes every effort to procure employment for the bread earner and keeps her interest in the family, very much alive until it can stand squarely on its feet again.

"The family welfare department has charge of this branch of the activities of the United Workers and those on this committee find it of gripping interest. Since the work is confidential, its clients do not feel that they are being offered charity but that they are being helped over a difficult situation by an organization which is doing it all in the name of Him who bade us love our brethren."

OBITUARY

Angus Park.

Angus Park, millionaire woolen mill owner of Hanover and interested in banks of Norwich and Danielson, died Tuesday morning at Bethlehem, N. H., following a long illness. For the past nine weeks Mr. Park had been stopping at a hotel in Bethlehem.

Mr. Park was the son of William and Catherine Campbell Park and was born Jan. 27, 1859, at Galashiels, Scotland, a busy manufacturing city of about the size of Norwich. His home was there until the age of fourteen when the family removed to Sherbrooke, Canada. Mr. Park had worked in the woolen mills at Galashiels and he went to work in a woolen mill in Canada, displaying at that early age the industry and earnestness which were his life-long characteristics. He worked his way to the position of overseer of weaving in the mill of the Paton Manufacturing company, the largest woolen mill in Canada, having at that time 140 people under his direct supervision. He was there employed until 1894 when he came into this state, locating at East Lyme and became secretary of the Niantic Manufacturing company, a woolen mill business, in which he was associated with his uncle, D. R Campbell, and his brother, William Park. There he remained until August, 1899, when he severed his connection with the Niantic company and purchased the Allen mill and properties at Hanover, where his home has been ever since and where he established the Airlie mills, named after the ancestral home of Wallace, the great Scottish chieftain.

With the coming of Mr. Park to Hanover a new era opened for the village, where Mr. Park realized his dream of crowning his success in business by creating a model community where all the comforts of life could be enjoyed by its residents. Besides erecting a new mill building in the course of time and equipping it with the most modern machinery, Mr. Park provided the village with a water system, fire protection and paved streets. He built his own fine residence there and one for his son and practically rebuilt the village by erecting between 50 and 60 model homes for his employes. He was a large benefactor of the Hanover Congregational church of which he was a member, he presented a lot for the erection of the Catholic church and a few years ago built a community house on the lot next to the Congregational church.

Mr. Park's enterprise and business activity led him to extend his business interests beyond Hanover and in March, 1903 when the Assawana company was organized at Dayville he became its manager and one of its largest stockholders. At the time of his death he was president and general manager of the Assawana company and treasurer and general manager of the Angus Park Manufacturing company with mill at East Glastonbury.

When the Bankers Trust company was organized in this city in 1921, Mr. Park was elected as its first president and has continued in that position ever since. When the bank was threatened with financial difficulties three years later through the unfaithfulness of one of its officers, Mr. Park came to the rescue with his own financial resources and averted the calamity that was impending. At the time of his death he also had other banking connections, being a trustee of the Norwich Savings society and a director of the Danielson Trust company.

Mr. Park was married Dec. 24, 1880, at Sherbrooke, Canada, to Elizabeth Barlow Eadie, who survives him with their three children, Mrs. N. Lorne Gregg of Danville, Mrs. Frank G. Way of Glastonbury, and William G. Park of Hanover, who has been closely associated with his father in the prosecution of all his plans for the development of Hanover. There are also three brothers and a sister. They are: William of Stafford, George of Wellesley, Mass., and Thomas Park of Satattua, Me., and Mrs. Eunice Park Mountain of Amesbury, Mass.

Mr. Park was a member of the Hanover Congregational church and was a republican in politics. He was also a member of the Masonic fraternity, belonging to Somerset lodge, No. 34, F. and A. M., at Norwich, Franklin chapter, Franklin council, and Columbian commandery, No. 4, K. T.

NORTH STONINGTON GRANGE FAIR OPENS WITH INTERESTING EXHIBITS

(Special to The Bulletin)

NORTH STONINGTON, Sept. 17—The expected large attendance did not materialize today, the opening day of the 19th annual fair of the North Stonington grange, because of the threatening weather. However, with fair weather tomorrow, the fair officials anticipate the usual large crowd that flocks to the local fairgrounds annually from numerous surrounding towns and villages. The fair was officially opened at 10.30 o'clock this morning.

It was entry day, today, and throughout the morning and afternoon exhibits were arriving on the grounds and being placed. The judging was started shortly after noon and by nightfall was largely completed with the exception of the judging of the horses which will not take place until Thursday. This is due to the fact that there is a lack of facilities to keep the horses at the fairgrounds.

This year's fair promises to surpass in many respects the fairs of former years. The exhibits are many and include, as usual, farm produce, flowers, fruit, homemade jellies, canned fruit and vegetables, fancy work, pictures and drawings, rugs, etc. The large exhibition hall is even more attractive than in past years.

The fair will continue tomorrow and Thursday. The exhibition hall will close each evening at 9 o'clock but there will be plenty of entertainment at the midway attractions and in dancing in the large dance pavilion. The opening entertainment will be given at noon Wednesday at the Grange hall when Frank Lane, Boston magician and sleight of hand performer, will appear on the stage. After the magical performance, Rev. George Gilbert of Middletown, known as the pastoral parson, will enterttain with stories and monologues. At 2 o'clock in the afternoon there will be an exhibition of folk dancing on the fairgrounds under the personal direction of Mrs. John Rae of Pendleton Hill.

The closing day, Thursday, will be Grange day, featured by a Grange speaking programme. Among the well known grangers who will be heard from the speakers' platform will be Miss Elizabeth Cuther of Lowville, N. Y., lecturer of the New York state grange; Mrs. Walter Rodman of Wickford, lecturer of the Rhode Island state grange and Mrs. Charles Curtis of Plainville, lecturer of the Connecticut state grange. Members of granges throughout eastern Connecticut and nearby Rhode Island are expected to be present. An Ashaway orchestra is providing the music for the dancing each evening.

The Campbell cup is being offered as a trophy to the boy or girl showing the largest and best exhibit of poultry at the fair this year. Last year Donald Chappell of Stonington won the cup. It must be won three years before it can be retained permanently. An nouncement was made that any boy or girl in New London county is eligible to compete in the contest for the prize cup. Already a number of entries have been received and keen competition is anticipated.

The committee in charge of the fair consists of John B. Perry, Emily Reutermann, John H. Geer, J. D. Avery, Edna Cook, A. H. Crofts, Clifford B. Thompson, Joseph Crider, Elmer E. Coon and Lila Thompson.

EARLE W. STAMM DELEGATE TO BANKERS' CONVENTION

Earle Williams Stamm, of Norwich, who is vice president and cashier of the National Bank of Commerce of New London, who this year is president of the Connecticut Bankers' association and state vice president of the American Bankers' National association, has been elected the delegate of these Connecticut Banking associations to represent them at the 55th annual convention of the American Bankers' association, to be held at San Francisco, Calif., Sept. 29-Oct. 4th.

This association includes in its membership the 7500 National banks and the 25,000 state banks and trust companies throughout the country. About 7,000 delegates are expected to be in attendance at this convention.

Several special trains have been arranged by the different railroads offering routes for the delegates to chose in going to San Francisco.Leaving N. Y., Saturday on the Pennsylvania R. R. The tourists will make stops at Glacier park, Montana, where a welcome of the delegates will be given by the high chieftans of the black feet Indian tribe, with a special program of primitive dances and ceremonies. Also stops at Spokane, Wash., Portland, Ore. With arrival at San Francisco, Sept. 29.

A wonderfully interesting itinerary of sightseeing and entertainment has been arranged for the banking men, from the time they leave New York until their return to that city. In each big city where a stop is to be made the visitors are to have proof of the proverbial hospitality of the West, while the trip to Hawaii will be crowded with interesting and agreeable experiences for the Eastern tourists.

The convention sessions are to discuss vital and important topics in relation to the banking business, so that, all told, the trip will be the event of a lifetime for those taking it. It is a compliment to Mr. Stamm's ability and high standing, that he has been selected to accompany leading men in banking circles on such a big business mission, and as representative of two such important banking associations of Connecticut.

The banking men will continue to Honolulu after the convention, for a trip of three weeks.

JUNIOR GYM CLASS OPENS WITH RECORD ATTENDANCE

The opening of the fall gym classes at the Norwich Y. M. C. A. took place Monday afternoon at 4.15. The juniors, consisting of boys eleven to fourteen inclusive, had the largest number at their opening of the season that they have had in several years. Nearly 50 boys responded when Physical Director J. H. Demarest called the roll. Many new faces were among the boys on the floor, as well as several of the old-timers.

Shortly after the roll was called a few remarks were made by General Secretary Edwin Hill and Boys' Secretary Davis. After a period of games in the gym, a very enjoyable half hour was spent in the swimming pool. At the conclusion of the swim period every member was served an ice cream sandwich which was enthusiastically appreciated.

This class is out to set a record in attendance this year in competition with the other classes. The class holding the highest total attendance on New Years day will enjoy a special New Year's party in the association building.

This committee reported that it was lost this time through misunderstanding of a great many in just what was asked for.

The treasurer's annual report was read and accepted as one that showed good work on the part of the members. The secretary's report was accepted in like manner.

Plans were laid for carrying on the whist parties that the women held with so much success in the past year.

SEEK FOR REORGANIZATION OF CENTRAL VERMONT R. R.

Through the interstate commerce commission approval has been sought jointly by the Central Vermont railway Inc., and the Canadian national railway of a plan for reorganization of the Central Vermont railway which has been in receiverahip since 1927.

The new company asks authority to issue $10,000,000 of common stock, $12,000,000 of first and general mortgage bonds, and $5,000,000 of debentures, all of which are to be delivered to the Canadian National railway in reimbursement of its expenditures in connection with the reorganization.

The property was sold at foreclosure sale on July 29, 1929, for $22,000,000, the purchasers also assuming liability for $5,000,000 of receiver's certificates. The new company asks authority to acquire and operate the property, and the Canadian National railway asks authority to acquire control by purchase of the new securities.

Can. Ntl. Would Own All Securities

The Vermont Central Railway, Inc., also requested authority to acquire control of the rail subsidiaries of the Central Vermont, and further to acquire the capital stock to operate the Central Vermont Transportation company, a common carrier by water, operating between New York City and New London.

The application states that "in general, the purpose of this application is to enable the applicant, Central Vermont Railway, Inc., to raise money to purchase, own and operate the properties and franchises of the Central Vermont Railway company in the same way and to the same extent that Central Vermont Railway company owned and operated these properties and franchises; and to enable applicant, Canadian National Railway company, to continue to own at least a majority of the stock and securities of applicant, Central Vermont Railway, Inc., in the same way the applicant, Canadian National Railway company, owned the majority of the stock and securities of Central Vermont Railway company, except that applicant, Canadian National Railway company, seeks to own all of the stock and securities of applicant, Central Vermont Railway, Inc., instead of a majority thereof."

Claim Economy and Efficiency

The application further states that "the reasons that the acquisition by the applicant of the stocks and securities of Vermont Central Railway will promote the public convenience and necessity are as follows:

"1. That such acquisition will continue in the applicant the control of a property which for 40 years has been controlled by the applicant or its predecessor.

"2. That the property of the Central Vermont Railway, Inc., for more than 40 years has been operated in connection with the applicant's railroad with the resulting economies and efficiency of service.

"3. That the property of Central Vermont Railway, Inc., offers to applicant a New England outlet for its eastbound traffic, and the applicant offers to Central Vermont Railway, Inc., an opportunity to solicit business from New York and New England.

"4. That approximately 60 per cent of all the business done by the predecessor of Central Vermont Railway, Inc., was 'overhead' or through business which was obtained by the predecessor of Central Vermont Railway, Inc., as a result of its relation to applicant or its predecessor."

COURT GIVES COMPENSATION TO COMMITEE AND APPRAISERS

A half dozen matters were disposed of at a brief short calendar session of the superior court by Judge Earnest C. Simpson. The short calendar session preceded the opening of the criminal term of the court. For failure to plead, the divorce case of Clifton R. Chamberlain against Helen A. Chamberlain was placed on the uncontested list. A statutory continuance of three months was granted in the case of Appleton Main of North Stonington against Lafayette Main, et al., of North Stonington.

As a settlement out of court was reached, a judgment of partition entered last summer in the case of Bennett, et al., against Button, of New London, was vacated by the court. The court cited as a party defendant, Diano V. O'Donnell of Hudson, Mass., in the foreclosure action brought by the Savings bank of New London against S. S. LaPlante, adm., et. al.

Motions for allowance for the support of four minor children, alimony pendente lite and allowance for defense, in the case of George Schiller vs. Anna Schiller, were postponed until Friday morning. The sum of $200 was allowed James R. May, New London realtor, for his service for acting as the committee of sale in four parcels of property located at Ridgewood by the sea, at Ocean Beach. The three appraisers were allowed $25 each. The property was sold as the result of foreclosure proceedings. Motions for the approval of the deed and supplemental judgment were postponed until Friday morning.

WESTFIELD BANKER OPPOSES RHEA COMPANY RECEIVERSHIP

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 17—Daniel F. Doherty, banker of Westfield, Mass., and president of the Rhebat Co. a Massachusetts corporation which sold out a secret process to the Rhode Island Spun Rayon Corp., owners of the national Rhea plant in Putnam, appeared before Judge Hugh B. Baker in the superior court in Providence yesterday and opposed the appointment of a receiver and proposed dissolution proceedings of the Rhea company. Doherty claimed that such action would certainly wipe out second preferred and common stockholders. The stock estimated to be worth $125,000 is pledged at the present time, he stated, with the American Trust Co. Doherty declared that negotiations had been underway for the purchase of the stock held by the Massachusetts corporation of which he is head, and a price of $170,000 was mentioned in conferences with the representatives of the Rhea Co. He declared that the plant could be operated successfully under skilled management. N. Stuart Campbell, head of the National Rhea Co., petitioning for the appointment of a receiver and dissolution of the corporation, admitted that plans had been discussed for continuation of the business under a reorganization following the dissolution but denied the present proceedings are for the purpose of freezing out the small stockholders. Additional working capital is needed and the plant must run to full capacity to make a profit.

SOVIET RUSSIA SERVES NOTICE ON CHINESE GOVT.

MOSCOW, Sept. 17 (AP)—Soviet Russia tonight served notice on the nationalist government of China through the German embassy that the proposed amendments by Nanking to the projected agreement for settlement of the Chinese Eastern railway conflict in Manchuria, are wholly unacceptable to Russia.

Thus, border raids and skirmishes by Chinese troops along the Manchurian frontier, are thought likely to continue indefinitely.

The Russian note says that the Soviet government made only absolutely essential amendments and specifications to Nanking's draft declaration. It goes on:

"The Soviet government regarded from the outset of the conflict and still regards, the fulfillment of the conditions outlined in the Soviet amendments is an elementary prerequisite to any conference:

"In its note of September 9, the Nanking government rejects these minimum amendments, annulling thereby the consent expressed in the draft declaration that a Soviet manager for the Chinese Eastern be appointed."

The note further adds that if Nanking would not withdraw its own proposal respecting the appointment of a Russian manager and assistant on the railroad; settlement of the conflict by agreement is impossible.

NORWICH ROTARIANS LOSE GOLF MATCH TO WILLIMANTIC BROTHERS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 17—Willimantic Rotarians proved themselves better golfers than their Norwich brothers here this afternoon in the second match between the two clubs, the local boys winning by a score of 23 1-2 to 6 1-2. The Norwich Rotarians were very much off their game judging from the scores, only four being able to get points for their team. One Norwich player, Henry Viznot, scored three points for Norwich and proved to be the star of the visitors.

James Mustard was the mainstay of the Thread City club swingers playing two men and taking three points from each one, Al Smith, and Judge Hinman also scored two points for the Willimantic Rotarians. Jack Frazier fell before the terrific driving and spoon shots of Bert Gager in what was the grudge match of the afternoon.

Preceeding the golf match which was played at the Willimantic Country club the Norwich golfers were guests of the Willimantic club at luncheon. The Norwich boys were also dinner guests at the country club in the evening.

The scores:

BATTALINO'S HANDS ARE IN BEST OF CONDITION

HARTFORD, Sept. 18—Bat Battalino, Hartford's hard-hitting featherweight, who will face the great opportunity of his career when he meets Andre Routis, of France, the world's champion, in a title bout at the Hurley stadium, Monday, September 23, offers a paradox in that he has brittle hands despite the fact that he probably hits harder than any featherweight of the past quarter century, if not of all time.

Battalino is a splendid physical specimen, with fine chest development, remarkable biceps and forearm for a featherweight and a sturdy pair of legs.

And he hits with triphammer force, packing a punch that has stowed more than half a hundred opponents into dreamland in his campaigning in the amateur and professional ranks.

Following his last fight, the one in which he decisively defeated Al Brown of Panama, the phantom-like colored boy who lays claim to the bantamweight crown, Battalino complained that he had injured both hands in his whirlwind attack against the elusive Brown.

Promoters who were bidding eagerly for his services, were met with the statement from his manager, Hy Malley, that Bat would not fight again for several weeks in order to give his hands proper rest.

As he starts sparring in the gym in preparation for the title bout, Bat finds his hands back to normal and he will do comparatively little "rough" sparring during this training period to guard against any impairment of the weapons with which he hopes to beat the champion down into the resin at the big stadium on the banks of the Connecticut river.

He will devote himself largely to increasing his speed, to improving his footwork and his general defensive equipment, weakest point in his armor, and to bringing himself to the top-notch physically.

Bat's punching leaves little to be desired. He is a terrific hitter with either hand, though his right is the real death-dealer; he punches fast and accurately and both at close range and long range.

Connecticut looks to see him installed world's champion after this battle and few fight lovers within the borders of the Nutmeg state will fail of being on hand for the gala event.

Reservations may be made at general headquarters, 494 Main street, and should be accompanied by certified checks or money orders made out to the Ed Hurley Boxing club.

BURKE WINS GLEN FALLS OPEN GOLF TOURNEY

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., Sept. 17—(AP)—Billy Burke, New York state open champion, of West Port, won the Glens Falls open championship out of a field of 92 entries, with a score of 323 for 81 holes, to win the first prize money of $500 and the E. W. West cup.

Burke found it necessary to play an extra nine holes today with Bill Mehlhorn, who took second place in the tournament, also won a purse of $300. PUTNAM HIGH HAS BRIGHT FOOTBALL PROSPECTS

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, Sept. 18—Putnam High school's gridiron prospects for a successful season may be safely entered in the promising column. The Noyesmen had their third scrimmage of the training season late this afternoon following the daily physical exercise workout. The boys showed good form, plenty of pep and stamina in carrying the ball. The backfield of the first string consisted of Elliott and Sabin, halfbacks, Tourtelotte full back and Reynolds calling signals. They played well against the ambitious second string men. John Elliott, brother of Tom Elliott, Putnam high school star of other days, will be depended upon by Coach Noyes this season to do much of the ground gaining. His punts are of a high calibre, soaring high into the air and carrying a great distance.

Sabin, who played center on the 1928 eleven, is certain of a berth in the backfield. He plays an excellent offensive at halfback position and hurls long passes, which has been the squad's weak point.

Russ Sherman of the 1928 championship aggregation has returned to school enrolling in a post-graduate course. He is taking part in the daily workouts but will be barred from the game this year because of interscholastic ruling pertaining to graduates.

The Noyesmen will open the season on Saturday Sept. 28, when they take on the strong East Douglas high team. The remainder of the schedule is as follows: October 5, Stonington at Putnam; October 12, Northbridge at Northbridge; October 19, Webster at Putnam; October 26, Plainfield at Plainfield; November 2, Webster at Webster (Bartlett High); November 9, Chapman Tech at New London; November 16, Northbridge at Putnam; November 28, Killingly at Putnam.

The annual Thanksgiving day frolic between Putnam and her ancient rival Killingly will take place at Putnam this year and the local fans in addition to preparing a good dish for the Killonians, are planning an elaborate reception for their biennial visit to the city to celebrate the meet. It has been several years since the Killonians have clinched a victory in this sport from the Noyesmen, but every effort is being made by the Danielson players to break the popular phrase, "Putnam always wins".

JOHNNY KOP WILL FIGHT AT HARTFORD

Johnny Kop, knockout king of the local lightweight boxers, will positively appear on the card at the Velodrome at Hartford next Monday evening contrary to the reports that he would be unable to box owing to an injury to his hand. Kop is slated to box a six round preliminary to the Battalino-Routis featherweight championship fight.

Last week Kop suffered a severe cut of the thumb of his right hand which required several stitches to close. However, the wound is healing satisfactorily and Dr. Suplicki, who is attending Kop, says that the boy will be in prime condition for his bout.

Reports have been circulated that Kop would not be able to fight at Hartford but these are contradicted by Tony Brusso, Kop's manager, and by the fighter, himself. This is the local boy's big chance and he says that it will take more than a cut of the thumb to keep him out of the ring that night. Kop up to the time he suffered the cut on his thumb, had been boxing steadily and had rounded into perfect condition. Since the injury he has been doing only light work, refraining from sparring and devoting his time to shadow boxing and developing speed.

The local boy has had a sensational rise in the puzilistic world since going over to the professional ranks from the amateurs. Always packing a dangerous punch in either hand Kop proceeded to demonstrate that he is a comer. In his six professional fights Kop has scored six knockouts giving him a perfect knockout record. His last fight with Kid DeBartelo at Westerly was one of the best fights that have taken place in eastern Connecticut in many years. Whipped to a standstill in the early rounds Kop came back to put his man away in the fourth. In that fight he showed that he was a game kid and a boy who can take it.

In his bout Monday night he expects to add another knockout to his record. If his injury does not deprive him of power in the right hand he should be able to accomplish this. But even if he should favor his right a little there is still that terrific left to be reckoned with.

Didja ever go some place and meet new people and feel right off the reel that you'd known them for ever so long?

Well that's just how I felt when I went down to the North Stonington Grange fair yesterday. You see I've got that fair mania almost as bad as the golf bug.

The first person I met as I drove through the gate was the secretary and the president, John B. Perry is secretary and A. H. Crofts is the president. two real good fellows. And then I met the treasurer, C. B. Thompson. Ah, those treasurer fellers are the boys it's nice to get in with, they handle a lotta money.

I goes to the office where it says "Secretary's office." I sticks my head in the door and says "Is Secretary John B. Perry in." As there was only one person in the office it didn't take me more'n five minutes to come to the conclusion that I was talking to the secretary.

So I says I'd like to look over his fair and take a few pictures of the officers, etc. Well, he rounds up the boys and you can see how they look on another page. Now, wouldn't you know they was a trio of real good fellows. Just look at those smiles.

Yep, they were just as cordial as they look. Do you know before I had talked with them five minutes I was calling them by their first names. That's how fast you get acquainted with real people.

And the fair. Well, they sure have got a real nice little fair down there. Lots of nice exhibits and everything. And the midway is like the old fashioned fair with its ferris wheel and it's merry-go-round.

Nope, I didn't go on either one, my head's in a whirl most of the time anyway. And if you go down there don't miss that 4-H exhibit, it's a dandy.

And be sure and meet Randy Whapples whose in charge of it. He's another good boy. You'll know him because of his curly hair and sunny smile. No, you girls ain't got a chance, Randy's married.

But to leave all joking aside, the North Stonington Grange has done itself proud in putting on such a real bang-up fair. It's worth an afternoon of anybody's time to go down there and see it.

Thanks Mr. Perry, for the ticket

PIRATES NOSE OUT PHILS IN BIG SEVENTH INNING

PITTSBURGH, Sept. 17.—(AP)—The Pirates came from behind in the seventh inning here today to score eight runs on four singles, defeating the Phillies 11 to 7 in the final game of the season between the two teams. The twenty-two engagements were evenly divided.

The big Pirate seventh, in addition to the four singles, was made up of four passes, a fielder's choice and a wild pitch. Smythe, Elliott and Willoughby were the victims. Burleigh Grimes was knocked from the box in the first round, and Ray French gave way to a pinch batsman in the seventh-inning rally, retaining, however, credit for the victory.

VOLOMITE WINNER IN CINCY FEATURE RACE

CINCINNATI, Sept. 17—(AP)—Volomite, owned by Tom D. Taggart, of French Lick, Ind., and driven by Walter Cox, today won the $2,000 stake for three year old trotters, feature of the grand circuit program at the Coney Island track. ANNULS MICKEY WALKER'S TITLE FOR FAILURE TO DEFEND CROWN

The National Boxing association, governing the sport in 31 states, declared Walker's title vacated because of his failure to defend it in compliance with the N. B. A.'s ruling requiring a champion to defend his crown at least once every six months. He was charged with repeatedly failing to observe the extensions given him, according to Edward C. Foster of Rhode Island, chairman of the championship committee.

Sammy Mandell, world lightweight champion, and Andre Routis, king of the featherweights, were relieved of anxiety regarding having their titles removed. Both were approved by the championship committee.

The delegates also decided to recognize the Andre Routis-Bat Battalino bout at Hartford, Conn., September 23, as a championship affair, inasmuch as Battalino is rated as a terrific puncher. It will be 15-rounds to a decision.

With Walker voted out of his championship, a free-for-all competition will be opened, with the competitors scrambling for championship acclaim. The committee listed a number of challengers, naming Ace Hudkins, the Nebraska wildcat, as the leading member of the division with Rene Devos, and Harry Ebbets of Brooklyn ranking second and third respectively.

Urged by Chairman Foster of the championship committee, the association instructed its member states to bar from promotional or other activity, any individual with a police record. Foster said he was alarmed at the number of bootleggers, racketeers who have insinuated themselves into the sport, as managers and promoters, merely as a cloak to hide their other activities.

"I do not mean that we should bar men who have been arrested for minor offenses like automobile speeding," he added.

The election of officers and selection of the 1930 convention city will wind up the meeting tomorrow, Stanley Isaacs of Cincinnati, vice president of the N. B. A., is slated to become president, although the post may again be offered Paul Prehn, the present executive officer. Prehn, however, is expected to decline.

CHICAGO DROPS DOUBLE-HEADER TO BROOKLYN

CHICAGO, Sept. 17.—(AP)—Brooklyn delayed Chicago's ultimate pennant victory by taking both halves of a double header from the Cubs here today. The Robins pulled out the opener by 8 to 7 through a rally for two runs in the ninth, and repeated in the nightcap by a score of 9 to 0 on Babe Herman's eighth-inning homer with the bases filled.

Dazzy Vance got credit for the opener, although he was in sixth poor form that he blew an early lead of 6 to 0 and gave way to a pinch batsman in the ninth. John Morrison finished that game, and came to the rescue of Ray Moss in the nightcap just in time to get credit for Herman's winning blow.

Cub pitching was indifferent in both games.

Cuyler and Bissonette, in addition to Herman, hit home runs. John Frederick doubled in the first game, tieing the National league record of fifty-two base hits made by Paul Waner last year. Hornsby scored one run, approaching to within one of the modern National league record of 144 made by Cuyler in 1925.

Billy Hamilton of the Phillies holds the all-time record for both major circuits with a record of 196 runs scored in 1894.

STOCK MARKET SLUGGISH YESTERDAY SENDING CALL LOAN RATE TO 10 PER CENT

NEW YORK, Sept. 17.—(AP)— The stream of credit flowing into the stock market grew unexpectedly sluggish today, sending the call loan rate up to 10 per cent, and once more opening the spillways of stock liquidation. Operations for the advance, which had been resumed yesterday as the recent flood of selling appeared to have subsided, were unpleasantly interrupted.

Call money renewed unchanged at 7 1-2 per cent, and the bullish operations were pressed forward enthusiastically during the forenoon, particularly in the utilities, to which section of the list interesting merger prospects have again attracted considerable attention. Formation of large new holding companies have suggested the possibility of competitive bidding for control.

Banks called some $40,000,000 in loans during the day, which sent the call money rate from 7 1-2 to 8, thence to 9 finally to 10 per cent. Early gains were cancelled or sharply reduced during the afternoon. Several leading utilities retained substantial gains, but stocks generally closed moderately lower. The pinch in money following the mid-month settlements, came a few days earlier than was expected, and found traders unprepared.

Money has usually been eased over treasury refinancing dates by the treasury overdraft at the reserve banks, but it is understood the reserve system employed a new plan this time by which the overdraft was passed on to the member banks, which reduced reserve funds, having the same effect as the sale of government securities. Wall street was inclined to see in this a new move by reserve authorities to apply the brakes to the stock market.

The day's business was rather meagre. Some of the leading railroads were said to be once more in the market for large orders of equipment, which improved sentiment in the steel industry. Cuts in the prices of steel bars at Chicago and Youngstown, however, were disquieting. Directors of the Wheeling and Lake Erie declared a dividend of $25.50 to apply to arrears on the 7 per cent prior lien stock.

Public Service of New Jersey, Columbia Gas and Electric, American and Foreign Power, Electric Power and Light and Southern California Edison were among utilities reaching new high ground, the first named closing up 5 points. United Gas Improvement was heavily bought. A few specialties, notably Cutler Hammer and Foster Wheeler also reached record levels. Columbian Carbon jumped 18 points and closed at the top, and American Can, American Telephone, Fox Film A and Simmons closed 2 or 3 points higher.

In the industrials generally, however, most of yesterday's gains were lost. Such issues as U. S. Steel, General Electric, Westinghouse Electric, Hershey Chocolate, Allied Chemical, Commercial Investment Trust, Greene Cananea, Radio, Grigsby Grunow, Pullman, and Youngstown Sheet and Tube lost from about 3 to 6 points. Coppers, motors, and rails were under moderate pressure, Anaconda, General Motors, New York Central and Pennsylvania closing from nearly 2 to about 3 points lower.

Commodities generally moved in narrow ranges. Cotton futures closed practically unchanged, and wheat and corn from 1-2 to one cent higher on bullish crop and weather reports.

A meeting of the federal reserve advisory council in Washington caused some nervousness, but the board adjourned without making any statement. Although some improvement in credit is hoped for after completion of the mid-month shifting of balances, increasing commercial requirements and settlement for large issues of investment trust stocks are expected to have a firming influence. Also, formation of several more large holding companies is expected to be announced shortly, involving more new financing.

Foreign exchanges held barely steady. Sterling ruled unchanged at $4.84 11-16, and it was reported that about $3,500,000 in gold had been taken in London for shipment to New York. The Canadian dollar sagged to a discount of 3-4 of a cent.

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 17—John Migo, 23, employed as an iron worker at the New London Ship & Engine company and residing at 17 New street, and Pearl Carrier, 17, of Norwich, were arrested this evening by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh and State Police Officer Peter Busch, the man as a witness and the girl for lascivious carriage. Migo obtained a surety on his bond of $250 and was released. The girl was unable to procure a bondsman and was held for trial in the police court tomorrow. The arrest of Migo and the girl was the result of revelations made in the police court this forenoon, together with a complaint being made last night to the police.

Several days ago the father of a Massachusetts girl, the latter being but 14, requested the police to apprehend his daughter, who had left Norwich, where she had been visiting the Carrier girl. It was understood that both girls had arrived in New London. The police did not locate the girl, but last night State Police Officer Busch found both the girl and a companion, Frank Antoniac, 25, a laborer residing in Jordan Village, Waterford. The couple had been residing in a Truman street house about three weeks as man and wife. Both were arrested, the man being charged with rape. In court today the girl testified in detail as to her relations with Antoniac after leaving Norwich with the Carrier girl. Antoniac was held in bail of $5,000 and as he did not procure a surety, he was committed to jail to await trial in the police court.

At the adjournment of court, statements made by the girl and Antoniac resulted in it being revealed that the Carrier girl and Migo had also occupied rooms in the Truman street houses on numerous nights. The officers then set out to apprehend Migo and his companion. Not until this evening were they rewarded with a semblance of success. Migo was finally found and upon being questioned, he declared that he did not know the whereabouts of the Carrier girl, but that he had an appointment with her at 5 o'clock. The officers ordered Migo to go to the meeting place and they followed. Within a short time the girl joined Migo and then the pair was arrested. Migo and the girl were taken to police headquarters where they made statements as to their conduct since coming to New London.

The arrest of the two young men and girls, also ensnared the owners of the houses where the couples were provided with sleeping accommodations, for the officers arrested Mrs. Margaret Piscatella, 39 1-2 Truman street and Nicola Capozza, 29 Truman street, both charged with conducting houses for purposes of prostitution. They were released upon furnishing a surety on their respective bonds of $250 and will be in the police court tomorrow.

Clarence Oliveri, 353 Williams street, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman George Perkins charged with failing to stop at an automatic traffic signal, corner of Truman and Colt streets.

Lathrop, Inc.

Henry S. O'Brien, son of Mrs. Margaret O'Brien, New Haven and Miss Veronica M. Casey, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Casey, 5 Grand street, were married at 8 o'clock this morning at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church. The marriage was solemnized by Rev. Timothy M. Crowley in the presence of many relatives and friends. John O'Brien, brother of the groom, was best man and Miss Ellen Toohey attended the bride. Miss Julia Murpoy sang "Ave Maria." After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, which was attended by members of the two families. Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien are in New York and upon their return will reside on Federal street. Mr. O'Brien is employed by the Southern New England Telephone company and Mrs. O'Brien is a graduate of the class of 1929 of the Joseph Lawrence Training School for Nurses.

It was ascertained by Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray that the colliding auto is registered in the name of Buster Watson, 207 Main street, but when the complaint was further investigated, it developed that the auto was in charge of John Brown, 23 Hill street, last night. Brown was sought, found and arrested. He will be in court tomorrow.

The case is returnable before the next term of the court of common pleas. Another lien was levied on property of the defendants several weeks ago for other labor and material furnished.

QUARRELSOME HUSBAND ARRESTED TWICE IN A DAY

Andrew Wiles, 45 Broad street, Groton, a member of the United States Coast Guard, was arrested twice within 24 hours yesterday. He will be tried in Groton town court next Monday on the double charge of destroying private property and breach of the peace. Wiles went to his home Monday forenoon, was ugly, and quarreled with his wife. When he lost control of his temper the husband started to wreck the house and he partially succeded, for he smashed much of the furniture. Mrs. Wiles made complaint to the state police and her husband was arrested by Officer John Smith. After Wiles was released he remained away from home several hours, but last night he went back and resumed the quarrel. Wiles' conduct became so boisterous that another complaint was made to the authorities, this time to the Groton police, with the result that the sailor was arrested by Captain Andrew McCarthy.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Theatre

You may declare
Life is unfair,
Keeping your share
Of happiness—
You are to blame.
They called your name—
You did not claim,
Your happiness!

Thus sings Al Jolson in "Why Can't You," one of the most heart-breaking of the many lovely lyrics sung by the great Jolson in "Say It With Songs," the all-talking, all-singing, all-glorious Vitaphone feature which opens at the Palace here Saturday of this week. If you have never heard Jolson sing, come and hear that glorious voice. If you know him only by his voice over the radio or from victrola records, come and see him act in this matchless drama of human emotions.

Cast with little Davey Lee, the child wonder of the films, Jolson gives a performance that has been hailed as greater than his work in "The Jazz Singer" and the "Singing Fool," the two pictures which originally brought him fame in the screen world, and which have played in all the great cities of America, Europe and other parts of the world.

As an ex-pugilist, song-writer and radio announcer, Jolson portrays the part of Joe Lane, a man who goes to jail for accidentally killing the man who insulted his wife. The wife, left alone, has almost decided to drop her husband and take another old sweetheart, when all of a sudden she hears the man's voice over the radio, singing from prison on Christmas eve.

From that point on the action is swift and pathetic, Lane leaves jail but finds only sorrow and anguish, until, by great fortune and a happy turn of affairs, life once more becomes a thing worth living.

Broadway Theatre

Refuting the opinion of many modernists that "the young man has no chance today," the following story has been prepared, introducing to the people of Norwich and vicinity, Mr. Philip Smith, owner of the Broadway theatre. Mr. Smith's rise in the theatrical world has been so consistent and so speedy that the old-timers of the profession are asking one another "What is this chap going to do next?"

Well may they ask, for this unassuming young man, who is just past his thirty first birthday is rapidly becoming one of the most important factors in the theatrical situation in New England. Young, unhampered by the traditional system of handling pictures and people, he has developed a business method that is making his fast growing circuit of theatres one of the strongest in this section of the country.

"Smiling Phil", as he is known to his host of personal friends and movie men, was born in Syracuse where he was graduated from high when 15 years old. Later he attended Drake university in New Jersey as a special student. While at college he majored in drama courses and without a doubt these studies were responsible for his later interest in the theatre.

After leaving college he went to work in the statistical department of the Pathe company. It was only a short while afterwards that he devised a system of accounting that completely revolutionized the comptroller's department. He was then sent on the road to sell pictures.

Those were the days to sell pictures. The salesman had no idea of what the pictures were about except the impression which he had gotten from the lithographs sent out by the home office. He would walk into a manager's office and show them one sheet and then read off the printed adjectives to him. Every serial was the "greatest, grandest, glorious, glittering galaxy of stars ever gathered before one camera for the eye to feast upon!" Oh, those were the days—the more sheets you had the more pictures you sold.

After five months of trying to convince the theatre managers of the stockyard region of Kansas City that the cowboys in the "westerns" were just like those that patronized their houses, Mr. Smith was made northwestern sales manager with headquarters at Seattle, Washington. He was 17 years old at the time and the district under his control covered Washington, Idaho, Montana and Oregon. When the war broke out, he was making a great success of his selling campaign.

If you ask this modest man about his enlistment, he tells you all about it in a few sentences. He tells of the days at Mineola field, the drone of the planes, the roar of motors being warmed up, the smell of gas, the desire to fly "solo", sudden crashes, injured buddies, the loss of interest in the silent drama because of the overpowering grip of the greatest drama known to man—War.

Then came peace and the roar of the Liberties was forgotten in the purr of the projection machine. Then came more work for Pathe in New York state. While in charge of sales there, he realized that the successful future in the picture game lay in theatre management, so on June 1, 1919 he bought a house in Syracuse. His success was rapid and his method of conducting the Crescent theatre won him recognition.

This theatre was the first one operated in what is now termed the "de luxe" manner. Every feature was preceded by a prologue and stage presentation. It was in this house that the Syracuse Symphony orchestra had its start and from the pit of Mr. Smith's theatre has emerged one of the finest civic musical bodies the country has known.

The theatre field of Boston was invaded by this gladiator of the theatrical arena when he did one of the most daring things in the history of the Hub. After the B. F. Keith interest had failed to make a success of the National theatre, he took it over and made the so-called lemon a veritable gold mine. The wise ones gasped with astonishment at the business acumen displayed by this newcomer into the ranks of theatre managers and he was marked as a man to be watched.

From this time on his success was remarkable and in a short while he began to acquire more houses. At present there is the Broadway in Norwich, the Riverside in Medford, Mass., the Greenwich in East Greenwich, R. I., the Royal in Providence, R. I., both the Broadway and Strand theatres in South Boston are under his management, the Harvard in Syracuse, as well as the little Stuart in Boston proper, which is incidentiy being wired for sound. He is moving fast and by the looks of things has just started and will, rumor has it soon add several new links to his chain.

Mr. Smith's latest achievement, one wholly for the benefit of the Norwich theatre-going public, is the signing of contracts for the entire "New Show World" film product, which assures Broadway patrons of the best in talking-picture entertainment for the 1929-30 season. Regardless of price and film exchange restrictions the entire "New Show World" program, together with the best of the so-called "special" features from the largest film studios will be exhibited at the Broadway, over the true and tried Western Electric sound projection apparatus.

Breed Theatre

Several new and alluring dance steps were created for the chorus scene in "The Broadway Melody," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's all-talking, all-singing, all-dancing production playing all this week at the Breed theatre. The dancers rehearsed the steps several weeks before they were finally filmed under the direction of Harry Beaumont with the assistance of George Cunningham, youthful stage director responsible for the chorus in "Hit the Deck," "No, No, Nanette," "Good News," "Music Box Revue" and other successful shows.

The "Tampa Step," one of the most unique numbers seen in the colorful revue, is a rare combination of the apache and tap portrayed in "off beat" rhythm, for which its creator, Mr. Cunningham, is famous. The "Wedding of the Painted Dolls," an exceptionally gay and colorful sequence which is filmed in Technicolor, introduces many new and unusual dance steps, by a chorus composed of more than sixty specially trained girls.

Humor and pathos mingle with the brilliant scenes of night life along New York's "Gay White Way," and there is a romance that tugs at the heart.

Two houses, practically identical in size, design and construction...on the same side of the same street...same exposures all around.

Yet, the owner of one house burns 20% more coal each winter than does the owner of the other...without having his rooms any warmer.

Why?

Well, the eight-ton man buys Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite. He gets a coal of unusually high heat value, and a coal that holds fire particularly well.

He doesn't have to keep his drafts open very long at a time, for his coal is remarkably responsive and it quickly brings the thermometer up to the desired point...with a minimum of coal.

Furthermore, during mild spells he can shut off his drafts for a considerable period without fear of his fire going out...which, of course, is another way of saving coal.

Old Company's Lehigh Anthracite is a surpassingly dense, long-burning coal, carefully prepared and inspected for purity and uniformity. Order it by its full name.

STATES PRISON SENTENCES GIVEN IN CRIMINAL SUPERIOR COURT

All the business for the September term of the criminal superior court, except one trial which is to be held next Thursday afternoon, was disposed of here Tuesday on the opening day of the term.

State prison sentences were imposed by Judge Earnest C. Simpson in two cases, there were several jail sentences and one man was sent to the reformatory where the minimum sentence is 18 months. Prayer was offered at the opening of the court session by Rev. Theodore M. Shipherd of Park Congregational church, following which State Attorney Arthur M. Brown called on the accused to plea to the charges which were read to the court by Court Clerk John H. Walker. A number of the accused had defense made for them by Public Defender Charles L. Stewart and others were represented by their own attorneys.

Charles Lackey, alias Leahy, 28, accused of intent to burglarize the store of Jacob Lazarow, 69 Blackhall street, New London, on the night of May 16, 1929, pleading guilty was sentenced to six months in jail without costs. State Attorney Brown explained that Lackey, who had been drinking with a companion, broke into the store to get cigarettes, and took from it the cigarettes, two dozen eggs, a pie and the cash register. He took his plunder out into the yard but did not remove the money from the cash register.

State Prison For Arson

Steve Stankewicz, 58, of Preston, pleaded guilty to arson on June 29, 1929, for setting fire to the house owned by his divorced wife, Sophie Stankewicz, and also firing the barn where a heifer and calf were burned. The house was saved.

The state attorney said that Stankewicz was a drinking man and had been a troublesome character for years. Last spring, his wife got a divorce from him on the grounds of cruelty and was awarded custody of the children and $1,500 alimony. The couple owned the property jointly and since Stankewicz has been in jail he has signed over his share to his wife and also signed the insurance to her.

Public defender asked for leniency for Stankewicz, saying that there was much doubt whether he was not a border line case in mentality, and the man had tried to commit suicide in jail.

Judge Simpson made the sentence one to five years in state prison, concurrently, on two counts.

Albert Richards, of 138 Squire street, New London, a carpenter, was fined $25 and costs on recommendation of State Attorney Brown. The man was bound over on an indecent assault charge on Aug. 9, but Mr. Brown said it was a breach of the peace case and there had been no assault. Attorney Gruskin appeared for Richards.

Drove Auto Under Influence

Joseph F. Coyne, 26, of New Haven, charged on two counts with operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor at Niantic on July 27, and without consent of the owner, was sent to jail by Judge Simpson for one year on each count, sentences running concurrently.

Coyne took the car while he was attached to the militia at Niantic. State Attorney Brown said the man ought to go to jail as there were convictions against him in Seymour in 1924 and in New Haven in June of this year for driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. In the case before the court Coyne was caught by the state police after a chase of about ten miles at 55 to 65 an hour.

Trapper Took Chickens

John Kramer, 45, of Colchester, charged with stealing 30 chickens from John Littlefield at East Lyme on June 30, was sent to jail for three months after Attorney Thomas M. Shields had made a long plea for him. Kramer has been in the New London jail since he was arrested.

Attorney Shields said he knew Kramer well and had known his father before him, now a man over 80 years old but working every day. The accused had been a trapper and hunter the greater part of his life and had a reputation in that line, having acted as guide and instructor to many men well known in Hartford and other cities. He is not of criminal tendencies, the lawyer said, as he asked for a light sentence for Kramer.

To Jail For Forgery

George Gorham, 29, of this city, changed on two counts with forgery, was sent to jail for six months on each count. He has been in jail since he was arrested in June. The forged checks which got him into trouble, one on June 6 and the other on June 29, were one for $22.50 on the Uncas-Merchants National bank on which he had forged the name of Charles Saxton, and the other for $22.31 on the Bankers Trust company on which he had forged the name of Harry Koski.

William Thomas, 29, and Mrs. Elsie Bonville, 29, both of Montville, pleaded guilty to adultery on July 23 and were each sentenced to six months in jail, suspended under probation. Both the accused are married. The state attorney told the court that the woman has been forgiven by her husband and is now back at home with her children.

Weeping Women Before Court

Mrs. Nettie Phillips of New London, with her daughters Alice and Florence, wept copiously as they stood before the court and pleaded guilty to concealing the birth of an illegitimate child of which Alice Phillips was the mother. The child was born July 15 and died the same day. They were each given a suspended sentence of one year in jail, under probation, and ordered to pay the costs. Attorney Hollandersky appeared for them and the case was explained in chambers to Judge Simpson so that no statement was made in court. The woman had been bound over on a manslaughter charge.

The case of Sherwood Gorton of Old Lyme, accused of seduction, was continued to January under the same bond, as State Attorney Brown said there was a suit in the civil court on a bastardy charge and he wanted to await the outcome of that suit before proceeding with the criminal case.

A nolle was recommended by the state attorney and was granted by Judge Simpson in the case of Daniel F. Flynn of this city, accused of indecent assault. Attorney John T. Barry represented the accused.

Salamacha Trial Goes Over

In the case of Paul Salamacha, accused of arson at Union hall on North Main street on June 20, State Attorney Brown said he expected to try this case, but there had been a change of counsel within a few days and for that reason he recommended that the case go over to the January term. The continuance was granted under the same bond of $2,000.

Will Be Tried Thursday

Charles Gabrielle, 19 of Westerly was put to plea on the charge of attempt to commit statutory burglary at Ralph W. Lawton's in Stonington on Aug. 13. He pleaded not guilty and elected to be tried by the court. The time for trial was set for next Thursday afternoon.

Joined with Gabrielle in the offense is Charles Yeconette, 14, also of Westerly, who has turned states evidence, according to what Attorney Brown told the court. He was not out to plea at this time. The younger man is represented by Attorney Gallagher.

Colchester Burglary Cases

Joseph Marinello, 25, and Angelo Sica, 22, two men from Newark, N. J., pleaded guilty to three counts of statutory burglary at Colchester on the night of June 16 being members of a gang of five who came by automobile to Colchester and left by the same way after taking automobiles from the garages of Arthur H. Chapman and Hyman and Joseph London and stealing about 800 dresses and 3,000 yards of cloth from the factory of Ike and Max Cohen. Both men are married.

State's Attorney Brown told the court that this "job" was planned by Sam Bessinger, well known to the Newark police as Sam the Jew. Two others with him were Louis Russell and Ralph Monaco. It is hoped these three will be arrested as the police are on their trail. Marinello and Sica, Mr. Brown said, were invited along, one of them to drive the party, and apparently did not know what was going to be done. Sica was brought back from California, where his wife lives, but Marinello was caught in Darien in an automobile and the goods were recovered. Both men have been of much assistance by being willing to tell what they knew. If it had not been for this Mr. Brown said he should probably have had six or seven counts against these two men, but he thought they ought to go to states prison for from one to four years.

Attorney Prince spoke for leniency for Marinello and Attorney Stewart argued to have Sica sent to the reformatory instead of to state's prison. He read a number of letters from people in Newark, speaking of the good character of the Sica family.

Judge Simpson sent Marinello to state's prison for from one to four years and committed Sica to the reformatory, where he will be confined for 18 months at least.

Upon recommendation by the state's attorney, Judge Simpson directed nolles in the cases of Harry Prefes and Stanley Sanford Peters, both of Stonington, who had been charged with arson last April at a wooden building where Charles Mousie had a restaurant.

The case of James H. Shaughnessey of Pomfret, accused of embezzlement in connection with the Plant poultry yards at Eastern Point was continued to January pending the outcome of a civil case.

While in Portland, Mr. Whiteman and comrades were located on Baggett street and remained in Portland throughout the convention. Of special interest to the veterans were the 365 islands of various sizes in Portland harbor, where they enjoyed a sail. A visit of historical interest was the pilgrimage to Longfellow's home, for an inspection of the house and grounds, the interior having the appearance as though the poet still occupied the mansion. The veterans were royally entertained in many places during their sight-seeing expedition, also were special guests at suppers, for automobile rides, etc. Every one was most courteous in attentions and the visiting veterans were often invited into the various homes, though strangers to the hosts. The big banquets were held in the Chapman building, in front of which stands the Soldiers' monument. At one event Mr. Whiteman was a guest as "Daddy" to one of the Norwich delegates from Sedgwick Relief corps. Past Commander George C. Crocker, and John Curran were the other two delegates accompanying Mr. Whiteman.

Single prescription made a family doctor famous

SELDOM has any single act been of greater benefit to mankind than the one which Dr. Caldwell performed back in 1885 when he wrote the prescription which has carried his fame to the four corners of the earth.

Over and over, Dr. Caldwell wrote this prescription as he found men, women, and children suffering from those common symptoms of constipation, such as coated tongue, bad breath, headaches, gas, nausea, biliousness, poor appetite, or lack of energy, etc. And it invariably relieved these symptoms so much more pleasantly, so much quicker than other things, that his patients simply had to tell other people about it.

The demand for this prescription grew so fast that by 1888 Dr. Caldwell was forced to have it put up ready for use and supply drug stores with it. Today you can get the generous bottles of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, as it is called, at all drug stores.

When you or your children suffer from any of the symptoms of constipation, it will pay you to remember this safe, pleasant-tasting, effective laxative; made only from herbs and other pure ingredients; a real corrective for constipation. A doctor's 47-year experience behind this formula!

BETTY BRONSON, Warner Brothers' star, in the luxurious marble bathroom built in Hollywood just for her charming youthfulness. She uses Lux Toilet Soap not only in her bathroom, but in her dressing room on location—wherever her pictures are being made.

The next time you see her in a close-up, notice how smooth this daintily fragrant white soap keeps her skin.

She says about Lux Toilet Soap: "A star must have smooth skin for the close-up. I find this lovely soap is wonderful for my skin."

"A smooth skin is a star's most prized possession," says JOSEPHINE DUNN, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer star. "Lux Toilet Soap keeps my skin perfectly smooth."

"SMOOTH SKIN is a perpetual attraction," says Allan Dwan, famous director—and sums up what 39 foremost Hollywood directors have learned from the movies.

"The kind of rose-petal skin which can pass the test of the close-up is the kind of beauty that gets the American public every time," he goes on to say.

It is for this reason that 9 out of 10 screen stars use Lux Toilet Soap. They have found that it keeps their skin satiny and soft—always. And all the great film studios have made this white fragrant soap the official soap in their dressing rooms.

Luxury such as you have found only in French soaps at 50¢ and $1.00 the cake . . . now 10¢

JOBYNA RALSTON, beautiful screen star, says: "A screen star must have utterly smooth skin for the camera. I find that Lux Toilet Soap keeps my skin beautifully smooth and soft."

COMMITTEE VOTES TO OPEN TAX RETURNS TO PUBLIC

On Motion of Chairman Smoot the Senate Finance Committee Voted 10 to 1—Action Was Taken at Request of Committee Democrats—The Names Are to Be Used in Consideration of Tariff Increases—The List Includes the Names of About 325 Corporations, Firms and Individuals—U. S. Steel and Bethlehem Steel Among the Number.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—(AP)—By a vote of ten to four, the senate finance committee on motion of Chairman Smoot today made public the names of approximately 325 corporations, firms, individuals whose tax returns were requested of the treasury by the committee democrats for use in considering the need of tariff increases.

At the same time a move was begun in the senate itself to expand the program of collecting trade data for the tariff contest. This was started by Senator McMaster, republican, South Dakota, who sought action on his proposal to direct the finance committee to obtain from the tariff commission full information, confidential or otherwise, pertaining to contents of the bill.

A long debate developed a half a dozen changes in the resolution designed to except data that might be unlawful for the commission to divulge. As a result McMaster asked that the resolution go over until tomorrow so he could reframe it in an effort to meet the objections.

In the list of corporations placed in the congressional record and made public by Smoot were almost al the big manufacturing concerns of the nation, including the United States Steel corporation, Bethlehem Steel corporation, Aluminum Company of America, General Electric and Westinghouse Electric companies, General Dyestuffs corporation, and the Chicago Packers.

Numerous sugar companies, including the Great Western of Denver, whose earnings figured prominently in the sugar tariff hearings; chemical concerns, textile mills, and other manufacturing corporations were embraced in the list, as well as many fruit companies of Hawaii.

Smoot said the majority members of the committee soon would submit a list of their own to the treasury, while additional returns are to be requested by the minority.

Explaining his motion for publication of the names, Smoot said he had made it because of the fact that the minority submitted them and because he had received many letters inquiring whether such and such a name appeared in the request.

Two democrats, Barkley of Kentucky, and King of Utah, and two republicans, Edge of New Jersey, and Shortridge of California, voted against making the names public.

Returning to consideration of committee amendments, the senate rejected one to restrict the secretary of agriture in his administration of the plant quarantine act.

It would have provided that the quarantine act was not to be interpreted as barring importation of nursery stock, fruits, vegetables, bulbs and other plants and plant products, unless such articles were known to be affected by disease or infested with pests, new to, or not at the time of importation widely prevalent in, the United States.

ASKED POLICE TO RECOVER "CELLAR FULL OF BOOZE"

HACKENSACK, N. J., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Many requests for aid have been made of the Bergen county prosecutor's office but none more novel than that of a woman who asked that "a cellar full of booze" supposedly in Boston, be recovered for her.

The woman entered the office yesterday and presented a business card bearing the name of Mme Sophie Cuns Buchelster Wilson von Schilling, violinist. She said she lived in Brooklyn, and was a sister of Charles Cuns, who before his death in March 1926, lived in Fort Lee.

After her brother's death, she explained, a sister, Mrs. Kirby had the liquor removed to her residence in Fort Lee. She died two months later.

Another sister, a Mrs. Beltzung, of Boston, then claimed the bottled estate and had it taken to that city. Now Mrs. Beltzung has died, and Mrs. von Schilling felt she was residuary legatee of whatever may be left of the "cellar" and would like to gain possession of it. Mrs. Beltzung's nearest of kin will not permit her to come into her inheritance, Mrs. von Schilling said, so she demanded that the prosecutor's office obtain it for her.

"Sorry, but we can't help you," County Detective John E. Quidetti told her. "If we tried to get that liquor back we would be arrested ourselves."

"And you call that justice," Mrs. von Schilling remarked as she walked away.

FOREST FIRES IN THE NORTHWEST SUBSIDING

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Except for a few scattered minor blazes, the Pacific northwest's fight against major forest fires which have made a dozen families homeless, caused an estimated damage of $1,000,000 and laid bare more than 75,000 timbered acres, passed into history today although hundreds of weary men maintained an alert vigil. Observers at Stevenson, Wash., where fire fighting centered yesterday, expressed confidence today that the town was safe.

Before the Stevenson fire was controlled it destroyed the hotel and general office building of the Columbia River Timber company at Greenleaf, trestles and tracks of the timber company, the mill of the Mid-Columbus Lumber company near Carson and cut logs valued at $10,000.

Heavy dew in the Yacolt, Wash., district, where fire yesterday encircled the town, aided in controlling the blaze. However, a train was held in readiness to race 250 residents to safety if necessary. Community life there settled back into routine but guards remained on fire lines.

TWO NIECES UNWITTINGLY AIDED BANKER WAGGONER

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Margaret and Amelia Jones, youthful nieces of Charles D. Waggoner, indicted president of the Bank of Telluride, Colo., tearfully told federal investigators here today, how they unwittingly aided their uncle in defrauding six New York banks of $500,000.

Grieved because their testimony was damaging to their uncle, who cared for them when they were children, the two sisters said they "thought nothing of it" when Waggoner asked them to send the half dozen fake coded telegrams that postal inspectors allege enabled the Colorado banker to obtain the half million dollars credit.

The messages were sealed in envelopes, and were delivered to the telegraph offices, sealed, they said and they were unaware of the nature of their contents. "We thought we were doing him a mere favor," Margaret Jones said.

WHOLESALE GROCERS TO COMBAT CHAINS BY PACKERS

RUM RUNNER AND HIS COMPANION KILLED

DEARING, Ga., Sept. 18—(AP)—A rum runner's truck became a death trap for the driver and his companion here early today as the machine loaded with 700 gallons of liquor smashed into a concrete crossroads marker and caught fire from the gasoline tank, which exploded.

A man identified by officers as Roy Groman, of Dawsonville, Ga., and his companion whose given name authorities said they learned was "Fred" were pinned in the wreckage between the motor which jammed back into the driving cab and the one gallon cans of liquor which surged forward from the impact of the crash.

The liquor, consisting of 701 one-gallon tins, was confiscated and destroyed by Sheriff Lynn Norris of McDuffie county.

GAMBLING PRECEDED FATAL PARACHUTE LEAP

WICHITA, Kas., Sept. 18—(AP)—Testimony that drinking and gambling at a roadhouse preceded the fatal parachute leap of Helen Williams, 19, last week-end was given at a coroner's inquest today.

The testimony followed revelation today that J. J. Wilson, aeronautics securities salesman who accompanied Miss Williams to the roadhouse late Friday night, could not be found by deputy sheriffs seeking to serve a subpoena.

The craft was piloted by Miss Elinor Smith of New York, holder of the women's solo flight record. Testimony today established that Miss Smith was not at the roadhouse. She told investigators that she did not attend the "party."

LINDBERGHS ARE ON THEIR WAY TO MIAMI

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh were on their way to Miami, Florida, tonight after a short stay in the capital.

A change in schedule for their southern flight eliminating a tour of South America was revealed, but the first destination of their cabin ship was unannounced. Lindbergh said he had no intention of reaching Miami tonight, saying it was "too far" and that his plans did not necessitate his reaching the Florida city before tomorrow night.

The Lindberghs now plan only to touch the South American continent following their inauguration of a passenger line service to cities on the Caribbean sea and Gulf of Mexico. "Lack of time," was the reason given by officials of the Pan-American Airways for the change.

Radio Address By President Hoover

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18.—(AP)—The present naval disarmament negotiations were described by President Hoover in a radio address tonight as "proposals which would preserve our national defenses and yet would relieve the backs of those who toil from gigantic expenditures and the world from the hate and fear which flows from the rivalry in building warships."

The chief executive's speech was delivered through the Columbia Broadcasting system in connection with the dedication of the New York studio of the broadcasting chain. It was the first time that Mr. Hoover has mentioned the subject of disarmament in a public address since the present conversations with Great Britain were begun.

The president said: "Of the untold values of the radio, one is the great intimacy it has brought among our people. Through its mysterious channels we come to wider acquaintance with surroundings and men.

"The microphone for these few moments has been brought to the president's study in the east wing of the white house.

"This room from which I speak was the scene of work and accomplishment of our presidents for over a century. Into this room first came John Adams, who had taken over the reins of administration of the newly established republic from George Washington. Each president in the long procession of years down to Roosevelt worked at this fireside. In the refurnishing of the white house by Mr. Roosevelt, the president's study was removed to another room which was used by our presidents from Mr. Taft to Mr. Coolidge, but recent extensions to the white house made it possible for me to restore the president's study to this room, where still lingers the invisible presence of so many of our great men.

"It is here where the Adamses, father and son, Jefferson, Monroe, Jackson, Grant, McKinley, Roosevelt and a score of other devoted men worked. Here worked Lincoln. In this room he signed the emancipation of the Negro race from slavery. It is a room crowded with memories of the courage and the high aspirations and the high accomplishment of the American presidents. It is a room in which have been marked many of our national triumphs.

"The problems of our country today crowd for entry here as they have each day for more than a 130 years past. One problem has been ever constant, with each succeeding president—that we should maintain and strengthen the will of the nation and other nations for peace. In this room have been taken those reluctant steps which have led our nation to war and those willing steps which have again led to peace. Never has there been a president who did not pray that his administration might be one of peace, and that peace should be more assured for his successor. Yet these men have never hesitated when war became the duty of the nation and always in these years the thought of our presidents has been adequate preparedness for defense as one of the assurances of peace but that preparedness must not exceed the barest necessity for defense or it becomes a threat of aggression against others and thus a cause of fear and animosity of the world. Never have we had a president who was either a pacificist or a militarist.

"And there are other assurances of peace which have been devised in this room, advanced and supported by our presidents over the past half century. Great aid has been given by them to the advance of conciliation, arbitration and judicial determination for settlement of international disputes. These are the steps which prevent war. Lately we and other nations have pledged ourselves never to use war as an instrument of national policy. And there is another such step which follows with impelling logic fro mthose advances, that is the reduction of arms.

"Some months ago I proposed to the world that we should further reduce and limit naval arms. Today we are engaged in a most hopeful discussion with other governments leading to this end, these are proposals which would preserve our national defenses and yet would relieve the backs of those who toil from gigantic expenditures and the world from the hate and fear which flows from the rivalry in building warships and daily in this room do I receive evidence of almost universal prayer that this negotiation shall succeed. For confidence that there will be peace is the first necessity of human progress."

Another Outrage By Anti-Communists

Organizer For National Textile Workers' Union Taken From His Home and Beaten

KINGS MOUNTAIN, N. C., Sept. 18—(AP)—Cleo Tesneair of Baltimore, Md., organizer for the National Textile Workers' union, was taken from his home here early today over the protests of his wife and 10 year old son by three men, who carried him into nearby South Carolina and severely beat him.

Coincident with the kidnaping and flogging a wooden stand from which Tesneair and other unionists spoke last on September 7, was wrecked by a dynamite explosion.

Tesneair fled into a wooded section, he said, after being freed by his captors, who fired a shot at him as he retreated. He said he went to a farmer's home, obtained some clothes to supplement the sleeping garments which he was wearing when kidnaped, reported the incident to Sheriff J. F. Wright, at Gaffney, S. C., and proceeded aboard a passing truck to International Labor Defense headquarters at Charlotte, N. C. In Charlotte he detailed his experience to newspapermen.

Sheriff I. M. Irvin of Cleveland county, North Carolina, heard the story of Tesneair's wife here and immediately began an investigation.

Questioning neighbors the sheriff learned that one of them had seen Tesneair taken from his home at about 1 a. m. by three men who were riding in an automobile. They said they were unable to identify his kidnapers.

Those living near the place where the speaking stand was destroyed fixed the time of dynamite explosion at 1:30 a. m. They said the detonation was audible for nearly a mile and that merchandise in an adjoining store was damaged.

PEACOX MURDER TRIAL ADJOURNED TILL FRIDAY

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 18 (AP)—The Peacox murder trial was adjourned late today until Friday morning.

He said that when he questioned Peacox after the death of Dorothy Peacox, for which her husband is on trial, the prisoner confessed and said he tied a string around his wife's throat after felling her, because "I wanted to make sure she was dead."

Two doctors expressed the opinion on the stand today that Mrs. Peacox died by strangulation at the hands of her assailant.

5 CANDIDATES TO CONTEST FOR NEW YORK MAYORALTY

Mayor Walker, Democrat; Congressman LaGuardia, Republican; Norman Thomas, Socialist; Richard Enright, Independent, and a Candidate to Be Selected by Dry Supporters of William M. Bennett—Harvey Renominated For President of Queens Borough by More Than Five to One—Two Negroes Were Nominated by Republicans in Harlem Districts.

NEW YORK, Sept. 18—(AP)—The position as mayor of New York, a four year job at an annual salary of $25,000, is sought by four candidates and a fifth is to be entered.

The ballot at the November election, as arranged after a city primary yesterday will carry the names of Mayor James J. Walker, democrat; Representative Fidrello H. LaGuardia, republican; Norman Thomas, socialist; Richard, Enright, former police commissioner and an independent, and a candidate to be selected by the dry supporters of William M. Bennett, whom LaGuardian defeated almost four to one in the primary.

As the final returns that gave LaGuardia 62,727 votes to Bennett's 17,442 were tabulated, the republican faction that opposed the representative announced "there will be a straight republican named to run independently." LaGuardia has been elected to public office as a democrat, a socialist and a republican.

With the primary past the mayoralty contest again assumed first place in the minds of the voters after sharing interest with a bitter neighborhood fight in Queens borough. Here George U. Harvey, borough president, obtained a better than five to one victory for nomination over Senator John L. Karle, candidate of Joseph H. De Bragga, republican county leader for 20 years.

In a three-cornered fight Edward W. Cox, county clerk and regular democratic organization candidate was nominated to oppose the borough president.

Two Negroes became republican nominees in Harlem districts. Herbert T. Delany and Francis E. Rivers obtained nominations for the general assembly.

COMPLETE VICTORY IN PHILA. FOR REGULAR REPUBLICANS

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18—(AP)—The complete victory of the regular republican organization in yesterday's primary by which the republican voters upheld the leadership of Senator-elect William S. Vare, is expected to bring about readjustments within the local organization in preparation for the gubernatorial and local campaigns next year. That recognition will be given to thosew ho stood by Vare and did not join thosew ho left the organization reservation to link up with the independent movement, was indicated today by Chairman James M. Haziett, of the republican city committee. In commenting on the result the city chairman said "I want to emphasize that all of the ward leaders who supported the ticket recognized the leadership of William S. Vare and will acknowledge it in the future."

Complete but unofficial returns showed that William F. Campbell, regular candidate for register of wills, received a plurality of 150,687 over John F. Dugan, republican league candidate, backed by Mayor Harry A. Mackey who left the Vare camp to fight for Dugnan. The sharpest contest in the primary revolved about the register of wills nomination, as Campbell is one of the chief lieutenants of the regular organization.

DROPPED DEAD WHILE HE WAS PLAYING POLO

WESTBURY, N. Y., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Thomas L. Leboutillier, Jr., member of a prominent Long Island family, dropped dead this afternoon while playing polo in a tournament at the Meadowbrook club. He was in action with the Islip team in the Autumn 12 goal event.

Leboutillier was riding alone when he collapsed and tumbled from the saddle. Efforts to revive him failed, and he was pronounced dead by an examining doctor when taken from the field. He is a cousin of George Leboutillier, official of the Long Island and Pennsylvania railroad.

Playing on the Islip team with Leboutillier were Morgan Belmont, C. R. Leonard and P. S. P. Randolph. In the first chukker the team had just scored the goal which put it ahead of the Foxhunters at 3 to 1 and the players were riding back for the next throw-in when Leboutillier, who was at No. 1 slumped forward in his saddle and fell from his mount.

FRANCE UNEASY OVER NAVAL NEGOTIATIONS

PARIS, Sept. 18.—(AP)— French public opinion is beginning to show traces of uneasiness over the Anglo-American naval negotiations, fearing that they are intended to reach an Anglo-Saxon pact of much broader character than a mere agreement on disarmament.

This uneasiness is illustrated in an editorial of Le Temps this evening which is couched in rather forceful language, though the semi-official newspaper is noted for its careful and moderate utterances.

"The disarmament controversy is developing in confusion. The labor government intends giving an entirely different orientation to the general foreign policy of Great Britain.

"What exactly is 'the much broader agreement than a mere naval accord' of which the recent British note speaks? The entire negotiations have a rather singular aspect and demand most serious attention of those who do not wish to be caught by the trend of events."

ANXIETY INCREASING OVER ERUPTION OF MOUNT PELEE

KINGSTOWN, St. Vincent, British West Indies, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Great anxiety is felt on St. Vincent island over the increasing volcanic activity observed in Mount Pelee on the French island of Martinique since Monday.

The volcano Soufriere on the northern part of St. Vincent is quiescent but atmospheric conditions are identical with those observed in May 1902, when the Soufriere burst into eruption at the same time as Mount Pelee. The Martinique eruption was far more terrible than the St. Vincent one since it cost nearly 40,000 lives.

But the government is watching the Soufriere very closely because the volcano has a bad reputation. In 1903 several eruptions destroyed plantations and killed 2,000 persons.

Heat waves were observed today and a strong odor of sulphur accompanied them.

DEVICE FOR PLANES TO PICK UP MAIL FROM GROUND

KANSAS CITY, Sept. 18.—(AP)— A new device being perfected for picking up mail from the ground while an airplane is in flight soon is expected to be put into general use to speed up the air mail service, it was announced here today at the concluding session of the national air traffic conference.

The device was described as much less complicated than the original machines working on the catapult principle.

Experiments have proved, a committee of the Air Transport executives reported, that a mail sack can be picked up from a dead standstill and that a plane can stand the resulting shock of several thousand pounds without damage

FOUR BALLOONISTS WERE SAVED FROM DROWNING

TOLEDO, Ohio, Sept. 18—(AP)—Four prominent Detroit business men in a balloon were saved from drowning late today by the crew of C. O. Miniger's yacht, Helene, when they found the balloon drifting close to the water about 18 miles out in Lake Erie.

The rescued were: Dr. C. B. Legalle, vice president of the Detroit Balloon club and owner of the balloon in which he and his companions were traveling; George Ingram, president of the Ingram Steel company; E. K. Lee, of the Chrysler corporation and J. J. Habermas, of the Goodrich Tire & Rubber company.

Dr. Legalle, one of Detroit's veteran balloon enthusiasts and his companions left the Detroit Balloon club at noon today for a pleasure flight. Neither of the three other men ever had taken a balloon flight, he said.

The wind carried the balloon southward toward Monroe, Mich. After an hour the wind changed and carried the craft out over Lake Erie. Some distance from shore the passengers discovered that the balloon was sinking slowly.

Helplessly the balloon drifted farther out into the lake for nearly an hour, when the Helene appeared on the scene.

A cable was dropped from the balloon to the deck of the Helene and made fast. The Helene then headed for the Toledo Yacht club, towing the balloon and its occupants.

The cable was passed to spectators on the shore and the balloon was drawn safely to earth.

INCREASE IN EXPENSES OF GOVERNMENT BRANCHES

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—(AP)—Despite President Hoover's plea for strict government economy, expenses of the various government branches in the first two months of the 1930 fiscal year exceeded those for the same period last year by $21,095,000.

Figures made public by the treasury today showed that in July and August of the new year, the departments spent $369,412,454 as compared with $348,317,150 in the same time last year.

The total government expenditures which must be paid out of ordinary receipts, however, showed a decrease of $26,663,433 to $560,550,360. This was attributed to a reduction of $36,000,000 in sinking fund requirements. An additional $100,000,000 of bonds which were purchased for the sinking fund after September 1 offset the decrease, but will not show in the figures until the next statement is issued.

Four government branches spent less money in the first two months of the present year than last. Among those showing a decrease was the treasury department which expended $30,496,000, a drop of $2,000,000. The state department cut its expenditures for the two months by $179,000 to $3,711,080, the interior department by $3,000,000 to $51,526,000, and the department of labor by $300,000 to $1,323,000.

EIGHT!

Every month it becomes more obvious—motorists want the sweep of power, the smoothness, the thrilling acceleration—and the distinction—of the Eight. Admittedly, America's finest cars are Eights.

In eight key states new car registrations for the first six months of this year showed a 90 per cent increase in Eights above $1000—while Sixes above $1000 decreased 16 per cent.

Studebaker offers three great lines of Eights that hold more American stock car records for speed and stamina than all other makes combined, including the greatest record in transportation—30,000 miles in 26,326 consecutive minutes.

Eights of brilliant performance—economical as the thriftiest Sixes. So supremely ahead of the times that public response already has made Studebaker the largest maker of Eights in the world.

No extra gear shifting can give a six cylinder car the silken smoothness and flexibility of an Eight.

Why not get an Eight—a smart new Studebaker Eight? Enjoy it today and have a car that will be worth more a year from now—because Eights will then be at a premium in a used car market glutted with Sixes.

Studebaker's new low One-Profit prices have swept aside all barriers to Eight ownership. See the cars. Make comparisons. Convince yourself.

DANIELSON

WORK OF BUILDING SIDEWALKS TO START SOON

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 18—Borough officials may now proceed with the sidewalk building program, for last night's special borough meeting passed the formal vote that had been prepared dealing with the matter, and re-affirmed the action of a previous borough meeting in making an appropriation with which to start the project. This sum will be matched by abrupting property owners along the streets where the walks are to be built, they paying one-half the construction cost, the borough the other half. The effect of this is that $30,000 worth of sidewalks can be built. The start will be made at the earliest possible moment and a considerable amount of sidewalk put in before cold weather stops the work until spring. Likely the first of the work will be done along Mechanic street, which is to have a sidewalk its entire length, a distance of about a mile, from Academy street to North street, on the easterly side of the street.

FUNERAL

Mrs. Ida J. Arnold

This afternoon Mrs. Ida J. Scofield Arnold, widow of George Arnold, was buried at Evergreen cemetery at Central Village, following a committal service conducted by Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church of Danielson. Mrs. Arnold died at the Masonic home at Wallingford suddenly on Sunday, following a shock. She had been in her normal health right up to the time she was stricken. Only last Thursday Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. G. Bailey, local relatives, called upon her and found her cheerful and comfortable. Funeral services were held at Wallingford prior to the departure of the funeral cortege for Central Village.

Mrs. Arnold spent many years of her life in this section of the state, living for a number of years at North Sterling. She was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Uri B. Scofield, was born in New York state and was 76 years of age. Mr. Arnold died a number of years ago. She leaves two sisters, Mrs. Hattie Bailey of School street, Danielson, and Miss Nellie Scofield of Concord, N. H., and two brothers, Charles of Boston and William of Melrose, Mass.

There are signs to indicate that corn-borer inspectors will be on the job again in this territory when next year's corn crop begins to ripen. The borers are showing up in various places where they were not known to exist, and it is not going to be an easy task to exterminate in the area hereabouts, nor even to control their spread.

Following a rule enforced at other recent annual exhibitions only tuberculin tested cattle are to be accepted for exhibition and competition at the Brooklyn fair. There are many tuberculin tested cows in Windham county, and as was demonstrated last year enough of them were entered at the fair to make a fine and interesting showing.

The annual enumeration of what is termed children of school age—4 to 16 years—is again underway in Killingly. James R. Walsh is doing the work in Danielson, William S. Hunter will make the enumeration in Goodyear, F. L. Bennett in Attawaugan and Ballouville, Arthur Bruton in the Dayville and Killingly Center of the town and Alcott D. Sayles in the East Killingly section. The town will receive from the state $2.25, to be devoted to educational purposes, for each child enumerated.

LOCAL TRUST CO. LOSES TWO DIRECTORS BY DEATH

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 18—A strange coincidence is that the Danielson Trust company lost two of the members of its directorate by death within a few hours yesterday, Angus Park, wealthy woolen manufacturer of Hanover, this state, dying at Bethehem, N. H., after a long illness, and Dr W. W. Adams of Moosup passing away at the Jane Brown hospital in Providence after an illness of comparative briefness. Both had been identified with the Danielson Trust company, as directors, since its organization in 1914.

Both were well known in Danielson, though neither ever was resident here. Reference to Mr. Park and his local interests were made in this column this morning. Like Mr. Park, Dr. Adams had a great many professional, business and social ties with this community. Born in 1869, Dr. Adams was graduated from Bellevue Hospital Medical college in New York with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in 1891. Practically his entire period of professional life was spent in Moosup, though his patients were representative of a wide field. Dr. Adams was the medical examiner for the town of Plainfield, being appointed to that place originally by Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson soon after the doctor located in Moosup and having been reappointed by Mr. Bill from time to time, as a term expired.

Dr. Adams had not appeared to be well for several months past. Some time since he was stricken by an attack of appendicitis, and his condition became so serious that he was removed to the hospital in Providence. While a patient there his condition gradually became more grave, and as long ago as last Sunday there were indications that the end was near at hand.

State Officer John Murphy rounded up Burton Butts and Verney Snyder of Moosup this afternoon to answer in a justice's court in Brooklyn to certain violations of the law. It has to do with the pair driving about, a week or so ago, in a car, while one of them is alleged to have been intoxicated and one of them was armed with a gun—a revolver set in a holster attached to a belt strapped about his waist. Details of the episode were more or less incomplete tonight, but it appears that state officers have been trying to establish the identity of the occupants of the car in which Butts and Snyder are said to have been riding for more than a week.

If your auto is driven by a minor, between 16 and 18, you must file proof of responsibility at motor vehicle department. See Reeves Insurance, Danielson.—adv.

Arrangements are practically complete for the Brooklyn fair. The track will be in good condition for the races scheduled for the coming week.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Kimball of East Franklin street and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Moran were at Springfield yesterday to attend the Eastern States exposition.

J. Carl Witter has returned from attending the Eastern States exposition at Springfield, a Mecca for many from this section during the past few days.

Local physicians were formulating plans today for attendance at the funeral of Dr. W. W. Adams of Moosup, who died yesterday in Providence.

Heavy rain during last night brought further relief from the drought and replenished the water supply in many outlying sections of the town that are without the municipal water service.

A concrete dam well over 100 feet in length and that will cost several thousand dollars is being erected for Edmond Hills, wealthy Providence manufacturer, at his country place in the South Killingly section of the town. The dam will be the means of creating a private pond that Mr Hills will personally stock with trout.

PUTNAM

MAZZOLA MURDER TRIAL MAY BE HELD IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, September 18—That Putnam may be the scene of the trial of a murder case is being discussed at this time by state officials, preparing the case of the State vs. Thomas Mazzola, Willimantic man now being held on a charge of murder. Mazzola was arrested on this criminal charge only a few weeks before the murder of County Detective William E. Jackson of Willimantic and was out to plea, before Judge Jennings in superior court in Putnam on the day that Trenor A. Rice former deputy sheriff was indicted for the murder of the county detective. Since that date Mazzola has been held prisoner in the county jail at Brooklyn.

He will be given a hearing at the criminal session of superior court which opens in this city on next Tuesday, September 24, but whether or not court will adjourn to Willimantic to take up this case is not known. Samuel B. Harvey, a member of the defense counsel for Mazzola, was in this city today and when asked where he thought the hearing would take place said that he was uncertain since the leading witnesses reside in Willimantic and the session of court is slated to sit in Putnam.

A short calendar session of superior court will open at Putnam on Friday September 27.

The building committee of the town school committee is now making an estimate of the amount of money that would be involved to bring about the re-equipping of the gymnasium at the Putnam high school. Plans which are being considered call for the installation of portable bleachers to replace the present inadequate benches, installing athletic equipment such as triangular bars, Indian clubs and ring ropes to be used in the newly adopted physical education course. The gallery rail about the balcony is to be removed and an iron one to be erected in its place. Bleachers will be put in, which will increase the seating capacity. The work is to be started in the near future since it is the aim of the committee to complete the undertaking before the close of the basketball season.

Rev. George J. Donahue, pastor of the Holy Trinity church in Pomfret and of the Sacred Heart church in West Thompson, was the principal speaker at the first annual banquet of the Court St. Augustin, No. 1124, Catholic Daughters of America, which took place at the Bond hotel in Hartford last evening. Besides the Pomfret priest many others were present, including Frank K. Dully of Hartford.

Two automobile accidents occurred in the city this afternoon, were called to the attention of the police. John Wallace, an elderly resident of North School street, while crossing the highway at the intersection of North School and Mechanics street failed to hear the horn on the car of Rollin White, Jr., Cleveland, Ohio, and was struck. Wallace received injuries to his skull and was taken to the Day Kimball hospital for treatment. Police Sergeant George H. Llard checked up the mishap and made a test of the brakes on the Ford coupe owned by the Ohio driver, which he found to be in good condition. White told Sergt. Llard that he saw the man approach and he sounded his horn several times, but Wallace, he claimed, took no heed. White's car struck Wallace knocking him face down on the macadam. White was not held. At the hospital tonight Wallace's condition was not regarded as serious.

A combination tractor-truck in the service of the J. O. Fox Lumber company of Canal street, while parked on lower Main street this afternoon in some way got into motion and did not come to a stop until it had crashed into a sedan owned by Judge M. H. Geissler of city court. No damage was caused to the judge's automobile, but the driver, Julian Reel, was advised by Officer Benoi Durand of the local police to have the brakes on the tractor attended to in view of preventing such accidents in the future.

It was learned today that Henry A. Tallman, a pilot carrying mail between New York and Boston, who was killed yesterday in Meriden when his plane crashed is the flyer who was seen over this city daily with his government cargo of letters and packages. The death of "Hank" Tallman was mentioned in Associated Press dispatches appearing in the Bulletin Wednesday.

Announcements were received today of the wedding of Miss Vivenne Hatch of Boston to John Dyer Potter Jr., of this city, on Saturday August 31, 1929 at Boston, Mass.

Mrs. Andrew P. Donovan of Lyons street and Joseph Donovan were in Willimantic Tuesday where they visited with Mrs. Adelard Gravel, who was formerly Miss Arlene Donovan of this city.

According to many farmers in the rural districts, who are depending upon wells for their water supply, it is said that unless heavy and lengthy rains are received within the next two weeks a water shortage is likely to occurr this winter. The rural residents state that the ground which is still in a very dry condition must be well soaked before the arrival of frosts, since no water will penetrate the frost line after it is established. Light rains were experienced here yesterday and aided in the long process of softening the thick sun-baked crust on the earth, but was not sufficient.

Mayor Charles A. Richard returned today from Boston where he attended a banquet and dinner which was tendered in honor of United States Senator Felix Hebert of Rhode Island.

JEWETT CITY

CONTRACTORS TO DRILL IN MIDDLE OF THE RIVER

State Engineer John Smith of Norwich, with members of the highway commission was in town Wednesday on business connected with the Quinebaug viaduct contract. Wednesday afternoon drilling was completed at the water level on the Lisbon bank, where one of the big piers will stand.

The underlying ledge was found to be 8 feet lower than on the Griswold bank. It was decided Wednesday to locate the depth of the rock bottom in the middle of the river. The engine and drill gear will be drawn our 150 feet, where the drilling will be carried on from a river platform. A Rhode Island contractor was here Wednesday looking over the right-of-way, where the river construction will begin.

Heavy Rainfall

Close to an inch of rain fell Tuesday evening, within an hour. Wednesday the current of the Quinebaug ran muddy, with the water somewhat higher than for several weeks.

Merchants to Organize

Tuesday evening a meeting of the borough retail merchants was held in the town hall, the objective being the formation of a Business Men's association. It is intended to so harmonize the borough's business interests that a general working out for the public good will be the result. Formal organization is expected within a few days. Believing that local trade interests, and the successful operation of home enterprises are of vital importance to the well-being of the community, the organization hopes to prove a common benefit.

Rt. Rev. E. Campion Atcheson, of Middletown was a guest Tuesday, at the home of Mrs. H. E. Paul, of East Main street. The bishop had been in Plainfield for the rite of confirmation at St. Paul's Episcopal church.

Showers for Members

After the regular meeting of Ruthie Rebekah chapter, two showers were given two recent brides—Mrs. Bessie LaLiberte Medick and Mrs. Florence Hill Campbell. They received many gifts of linen, china and glass. Mrs. Medick sang two solos and Mrs. Louise Holmes read a poem and the story of the Rebekah degree. Salad, pickles, rolls, cake, ice cream and coffee were served. The committee was Miss Eleanor Sietson, Mrs. Louise Perry, Misses Mabel McBroome and Bessie McCluggage.

Seventh Great-Grandchild

CHICAGO MAN SEEKS ANCESTRAL HOME SITE

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Ray and daughter, of Chicago, visited Mr. Ray's birthplace in Jewett City, Tuesday. Mr. Ray's father was the Rev. C. W. Ray, D. D., pastor of the Baptist church here from 1868 to 1870. The son was born in the house now owned by E. H. Hiscox. Mr. Ray took photographs of his former home and of the Baptist church, and is expecting to visit North Stonington to try and locate his ancestral home. The family is registered at the Mohican, New London, while visiting this part of Connecticut. Mr. Ray has been an official connected with a western railroad, and during the World war was a lieutenant colonel in the general army.

Passengers on the bus lines which serve the local territory are given opportunity here and there to admire the beautiful fields of golden rod. At several points over the Newent road to Norwich, one turns a bend in the road to discover acres of the golden blossoms spread out in their finest bloom.

State Rejects Bids

It was said here Tuesday, that the state of Connecticut highway commission has rejected all the bids for the construction work on the big Quinebaug viaduct, which is to involve expenditure of close to a half-million dollars.

Expert Excavating

The gallery watching excavation work at the corner of Ashland street, was shown some expert steam shoveling Tuesday morning. Several watches were gotten out, with the result that time piece variations caused some little confusion. Finally John Whalley, with the late Dr. S. H. Holmes' infallible chronometer, declared that out of 10 truck loads, one, which contained 7 yards of soil, was filled in three minutes and 20 seconds. Some wondered how a big maple stump would be removed from the center of the lot. The great scoop nosed it a bit, gave a couple of loosening shakes. The engineman at the gas end gave her the gun, while the operator got a good hold, something like the dentist does it, and amid a cloud of dust and snapping roots, the two-ton stump was set over to one side.

"Let's get down to brass tacks!"

The dry goods emporium of the late nineties nailed brass tacks on the counter to show exactly the start and finish of a yard. When a clerk with short arms and long nose would begin "smelling a yard" by measuring it from finger tip to proboscis, his customer was apt to exclaim, "Let's get down to brass tacks!"

Norwich women who come here—from the bride furnishing her new home completely to the matron buying a few pieces—all feel confident of Gilbert's merchandise—our sixty-eight years of experience makes them that way.

PRIMARY RESULTS

Primary contests in two of the large cities of the country this week have given expression to the sentiment of the voters, and although the primaries deal with local elections they have nevertheless stirred much outside interest.

New York is getting ready to elect a mayor for the next four years. Opposition has developed strongly against Mayor Walker. It has developed even within the democratic ranks although he was unopposed as the party's nominee, but it remains to be seen whether sufficient strength can be mustered by a fusion candidate to accomplish his defeat.

Congressman La Guardia is the man who was picked to lead the fight. He has been about everything there is as a partisan but he is regarded as the one who can command the greatest strength from the various factions. His contest with William M. Bennett for the fusion-republican nomination was decidedly one sided. As on previous appearances as a mayoralty candidate Mr. Bennett made a weak showing. It was apparent that he had only a small following, but the surprising thing is that in view of his overwhelming defeat in the primary some of those who supported him insist that a candidate to represent them will be presented for election day. According to his primary campaign declaration Mr. Bennett will be duty bound to give his support to Mr. La Guardia. The primary has disclosed the views of the fusionists and it ought to make clear the fact that if the defeat of Walker is going to be accomplished it will not be by putting more candidates into the field to draw anti-Walker votes. New York is already headed for a warm election campaign.

In Philadelphia the contest in the primary centered on an effort to upset the Vare machine. It was a fight within the republican ranks but it made little headway. The figures show that the Vare ticket was easily successful, not enough opposition being displayed to create a good contest. This indicates the Vare strength in his stronghold has not been weakened, and the influence which this verdict of the people of the Quaker City will have upon those senators who are trying to deny him the seat to which he was elected in the upper house of congress will be awaited with interest.

THE PEDESTRIAN

How differently they do things across the water and in this country may be indicated in various ways, but there will be bound to be surprise manifested over the declaration of the coroner of West London that a pedestrian should be fined if he is injured in a traffic accident, and if he is killed the cost of the investigation should come out of his estate.

He has evidently been impressed by the many instances of jay walking and he would penalize it. He takes the position that the pedestrian should keep out of the street unless he is sure of making the crossing successfully and that he should be able to meet all emergencies.

This is quite contrary to the view in this country that the pedestrian has the right of way and takes into consideration the fact that in these days of much and speedy highway traffic the pedestrian must provide his own safeguards.

It is apparent that there are many instances where individuals are the victims of needless accidents. They are conscious of the danger and yet they plunge blindly ahead with no thought of supplying the self protection that is easily possible. It is unquestionably the needless accidents which have moved the West London coroner to give such an expression to his views. There are the exasperating pedestrians quite the same as there are the hoggish auto drivers. Both makes claims upon highway requirements just to be mean or to assert what they regard as their rights. It can hardly be said that the trouble is all on one side as the coroner would have us believe, and certainly if he is observing rules and regulations and not jay walking the pedestrian should get all the consideration possible. He sometimes makes the hair stand up straight but he isn't as yet able to crush the motor vehicle.

MORE THAN FLAME AND SMOKE

To many people a forest fire is nothing more or less than the destruction of a lot of unused material. They give little consideration to the fact that it is someone's investment that has been growing for a period of years with the destruction meaning serious losses for those who have been regarding it as an asset to be drawn upon when wanted. When it comes to having a dollar and cents value placed upon such standing timber after it has been swept by fire it creates a different impression.

Forest fires in the west have been especially bad this year. In certain sections the situation has been critical with thousands of fire fighters engaged in trying to hold them in check. In the last three weeks of August the sum of over $1,000,000 was spent in the fighting of forest fires by the forest service alone and in the western national forests over 500,000 acres were burned over.

A further idea of what the fire losses amounts to is disclosed by the estimate of $2,500,000 in the Santa Paula mountains in California. This included not only the destruction of timber but the damage to oil derricks located throughout the mountains and where the oil fields were seriously threatened for a time.

Many millions will thus be wiped out by forest fires this year due to the dry conditions and the failure of preventive measures to stop them. It cannot be said that all of this loss is due to carelessness. Ordinarily that is the cause of a majority of such fires but this year, according to the forest service, "lightning fires have been unusually troublesome," and it is estimated that about 60 per cent of them were due to this cause. No one has as yet found a method of preventing such fires, but when it is realized that there were 4 per cent of them due to the human agency it is can be appreciated that there is a considerable field for preventive operations.

The forest fire losses this year may reach a record figure and one ought not to require personal experience under such conditions in order to realize that there is involved far more than the spectacular columns of flame and smoke. Someone's property, it may be dwellings and livestock as well as timber, is wiped out when such fires are started.

CONTROLLING NARCOTICS

Although persistent efforts have been made to bring about an agreement among nations for the placing of restrictions on the production of habit forming drugs not much progress has been made. The situation has been discussed but objections have been raised when it came to taking action that would get results. Nations which were directly or indirectly interested in the production of opium have been unwilling to curtail this business and restrict the output to such as is needed for medicinal and scientific purposes. Inasmuch as an international agreement of this kind was regarded as necessary in order to check the illegal traffic in drugs all efforts have been fruitless.

Because Great Britain was one of those countries which had hitherto been unwilling to join hands with the others in drug control, special significance is attached to the fact that the British delegation at the meeting of the league assembly at Geneva has put forth the proposition that the government in each country where narcotics are manufactured be invited into conference for the purpose of reaching an agreement concerning the production of dangerous drugs.

This indicates that the British have changed their views and it is apparent that this right about face has come with the change in the British government. It is the labor government that is backing this latest move while it was the conservative government that threw cold water on similar efforts when the league committee was endeavoring to get action.

Naturally there was a pleasing reception for the suggestion. It is bound to rekindle the hopes of those who have been striving so long in various countries to check the demoralizing effects of narcotics. In spite of all that has been accomplished in the fight against habit forming drugs it is recognized that smuggling can be carried on so extensively without detection that the desired check cannot be accomplished until there is an actual limitation placed upon the amount produced. In the interest of humanity it is the clear duty of the various nations to act without any greater delay than is necessary for the relief of this situation. It is to be hoped the British attitude indicates a successful outcome.

THE BUSY CANEL

In order to take care of the increasing business that is being done by the Panama canal, the suggestion has been made on several occasions within recent date that additional outlays are needed. By certain alterations it is figured that the capacity of the canal could be increased, as it must be within a comparatively short time, if there is to be a proper handling of the traffic and if there is no relief offered through the construction of another canal.

It rests with congress to say whether more money is to be spent on the Panama canal or whether it should be employed in building a second canal across Nicaragua. Another waterway would certainly relieve the congestion in the present canal. It would involve a much larger outlay than the enlargement of the Panama ditch but it would make a shorter route and would provide for the future.

However it has become evident that the demandon the present canal are such and the demands for water in operating it have so increased that a new dam and a greater storage are needed. It is much the same situation that is being faced there, with the use of the canal increased to 16 hours a day and the possibility that it may be operated 24 hours, that has had to be considered by many cities during periods of drought. Unless there can be stored a sufficient volume of water to meet requirements where the rainfall occurs a shortage is threatened during dry periods, and especially so with a steadily increasing demand being made upon existing resources.

Thus even though the decision may be against any enlargement of the present canal there will be need for increasing water storage in order to insure proper facilities for constantly increasing business and the proper control of the Chargres river.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Those who follow the advice to "know thyself" are often surprised.

While it is figured the senate will be through with the tariff by December, it is possible some of the members will only get started by that time.

The only trouble with that invatation from the league assembly for this country to join the world court is that it spells certain opposition from some senators.

A FAMILY AFFAIR

Ever since leaving her grandmother's place down in Wyattsville to find a job in the big city Edna May Miller had grown lonelier and lonelier until, feeling like a forsaken Cinderella, she was at the point of giving up her independence and running back home to the folks when, most unexpectedly some fairy godmother touched her world with a magic wand—and, of course, introduced the proverbial Prince Charming as well!

In the real estate office where Edna May had found a job she was just one of the extra stenographers and, until it all happened, she had never taken a business letter of any importance. But one morning in early March when she came earlier to the office than usual and sat alone at her desk waiting for the other girls to arrive, a young man came up and startled her by his sudden query:

"Will you please be kind enough to take a letter for me right away, Miss—Miss—"

"Miller," she finished for him. And she drew out her notebook.

"Oh, please come into my office," the strange young man said, and she was surprised to have him usher her into the sanctum of Mr. Dennison himself, president of the company and seat himself at the president's big mahogany desk.

"Really, Miss Miller," the astonishing young man began as she hesitantly found a chair, "you must pardon my brusqueness out there," and he waved toward the outside office, "but this is my first day here and I'm sort of nervous, having all this responsibility. You see, I'm David Dennison, Jr., and the old man's gone to Florida for a couple of weeks, and I'm supposed to run this office." And, although almost out of breath, he continued: "About all I know of the real estate business is the rough field work—you see, I buy and sell property out in the country for his customers." And Mr. Denison, Jr., wiped his perspiring brow and subsided into his father's ample chair.

Delighted by this impromptu oration, Edna May laughed in spite of herself.

"Oh, I see," she said, and was surprised at the ease that had replaced her former self-consciousness.

"Now the first thing I have to do," Mr. Dennison said after regaining his own composure, "is to dictate a letter to my dad conveying some extremely unpleasant information, as you will soon see. Mr. Dennison was so charmingly unaware of the dignity attached to his position behind the mahogany desk that Edna May felt more and more at ease every minute. And she forgot her former sense of unimportance as Mr. Dennison went on, urging her to help him shape the engrossing correspondence.

"I want to say," he explained "that the transaction we were considering has gone blooey—that is, an old woman refuses to sell her property and I guess we'll have to try elsewhere. And what he'll say when he hears this—oh, boy! I hate to think of it!"

"I regret to inform you," Edna May translated, taking down the letter, "that the transaction we had under consideration has turned out most disappointingly. The owner of the property we proposed to buy for our customer refuses to sell.

"Say, Miss Miller, just a minute," Mr. Dennison interrupted. "We forgot the name and address. Put in: 'The owner, Mrs. Clara Kirkland, of Wyattsville——'"

"Why," Edna May gasped in surprise, "that's my grandmother!"

"Your what?" Mr. Dennison dropped his whimsical air.

"That must be my grandmother's old farm on the river near Wyattsville—and I'm glad she won't sell it!" said Edna May stoutly.

"But she's refusing twice what the land is worth," Mr. Dennison said earnestly. "It's the opportunity of a life-time. She'll never get our price for it again."

"She doesn't care about the money," Edna May defended. "It's the old homesite that's been in our family for three generations—and she won't have it cut up into lots for a crowd of subdividers—"

"Who said anything about subdividers?" he shouted. "Our customer is a rich philanthroplat who wants to build an orphanage there."

"Oh," said Edna May in a mild little voice.

"So," said Mr. Dennison in a voice not so mild, "if we could tell your grandmother that and get her to sell it we—I—I'd get a big promotion and it'd all be due to you and—"

"And I'll go with you," said Mr. Dennison with emphasis. "I'll call for you at 10 in the morning and we'll drive down and make a day of it."

"So this happy little girl is the same one who last week wrote she was so lonely she was coming home to grandmother," Mrs. Kirkland smiled as she signed her name to the dotted line.

"Yes, grandmother," said Edna May happily, "but that was Cinderella before—before she went to the ball," she finished slowly.

"You'll stay to supper?" invited Mrs. Kirkland, "to celebrate the big transaction in our family?"

"Yes, indeed, grandmother," said Edna May sweetly.

"Yes, indeed, grandmother," said David boldly, adding to himself, "but the main transaction in this family is yet to be made!"

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 18—Out in a sort of residential backwater of Washington, a triangle inclosed by Massachusetts and Connecticut avenues and the deep, picturesque canyon of Rock Creek, is a hill where more and more retired political folk seek home sites.

It is known in city history as Kalorama hill, but it might be dubbed appropriately the Hill of the Presidents.

Woodrow Wilson retired to a fine old home on that hill from the white house. It is on S street, which cuts over the rise from Massachusetts to Connecticut.

Over toward the canyon side is the home where Warren Harding lived as senator and which he retained until after he entered the white house.

For the most part the homes that cluster on the hill are of moderate size and grounds. Probably the largest and most imposing is that of John Hays Hammond.

Recruits.

And now two more government circle Washingtonians who have ideas of dwelling permanently in the capital are to join the Kalorama hill colony.

They are Senator Dave Reed of Pennsylvania and William R. Castle, Jr., assistant secretary of state, who hails from Honolulu.

Through official contact and neighborly residence, these two have become close friends and they will build homes side by side.

There is this particular interest: What does Senator Reed's decision to build his home in Washington mean in relation to his political plans or hopes? His political center of activity, as well as the field of his law practice, is Pittsburgh. Does his idea of making himself permanently a resident of Washington mean that he has no political ambitions?

The Bystander hears conflicting reports about that. From some people close to the senator he has heard much about Reed as a possible republican presidential candidate.

Reed is a young man and undoubtedly has strong American Legion backing.

Wants to Retire.

From other sources equally close to Senator Reed, the Bystander has heard that he is eager to retire from public life at the end of his present term in 1935.

He is said to talk of doing a lot of traveling once he is out of office. But even those who say this is the senator's point of view are skeptical that he will find it possible not to run again for the senate. Reed is a party regular and the situation in Pennsylvania is much disturbed.

Castle also has been close to retirement from public service. Secretary Stimson's failure to select him for a higher position surprised most Washington observers, although Castle seems to have taken it in good part and played the game.

He was not responsible for the campaign in his behalf waged by his friends. As a matter of fact, that campaign in itself may have prevented his selection. Should it chance that he was again passed over, however, in all likelihood he would quit the state department, much as he likes that work.

So the best you can deduce from the Reed-Castle building plans is that they call Washington home without regard to political uncertainties.

Children Handicapped by Physical Defects.

By W. C. Fowler, M. D.
Health Officer, District of Columbia
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Of 4701 kindergarten and first grade pupils examined by school medical inspectors in the District of Columbia public schools during the year 1927-8, 91.1 per cent. were found to have physical defects, with an average of 2.3 defects per pupil.

The outstanding defects were teeth 61.0 per cent; tonsils 45.6; enlarged glands 25.3; nutrition 23.3; defective nasal breathing 16.5; vision 10.8; anemia 9.9; nasal catarrh 6.8; skin 4.7; orthopedic 3.8; nervous system 3.8; pulmonary 3.3; speech 2.5; hearing 1.9; cardiac 1.9; crossed eyes 1.0; hernia .9; and discharging ear .5.

It is evident from the above that the majority of children entering the schools are already seriously handicapped by physical defects urgently in need of correction and that they are preventable.

The examination of pupils in the elementary schools discloses that the defects develop and continue, and that additional ones are acquired, many of them unknown to the parents.

Failure to detect and to correct these defects engenders heavy penalties. For instance, slight dental caries rapidly progress to complete destruction and loss, or to conditions potentially capable of far-reaching extension of disease. Defective hearing and vision may be progressive, and may in addition exert an unfavorable influence upon the nervous system and the general health. Infected tonsils may be a source of extension of disease to ears, heart, kidneys, central nervous system and elsewhere.

Since the majority of parents are not specially trained in child guidance, child hygiene, dietetics and in the diagnosis and treatment of disease, arrangements should be made by them with the family physician and dentist to make periodic physical examinations of their children.

The fact must be realized that the defects of teeth, eyes, ears, nose, throat, heart, intestinal tract, nervous system and other organs do frequently and constantly occur among children from birth, and need expert attention at the earliest possible moment.

A semi-annual physical examination beginning in infancy will prevent many handicaps in growth and development, and detect and correct defects at a period when they are more easily eradicated and cause less serious damage.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Flip is Invited to Slide.

By Thornton W. Burgess

Wise is he who every day
Finds some time in which to play.
—Little Joe Otter

Little Joe Otter had finished the fine trout that he had caught and after licking his lips he looked over at Bowser the Hound and Flip the Terrier, who were watching him a short distance away. "It's a great day for sliding," said Little Joe.

"For some folks, but not for me," replied Bowser, while Flip looked puzzled.

"I don't know of any better sport," said Little Joe. "Won't you fellows come and join me on my slippery slide? I have a very nice slide over on that steep part of the bank on the other side of the Smiling Pool. Sliding is great fun. Come on over and join me."

Bowser shook his head. "We'll take your word for it that it is great sport," said he. "But we'll stay right here and watch you."

Little Joe Otter slipped into the water and swam across the Smiling Pool. He moved through the water so easily that it seemed no effort at all. "My!" exclaimed Flip. "What must it be to swim like that? What does he mean by sliding?"

"Watch him and you'll soon see," replied Bowser.

By this time Little Joe was across at the other side. He went ashore where the bank was low. Then he walked along up to the highest point of the bank. Flip could see that from the top of the bank down to the water was what looked like a smooth, muddy place. The grass had been worn off entirely. Little Joe stopped on the upper edge of this smooth place. Then he lay down flat on his stomach, put his forefeet back against his sides, gave a good, hard kick with his hind feet and with these stretched out behind him slid swiftly down the bank and disappeared headfirst into the water. He came up again right under where Bowser and Flip were sitting. "Come on, you fellows!" said Little Joe. "The slippery slide is fine this morning!" Without waiting for a reply he turned, swam back and climbed out at the place where he had left the water before. Once more he made his way to the top of the slippery slide and shot down into the water. Then he repeated this over and over. He certainly was having a great time. It was plain to see that he was enjoying it thoroughly.

"That does look as if it would be fun," said Flip, who was becoming quite excited.

"Fun for an Otter, perhaps, but not for a dog," replied Bowser sagely.

"Couldn't we go around there and watch him from that side?" asked Flip.

"You can if you want to," said Bowser. "I don't feel like swimming just now."

Flip watched a few minutes longer. Then he ran down to the narrowest part of the Smiling Pool and swam across. Once on the other side, he shook himself and ran along up the bank toward Little Joe Otter's slippery slide. By this time Little Joe was through sliding. He had said good by and gone on down the Laughing Brook toward the Big River. "I'll see you again some day," he called just before he disappeared. Flip was rather glad he was gone. There was a good chance now to examine that slippery slide.

"That does look as if it would be fun," said Flip.

WILLIMANTIC SCHOOL BUDGET IS SET AT $203,000

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 18 — The annual school budget of Windham was fixed at $200,000 at the first monthly meeting of the present school year of the town school committee here tonight. This is an increase of $9,000, of which $4,000 is to be borne by the taxpayers while the remaining $5,000 is derived from increased income in tuition fees over last year. The committee considered the overcrowded condition of Windham high school which has reached a new high enrollment mark this year with a registration of 660.

Immediate plans for additional room were discussed to forestall the necessity of having to refuse admission to tuition pupils next year, thereby losing their tuition fees and possibly deprive them of a high school education. To meet this situation the committee will ask the selectmen to incorporate an appropriation of $12,000 in the warning of the next town meeting. Part of this money will be used in building a room, 65x25 feet, on the third floor of the school, this room to be used for study purposes. The remainder is to secure plans and specifications and bids for the construction in about two years of an eight to ten room addition on the east end of the present building to accommodate at least 200 more pupils.

CHICAGO FOOTBALL CAPTAIN SPOKE ON CHARACTER BUILDING

Frank Gowdy, captain of the 1924 University of Chicago team which won the Big Ten title, was the speaker at the meeting of the Norwich Rotary club held Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel. Members of the Academy football squad, some 40 in number, were the guests of the club.

Mr. Gowdy took for his topic, "Football, A. Builder of Character." He is well qualified to speak on football, having learned his football under the famed Alonzo Stagg, one of the greatest football mentors the game has ever known. So well did he learn his football that he was accorded the highest honor in the realms of the game, a position on that mythical eleven, the all-American, toward which every college player strives but few attain. Another signal honor that came to Mr. Gowdy was when his team played the University of Illinois, headed by Red Grange, the Galloping Ghost, to a 21 to 21 tie.

In his talk Gowdy related many incidents common in college football, some humorous, others pathetic and others filled with gridiron drama. Mr. Gowdy laid especial stress on the importance of physical condition and how if the fundamentals of the training table are carried through life, a man will not crack after he reaches forty. He told of the evil of overconfidence in football as well as in life saying that many a good team and man has been beaten simply by thinking that his opponent was a set-up. Vanity, that is, excessive vanity, was another quality that has no place in football or in a man's life. A certain amount is an incentive but an overabundance is a liability. These things along with the hard-knocks, the reverses and other things that go with the game, all contribute to the building of a youth's character.

In speaking of the practice of scouting other teams during the football season, Mr. Gowdy said that the practice was not low and despicable as some would lead the world to believe. It is an accepted practice and in the majority of colleges the scouts are extended every courtesy and it becomes a part of the game.

At the conclusion of his talk Mr. Gowdy answered a number of questions regarding football. Many of the questions being asked by members of the Academy football squad.

At the business session President Frank R. Murdy presided and Flint Brayton and F. Russell Smith acted as song leaders. The members of the Academy football team, accompanied by Coach Courtland Whitney and Capt. Chet Berghinzo, were introduced.

Joseph C. Worth urged attendance at the fall conclave of the 20th district next week at Swampscott. A number signified their intention of attending this conference.

Charles A. Saxton spoke very enthusiastically of the progress of the Rotary Boys' band which the club is sponsoring. The band now numbers about 25 boys who are under the direction of John M. Swahn.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Academy Alma Mater and the Star Spangled Banner.

RALPH DIVITO RETURNS AFTER FOUR YEARS IN ITALY

Ralph Divito, formerly of 208 Franklin street, arrived in Norwich Wednesday for a brief call on friends. Mr. Divito, for over three years a Norwich patrolman, left this city four years ago for his native Italy, in the hope of improving his health. He returned Tuesday accompanied by Mrs. Divito and their daughter Miss Christina and for the present is staying with Groton relatives. He still carries a cane, but explains that he has almost recovered from the lameness of the feet which was the cause of his resigning from the Norwich police force. Mr. Divito made a brief call on Chief Linton at police headquarters and was very happy to meet some of his former associates on the force, after his long absence from Norwich.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TRIBUTE TO ANGUS PARK

Memorial tribute to Angus Park of Hanover, prominent woolen mill owner and banker, whose death occurred Tuesday at Bethlehem, N. H., has been prepared by the Norwich chamber of commerce of which he was a member since its inception. Recognition of his value as a citizen in Hanover and in Norwch is expressed through the words of the tribute when it says that "Although a resident of Hanover, Mr. Park was intensely interested in all that meant for the welfare of Norwich and was a valued member of its chamber of commerce. He was a man of the strictest integrity, of a very high sense of honor, of the broadest sympathies and of rare judgment. He loved humanity, as the treatment of those who worked for him bears testimony, and there is no one who had the privilege of knowing him and associating with him but will sorely miss his cheery presence. The Norwich chamber of commerce and all other interests with which he was affiliated have suffered a great loss in his death."

The tribute is to be spread at length upon the records of the chamber of commerce.

Do you know what makes a good hat good?

If you are a regular Stetson patron—and such a list includes most of the well-known names of the United States—you already know the answer to this question. A good hat must have style that is correct and smart. The quality of the felt must be fine and the workmanship and finish must be expert. If yours is a Stetson you know it is a good hat—for Stetson style and Stetson quality have led the hat field for generations.

S. M. ISAACS SUCCEEDS PAUL PREHN AS HEAD OF NATIONAL BOXING ASSOCIATION

By CHARLES W. DUNKLEY

CHICAGO, Sept. 18 (AP)—Stanley M. Isaacs of Cincinnati, former president of the Ohio boxing association, and a leader in American legion affairs in the Buckeye state, was elected president of the national boxing associatiop today, the concluding day of the organization's national convention.

The convention voted to hold the 1930 meeting at Quebec, Canada, yielding to the pleas of commissioners representing Quebec and Montreal.

Isaacs replaces Paul Prehn, of Champaign, Ills., as the executive head of the N. B. A., which governs boxing in 31 states. He has been active in the conduct of the N. B. A's affairs and has the reputation of being one of the youngest captains to serve overseas with the American army. He was just 21 years old when he received his commission.

Edward C. Foster, Providence, R. I., was reappointed chairman of the championship committee by the newly elected president. Foster also was elected second vice president, with James M. Brown of Ypsilanti, Mich., chairman of the Michigan athletic board of control, first vice president. Rigidair general John V. Clinnin, chairman of the Illinois state athletic commission, was chosen third vice president.

Jack Dempsey appeared before the N. B. A. delegates complimenting them in their efforts to improve the sports. Prehn, the retiring president, commended the former world's heavyweight champion on his spirit in assisting in the development of the game since his retirement.

President Isaacs announced the appointment of a new committee to carry on relations with the National A. A. U., with the possibility of aiding in the supervision of amateur boxing. General Clinnin was appointed chairman of the committee, which also includes Walter La Ginger of Milwaukee, and Lathrop Cogswell, of Baltimore, Md.

The new president also named an advisory board of the association, selecting Prehn as chairman. This board will work with N. B. A. officials on questions of policy.

The association paid tribute to Prehn and his administration on the form of a resolution which was unanimously adopted.

The association gave recognition to Gene Roman of Paterson, N. J. ranking licensed referee of that state, and authorized him to officiate in any state belonging to the N. B. A.

The scores were 2 to 0 and 1 to 0.

In the opener Irving Hadley pitched his best game of the season to best Whitehill and struck out 11 men.

EARNSHAW WINS HIS 22ND GAME OF SEASON

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 18.—(AP) — George Earnshaw's three hit victory in the second game of a double-header here this afternoon saved the Athletics the blemish of losing their season's series with the Browns. The champion Macks won behind Earnshaw 4 to 3 after dropping the first game, 6 to 2.

The victory, Earnshaw's twenty-second, gave the Athletics eleven victories and ten defeats in the year's contests with St. Louis.

The Reds made the game safe for him by pounding Philadelphia's pitchers. The rookie hurler showed he could bat as well as pitch, getting two hits in three trips to the plate.

SUSIE SAYS

Ain't love a grand and glorious thing?

Don't it make folks do the darnest things? Things that they'd laugh their heads off at if it wasn't that they'd been bitten by this bug.

Now I'm not going to discourse on love because there's lots of people who know more about it than I do. Follow the newspaper game for 15 years and you'll find out what queer things this love can do to people.

But can you imagine anybody who wasn't in love taking a walk in a driving rain and seeming to like it? Well, that's what I saw a young couple doing the other night near Colchester.

Of course, I realize that people are liable to do most anything up there, and walking is a favorite pastime. I was driving home from Hartford about 11 o'clock when my lights showed a young man and woman trudging along the road arm in arm.

They had no umbrellas or raincoats on but they didn't seem to mind it a bit. They seemed to be enjoying it immensely. The young man had his arm lovingly draped about the shoulders of the young woman and she was giggling up into his face.

I slowed down to almost a walk and asked them if they wanted a ride. It was raining as hard as I ever saw it rain and they must have been soaked to the skin. Did they want to ride? They did not. They thanked me and said they were enjoying the walk.

Were they married? Don't be foolish. You never saw a married couple roaming the highways on a night like that. If they'd been married they'd have been walking single file and each would have had an umbrella, raincoat and rubber boots.

Whoever saw a married man put his arm around his wife to shield her from the rain? No, he'd have had his coat collar turned up and his hands shoved deep in his pockets. Friend wife could take care of herself.

And I don't suppose that couple even got a mild cold out of it where a sedately married couple would be down with pneumonia by now. I suppose it was a grand lark for them.

Yep, this love stuff must be a grand thing to keep a young couple out on the road in a driving rain and make 'em like it.

Until I saw that couple I didn't know they could make 'em that simple.

INDICATIONS ARE THAT HENDRICKS WILL BE RETAINED

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Sept. 18.—(AP)—Jack Hendricks, manager of the Cincinnati Reds, questioned about reports that he had resigned, said he would attend the annual draft meeting in Chicago the night before the opening of the world series at the expense of the Cincinnati club, which was taken as a definite indication that he still would be manager at that time.

Clarence Rowland, manager of the Nashville club of the Southern Association, mentioned as Hendricks' successor next year, today said his contract called for another year with the Nashville team and that he had not been approached on the matter. The Enquirer published a story today stating that the club directors had definitely decided not to re-hire Hendricks next season.

BASS WINS ON FOUL FROM SANTIAGO IN SECOND

Billy Wallace, Philadelphia, won the decision in a 10 rounder with Bruce Flowers, New Rochelle, N. Y. Each weighed 133.

Ebbets Kayoes Grove.

Previously each had scored one victory over the other. Ebbets weighed 157 1-2, Grove 164.

CUBS CLINCH NATIONAL PENNANT WHEN BRAVES TROUNCE THE PIRATES

By PAUL R. MICKELSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, Sept. 19 (AP)—Their sympathy arrested by the plight of the Cubs at Wrigley field, the Braves personally snatched the 1929 National league pennant from the grasp of the Pirates this afternoon and delivered it to the home of the Bruins in time to remove the significance from the daily drubbing of the new champions. The Braves brought the championship to the Cubs by defeating the Pirates, 5 to 4, in the first half of a double header, before the Giants made even one threatening gesture at the Bruins, whom they later defeated 7 to 3.

The Cubs now could lose all of their 11 games as the Pirates won a similar number, and the Bruins still would finish half a game ahead of the Buccaneers.

The news that the Cubs had won their first flag since 1918 brought only a few cheers from the 8,000 fans who then devoted themselves to razzing Sheriff Blake, who yielded ten solid hits and absorbed a defeat in the four innings he worked.

The lack of a demonstration was because Cub fans long have taken this pennant for granted.

"Well, we have the pennant now, and I'm glad its over," mused Joe McCarthy, the portly pilot who led the Bruins from the wilderness to the purple heights in four brief years. "My pitching staff is sagging now under the strain, but we will have plenty of time to rest up for Mr. Mack and his boys."

McCarthy seemed to be worried over the rough treatment stars and satellites alike on his pitching staff have received from all the rest of the league for the last two weeks. Bush has been knocked out five times in five starts, and Blake, Malone, and Carlson have been unsteady. Charlie Root alone appears to be on edge.

The unsettled condition of the pitching staff and injuries which have both Charlie Grimm and Zach Taylor on the sidelines combined to take the edge from the flag clinching.

'My boys are just tired, but now that we hae the flag in the bag, they can get some well earned rest to put them into condition to win the world's championship. Happy? of course I am. It is the realization of a dream I hae had since 1919. You know our 1918 pennant is the 12th for the Cubs. They won in the first year of the National league in 1876, and put together five championships in seven years from 18880 through 1885, including three staight in 1880-81-82. Chance then won in 1906, 1907, 1908 and 1910.

Anson's champions of the '80s tied one world's series and won the (correct) in competition against the Browns of Comiskey and Von Der Ahe. Chance defeated Detroit twice, but had preceded this double triumph with a reverse in the city world's series against the White Sox in 1906, and followed it by losing four out of five to the athletics in 1910. The Red Sox trimmed Fred Mitchell's Cubs in 1918.

John McGraw's forces hammered out sixteen hits today, ten of Blake and six off Art Nehf. The invaders scored in all but three innings, and opened with a base hit in seven distinct rounds.

Rogers Honsby got three out of five and scored all of Chicago's runs. This scoring feat ran Honsby's total to 146, displacing the National league record of 144 made by Kiki Cuyler at Pittsburgh in 1925.

Carl Hubbell was hit hard, but tightened up when he had to.

TOSSES WRESTLING OPPONENT INTO WAR PREMIER'S LAP

SYDNEY, Australia, Sept. 18.—(AP)—William Huches, war premier, had a narrow escape at a wrestling match here when John Pesek, Nebraska husky, got rough with his opponent, Joe Zikmund of Poland, and chucked him out of the ring. As Zikmund disappeared through the ropes, spectators rushed to the spot and found that Hughes, who was witnessing a wrestling bout for the first time and was sitting immediately under where the wrestler fell, had disappeared. After the fans had lifted all of Zikmund's 218 pounds, they found Hughes crouched under his seat, which he had vacated just in time.

The contest then proceeded with the American winning in the seventh round when the police stopped the bout after Zikmund had been tossed out of the ring three more times.

NEW WORLD'S RECORD ESTABLISHED AT CINCINNATI

CINCINNATI, O., Sept. 18.—(AP)—Winninez, champion racing gelding, set up a new record for the Coney Island track at the Grand Circuit races today when he won the second heat of the 2:05 pace in 2:01 1-4, the Palin stable star also winning the two other heats in slower time, maintaining unbeaten record for the season.

In winning the second heat of the stake for 2:12 pacers, Labrador from the same stable, equalled the track record but lost the race, the Kansas City gelding Kinney Direct winning the first and third heats.

CRIMSON CREW HAS FIRST HARD WORKOUT

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Sept. 18.—(AP)—The Harvard varsity football squad went through its first hard workout today when pads were distributed for the first time. The backs and line candidates spent much time on the tackling dummy and then the forwards were put to work on the charging machine. Eddie Casey, the backfield coach, had many of his pupils tossing passes.

Three new candidates reported to Jimmy Knox, second team coach. They were T. O. Frazier, of Honolulu, an end; P. L. Winston, of Gladstone, N. J., and H. D. Myhoff, Troy, N. Y., both backs.

"DIASTATIC DEFICIENCY" AND "TOO MUCH ACID" CAUSE 9 OUT OF EVERY 10 ATTACKS

"DIASTATIC DEFICIENCY" (failure to digest starches), causes more than one-half the cases of stomach trouble. Because of this deficiency, potatoes, breads, macaroni, rice, breakfast cereals and other starchy foods remain in a semi-solid condition and refuse to move on as they should. This stoppage causes INDIGESTION, GAS, FERMENTATION, SOURNESS, SICK HEADACHE and other common troubles.
"TOO MUCH ACID" is the cause of almost all the remaining half of our stomach troubles. It also is the result of fermentation and excess digestive acids.
ACIDINE, the new discovery, is a perfect anti-acid combined with "Japtase," the most effective known starch digestant, one pound of which will digest more than 800 pounds of starchy foods.
ACIDINE is the FIRST COMPLETE REMEDY for STOMACH TROUBLE—an ANTI-ACID, STARCH DIGESTANT, MEAT DIGESTANT. At the same time it is safe and soothing to the most sensitive stomach. Slightly laxative but not unpleasantly so.

STOCK MARKET WAS STRONG YESTERDAY AND HIGHLY SELECTIVE IN CHARACTER

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)— Aggressive pool operations sent prices of a score of leading issues sharply higher in today's stock market. Professional bullish operations were revived in decisive fashion on the theory that the market had reached the bottom of the decline which has been in progress intermittently for the past fortnight, and the upturn was aided by an assortment of fairly pleasing business and industrial news.

The market was highly selective in character, and an extensive sprinkling of moderate declines practically counterbalanced the day's advances. Continued tight call money tended to impede any general advance, and in conservative quarters there was no general inclination to adhere to the theory that the decline in prices had been halted until the market should give conclusive evidence of it. Commission houses advices presented almost the complete spectrum of market sentiment from ultra bullishness to extreme bearishness. Several advised their customers to stick to the sidelines until trends become more distinct.

Call money renewed at 9 per cent, but moved again to 10, and time money was notably tighter, commanding a flat 9 per cent for all maturities. Bankers were inclined to the opinion that somewhat easier conditions will be experienced next week, when the mid-month shifting of balances will have been completed. Several factors tended to befog the outlook, however. There was again the prospect that the Bank of England will announce a higher rediscount rate tomorrow morning. Weakness of sterling exchange, the cable rate equalling its low level of the year today, and the danger of further losses of gold to New York and Paris, may force such action. Also, the large amount of new financing to be taken up will impose a considerable burden on the money market.

Several favorable dividend actions were announced. Baltimore and Ohio increased its annual rate from $6 to $7 and Granby Copper, from $7 to $8, but the former was not announced until after the close of the market. F. W. Dodge Corp. reported a sharp upturn in building contracts let during the past week, important increases occurring in heavy construction, although the daily average of contracts let so far this month is only about 80 per cent of the daily average for September a year ago. The iron and steel trade reviews said steel mill operations had fallen close to the level of a year ago, but while the outlook was still clouded with uncertainty, large buying for the railroads and heavy construction projects were auspicious factors. Car loadings for the latest week were again at an extraordinarily high level. Crude production increased moderately.

U. S. Steel and American Telephone were brought forward as market leaders. The former shot up about 13 points to a record price at 307 1-2, and closed at 304. Another valuable offering of "rights" is expected before the first of the year. Steel rose more than 10 points to within about 17 points of its record level. Utilities were generally strong. American and Foreign Power, Standard Gas and Electric and Public Service of New Jersey reached new high ground, but the last named reacted before the close. Stone and Webster was buoyed up by the news that its investment affiliate is taking a leading part in the formation of a huge New York state banking chain.

Chemicals were spectacularly buoyant. Commercial Solvents shot up more than 50 points to a new high above 600 and closed at 594. U. S. Industrial Alcohol and Columbian Carbon rose about 12 and 15 points respectively, to record levels. Auburn Auto surged up 39 points to a new peak at 514, and Simmons, Hershey Chocolate, General American Tank, and Newport Co. rose 2 to about 7 points to new peaks. Coppers turned upward once more, Anaconda mounting more than 2 points. Rails were firm, generally moving in narrow ranges.

General Electric failed to follow the upturn, closing at 372, off about 3 points, and 21 points under its record price. Motors were generally sluggish. Packard losing a couple of points. Electric Power and Light lost more than 2 points, Moto Meter and Gauge touched a new low at 18 5-8, and Case Threshing slipped back 10 points.

Commodities were inclined to sag. Wheat futures closed about 1-2 a cent lower on increased world visible supply and bearish weather, and corn sagged about as much on favorable weather reports. Cotton advanced early in the session on steadiness of the Liverpool markets and reports of rain, but ran into profit taking and closed slightly lower.

In the irregular foreign exchanges, Sterling cable touched $4.84 5-8, equalling the year's low. The Japanese yen, however, moved up 1-5 of a cent to 47.45 little more than 1 1-2 cents below parity, on confidence inspired by the retrenchment policy of the recently installed government.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, Sept. 18.—(AP)— Despite Canadian reports of better export business and notwithstanding Argentina advices of additional rain needed, wheat values today underwent setbacks that more than offset gains. Profit-taking sales turned the wheat market sharply downward at times, especially during the last half of the day. New purchases of wheat future deliveries were of insufficient volume to support the market in the face of enlarged offerings from commission houses.

Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled, 3-3c to 7-3c under yesterday's finish. Corn closed unchanged to 3-4c lower, oats 1-4c off to 3-3c up, and up, and provisions varying from 12s decline to a rise of 2 a 5c.

Notice that the world's visible supply of wheat had been augmented 17,000,000 bu. in the last week did considerable toward the last today to weight wheat values down. The increase was more than twice as large as at this time last year, and made the present total stock 371,972,000 bu. compared with 137,717,000 buy a year ago. On the other hand, Winnipeg messages said yesterday's export business in Canadian wheat was the largest of the season. Only a little Canadian wheat appeared to have been taken for Europe today, however, and trans-Atlantic call for wheat from the United States was virtually nil.

Upturns witnessed today in wheat prices here came mostly in the earlier dealings and were associated with Argentina dispatches which said no rain had been received in Pampas, North Cordoba and Entre Rios districts, and that the need of moisture in the territory specified was acute. Signs that United States wheat is in good demand from domestic millers were likewise something of a stimulus, and so too were reports of lack of sub-soil moisture throughout domestic winter wheat territory, with indications of some curtailment of intended planting. An interesting feature today was that prices on wheat available for immediate use showed a persistent tendency to harden here as compared with quotations on future deliveries.

Response of corn values today to frosts last night was not at all impressive, the tone of the corn market being relatively weak. Profit-taking sales were much in evidence, and official advices indicated that a big share of the corn crop is already out of danger. Oats were largely governed by the action of corn.

Provisions were irregular, with lard firm and meats easy.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 18.—(AP)— Convertibles monopolized the attention of traders in today's bond market. Under the leadership of the communication stock feature debentures, issues in this group showed a buoyant tone throughout the session and net advances of 1 1-2 to 7 1-2 points were scored.

American Telephone Convertible 4 1-2s, changing hands in enormous volume, showed a maximum advance of about 10 points, but later sold off somewhat, finishing 7 1-2 points above yesterday's close. Transactions totaled nearly $5,000,000 par value, a bulk that was reminiscent of the debentures activity early in the summer.

International Telephone 4 1-2s traded within a 7 point spread in a volume of nearly $700,000 and made a net gain on the day of 3 points. American International 5 1-2s rose 3 1-4, also in large dealings, and Public Service of New Jersey 4 1-2s reached the new peak of 239, four points higher.

While the majority of the convertibles were rising in response to strength in the stocks they represent, the older portion of the bond list developed an easier appearance. Small fractions were whittled from a number of representative high grade rails, including several of the Pennsylvania issues, although there was small display of strength in the Southern Railway and St. Louis & San Francisco groups.

Industrials shaded off. Armour Real Estate 4 1-2s yielded a point to about their year's low, Fisk Rubber 8s dropped 3 1-2 and North American Cement 6 1-2s made another new low under some liquidation. Oil company obligations ruled steady.

Utilities displayed the best tone in the general list. New York Telephone General 1 1-2s gained 1-2, Pacific Gas & Electric 5s moved up 1 1-4, Montana Power 5s advanced 1 and Southwestern Bell Telephone 5s gained a point.

Among the specialties, National Dairy Products 4s eased fractionally and Shubert Theatre 6s sold off 6 3-8. The latter on minor selling.

Interest in the United States government group was slight and declines prevailed. The heaviest dealings were in the treasury 3 3-4s, which lost about 1-4.

Foreign bonds worked irregularly lower. Hamburg 6s went to the new low of 90 1-2 on a 2 point recession. Peruvian first and second 6s improved.

FAIRVIEW 4-H CLUB ADDRESSED BY MISS GROVER

The Fair View 4-H Sewing club held its meeting on a recent Saturday, at Scotland Road hall. All members were present. Plans were made for Achievement day, October 5th. Miss Elizabeth Grover, assistant county agent, visited the club and gave a very interesting talk on new projects. After the meeting games were played.

Wolf Cubs Make Plans

The Wolf Cub Pack of Scouts connected with the Methodist Episcopal church, held a meeting at the parsonage Monday afternoon. The meeting was opened with the usual ritual, Bugler Ellis Bentley playing the assembly call. Scout Edward Gallagher assisted Rev. George Warren Potter, the cubmaster in the meeting. The songs that were submitted were tried out again and it was decided that the decision would be given at the next meeting as to which will be awarded the prize. The treasurer, John Gibbs, reported that there was a balance of over ten dollars in the treasury. The Cubs voted to buy some furniture for the meeting place. Plans for a Cub party to be held at an early date were discussed and it was agreed that Cubs must be regular in their attendance to be entitled to attend the party. The same period came next in the meeting, which was held out of doors and was enjoyed by all. The Wolf Cub howl by all Cubs and the playing of Taps, by Bugler Bentley, closed the meeting.

Scouts Do Good Turn

A number of Boy Scouts connected with the Methodist Episcopal church, met recently with their assistant scoutmaster, Lewis E. Aldrich, in the vestry and did a good turn that will be appreciated by all. The scouts under the direction of Mr. Aldrich, cleaned out the basement of the church and started new arrangements whereby it will be used as a kitchen for church suppers. A very good kitchen range which was donated by Harold Rose, was set up. Mr. Rose has also donated a sink which will be put in place. The scouts who did this special good turn were: Bugler Edward Jordan, and Scouts Clayton Rose, Earl Robinson and Edward Gallagher.

The gypsies are supposed to be descended from some East Indian tribe. Their language, Romany, is certainly a Hindu dialect mixed with other tongues.

POETRY

It Will Show In Your Face

You don't have to tell
How you live every day;
You need not reveal
If you work or you play;
For a trusty barometer's
Always in place—
However you live
It will show in your face.

The truth or deceit
You would hide in your heart,
They will not stay inside
When once given a start;
Sinews and blood are like
Thin veils of lace—
What you wear in your heart
You must wear on your face

If you've battled and won
In the great game of life,
If you've striven and conquered
Through sorrow and strife;
If you've played the game fair
But reached only first base
No need to proclaim it—
It shows in your face.

If your life is unselfish, and
For others you live—
For not what you get,
But how much you can give;
If you live close to God
In His infinite grace—
You don't have to tell it;
It shows in your face.

—Claude Francis Cross, in Our Sunday Visitor.

The Sunrise

Hark! there comes a sudden stillness, like the lull before a storm;
The music of the night is quiet, just before the day is born.

The temples of the east are opened, great gray arrows shoot about,
And the stars, like little candles, faintly flicker and fade out.

The silver beams now turn to crimson, flaming blushes in the sky
Usher in day's lordly monarch, and turn the gates of heaven awry.

And from my cottage window, fragrant field or terraced lawn,
I with joy await the sunrise, as the day
awaits the dawn.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"I advertised that the poor would be welcome in this church," said the minister, "and after inspecting the collection, I see that they have come."—Boston Transcript.

"Jack, have you ever loved before?
"My dear girl, I'll be perfectly frank with you. I've been engaged so many times that my ex-fiancees have perfected an organization and adopted a yell."—Wall Street Journal.

Our Mayor (after a banquet)—Where's the mayor of Frumpton live?
Our Constable—But you are the mayor, your worship.
Our Mayor—Yesh, I know—but where's I live?—Opinion.

"So you got a big fine for smashing up some one's car? I thought you said you had a friend in court who would fix things up for you?"
"Just my luck. He was the fellow I ran into."—Judge.

A couple of rival but friendly shopkeepers were talking things over.
"When does your opening sale close?" asked the first.
"When our closing sale opens," the second replied.—American Legion Monthly.

The cadets were lined up on the field for inspection, and as the commandant strode down the line he stopped suddenly before one young man and said: "You remind me a great deal of General Grant."
"Really, sir?" responded the cadet eagerly.
"Yes, he didn't shave, either!"—Christian Science Monitor.

A colored gentleman who appeared in court as a witness was asked:
"What is your name?"
"Calhoun Jefferson, sah."
"Can you sign your name?"
"Sah?"
"I ask if you can write your name."
"Well, no sah. Ah nebber writes my name, Ah dictates it, sah."—Kreolite News.

"My face and body were full of pimples. They were hard and red, and burned so that I had to scratch. Scratching made them worse and caused the trouble to spread. They were very painful.
"I used all kinds of remedies but they did not help me. I read an advertisement for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. It helped the pimples so I purchased more, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Louis Loofer, 2222 South 8th St., Phila., Pa., March 14, 1929.

NEW LONDON NEWSBOY TAKES PURSE WITH $85, HIDING IT IN FIELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18.—A newsboy, residing on Crystal avenue, but about 11 years of age, was arrested tonight by Sergeant John Courtney, charged with theft. The boy was taken in charge by Probation Officer Richard W. Manafield and will be in the juvenile court during the week. The youth delivered a paper at the home of Mrs. Grant, 47 Church street, about 6 o'clock. Mrs. Grant was in another room and when the boy espied her pocketbook, which contained $85, on the kitchen table the temptation was too great for him and he took the purse and money. A short time afterwards the theft was discovered and relatives of Mrs. Grant sought to locate the youth. After a search of an hour the boy was found. He admitted taking the pocketbook and took his apprehender to where he had secreted the money in a field. The money being found and the boy returned to the Church street house, the boy was turned over to the custody of Sergeant Courtney.

OBITUARY

Louis Rieger

Louis Rieger, 72, well known Waterford farmer, died this afternoon at his home after a lingering illness. He is survived by three sons, Louis, Fred and John Rieger and by a daughter, Miss Rose Rieger. Mr. Rieger was well known in this vicinity. Until about a year ago he was apparently in perfect health.

Repeated His Offense

Louis Ramistella, 33 Spring street, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolman Edward Skoczylas charged with parking overtime on State street. Ramistella was arrested last Saturday for the same offense and because of that fact a bond of $5 was exacted of him, instead of the customary bond of $2, for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the return of the drivers' licenses of John Harold Smith, submarine base, and James F. Romano, 18 Belden street. Both licenses were suspended within a week.

Five cases tonight await trial in the police court tomorrow. One of the men will also be charged with breach of the peace and another with breach of the peace and resisting an officer. The latter was arrested on State street after engaging in a fight and when being locked up by Patrolman Edward Skoczylas he attacked the officer. The attack, however, was of short duration for the fellow, a stranger, was landed in a cell in quicker time than it takes to tell it and in no gentle manner.

CONDITION OF DEPRAVITY BROUGHT OUT BY TESTIMONY

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, Sept. 18—John Migo, 23, of 17 New street, employed at the Ship & Engine company plant as an iron worker, and Pearl Carrier, 17, of 261 Franklin street, Norwich, were in the police court today charged with lascivious carriage. The case against Migo was continued until the 23rd inst., and that of the Carrier girl was continued to Oct. 18. In the meantime the Carrier girl is in the custody of her mother, who came to New London today and took charge of the girl, who is in a delicate condition.

The arrest of the young man and girl resulted last night and was a sequence of the arraignment in court yesterday of a girl of 14, residing in Massachusetts and Frank Antoniac, Jordan Village, Waterford, the former charged with larcivious carriage and the latter with rape. The girl is in the custody of her parents, who came here seeking her. Antoniac is a prisoner at the county jail in default of $5,000 bail, awaiting trial in the superior court.

The Massachusetts girl went to Norwich about a month ago to visit the Carrier girl. While in that city, it is claimed, the Carrier girl induced the visiting girl to go with her to New London where they would meet Antoniac and Migo. When the girls met the youths, which was about three weeks ago, the quartette entered an automobile and went to New Haven, where they remained three days and nights, which time was spent in the automobile. Upon their return to New London the two young men and girls went to the home of Nicola Canozza, 29 Truman street. He provided them with sleeping accommodations and the following night Antoniac and Migo and the two girls went to the home of Frank Piscitella, 39 Truman street, where they resided about two weeks as man and wife. Recently the parents of the Massachusetts girl ascertained that their daughter was in New London and requested the state police to apprehend her. This was done Monday night when Officer Peter Bush arrested the girl and Antoniac. When the case was in court yesterday the girl made known her relations with Antoniac, also the relations of Migo and the Carrier girl. This resulted in the arrest of Migo yesterday by Officer Bush and Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh. After the arrest of Migo, he made it known that he had an appointment with the Carrier girl at 8 o'clock and the officers accompanied him to the meeting place, where she was arrested.

Later Canozza and Mrs. Piscitella were arrested charged with keeping a house for purposes of prostitution. Today when they were tried in court Canozza pleaded guilty, but the woman pleaded not guilty. Canozza was fined $25 and costs. Mrs. Piscitella, who was adjudged guilty upon the evidence introduced, was fined $50 and costs.

MISS BENJAMIN'S CAR, NORWICH, STRUCK BY COACH

An automobile owned by Miss Grace Benjamin, 110 Washington street, Norwich, and driven by George E. Gross, 490 Main street, the same city, and a car owned and driven by John Tarnowski, of Colchester, collided at that place last night. Both cars were damaged and although Tarnowski's auto overturned, the driver escaped with injuries no more serious than bruises. Both automobiles were proceeding northerly on the Hartford turnpike about 7 o'clock. Miss Benjamin's Nash sedan, preceded Tarnowski's Chevrolet coach. When the auto driven by Gross was guided so as to attempt to make a left turn near the "Come on Inn," the car driven by Tarnowski skidded and struck the Nash. Continuing to skid the Chevrolet finally left the concrete and overturned. The state police barracks, Groton, were notified of the accident and Officer Murphy investigated. The officer decided that the accident was the result of weather conditions and that neither driver had been guilty of reckless driving, so no arrest was made.

It is the first time in many years that Noank has had a resident aspiring to the office of selectman on the democratic ticket. Mr. Brown, who is employed by the Standard Oil company, will have as an opponent Clark B. Whaley, who has held the office many years.

Mrs. Carter, who sustained lacerations of the scalp, was taken to Lawrence-Memorial hospital, where her wounds were dressed. She will be a patient there indefinitely.

New Haven Man Caught

William Steele, New Haven, will be tried in Waterford town court Monday next charged with speeding and driving with improper markers. Steele was arrested Aug. 31 by State Police Officer John Smith and was ordered to present himself in court Sept. 2. This he failed to do, so yesterday when the officer found Steele in this city, he rearrested him and taking the New Haven man before Prosecuting Attorney Leon Beisheim, Groton town court, Steele was compelled to post a cash bond of $35 for his court appearance.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the suspension of the drivers' licenses of Herman A. Sheriff, 36 Reed street; Mrs. Ralph Tashea, alias Erma Dittmar, 613 Main street and 120 Bayonet street; Henrick V. Schreurs, U. S. S. Monaghan and Leslie P. Grosch, U. S. S. Davis.

Broadway Theatre

Rising to dramatic heights never before reached in screen or stage drama, Walter Huston reaches the peak of his career in the wonderful all-talking picture "The Lady Lies," which opens at the Broadway today. In a drama so smart and sophisticated as to be daring, Huston with his charming partner, Claudette Colbert, sweeps the gamut of every human emotion, from laughter to tears, from passion to despair, in a manner to captivate every audience. A wealthy corporation lawyer, tired of the humdrum of legal practice, succumbing to the lure of a lovely woman, is no new theme, but there the plot stops and the actual living of the story by the characters begins. Life in the raw, with dialog that crackles with its intensity, and situations that thrill with their realness, guarantee a successful run for this remarkable picture, which so stirred the blase New York critics that they had no criticism other than unbounded praise. The tenseness of the drama is relieved by the dignified inebriety of Charles Ruggles, as Huston's "drinking partner," and in the former's tilts with his bonde inamorata. There are two youngsters in the cast who come near to stealing the honors from Mr. Huston and Miss Colbert, despite the clever work of the two stars. They are Tommy Browne and Patricia Deering, who as Huston's "film children," try their best to break up their daddy's infatuation, in the headlong way of youth, and who find themselves more and more deeply entangled in their own web. Smart, peppy, almost daring, yet without a trace of scurdidness, "The Lady Lies" will make its mark as the outstanding drama of the present season. The surrounding bill includes the All-Girl Revue, a snappy singing and dancing act, McKay and Ardine in a clever song-fest, and the Palm Beach Four, masters of the steel guitar, and stars of the Helen Morgan Night club in N. Y. The latest Fox Movietone news completes the program.

Louis Rapoport of this city has sold to Francis and Emily Allen his property located at No. 17 Asylum street, consisting of an eight room cottage, all modern with two baths.

The new owners will occupy it in the near future. The sale was negotiated through the real estate agency of Mrs. Rosa E. Burton.

Ray Becket of Providence will bring the talent for the show and that means that the acts will all be winners. She has learned how to keep clothes new looking twice as long

(the same way the movies do)

"I DO have more pretty clothes now, though I don't spend any more than I used to. The reason is, I've discovered how to keep everything I wear like new so much longer. Instead of spending all my money just to replace things that look old and shabby too quickly, now I can buy extra clothes.

"I learned the secret by reading about the movies—how they keep screen clothes just like new twice as long by always washing them in Lux. Since then, I've used Lux for all my things—stockings, undies, gloves, sweaters, dresses.

"It's perfectly marvelous what a difference this makes. All my clothes look like new so much longer. Now, I don't have to spend every cent just replacing worn-outs. I can afford luxuries."

You, too, can have the same wonderful results with Lux . . . keep all your clothes new looking far, far longer . . .

Then your clothes money won't all go into replacing worn-outs—you can afford so many extra nice things!

JANET GAYNOR, Fox Star. Her studio, like all the big studios, uses Lux "to keep clothes like new twice as long."

As it has been found impossible, because of lack of time to make a stop before every store where there is a window disulay, it has been decided to make periodic stops along the line of march so as to include a group of stores under each stop, and the band will play while the narade makes a halt of a few minutes. The line of march is to be from Preston bridge, through Main street to Franklin square, up Franklin street to Willow street, through Willow street to Broadway, down Broadway to Main, through Main to Washington square, down Water street to Shetucket, through Shetucket to Main and back again through Main to the starting point. SEES PROSPECTS FOR REDISTRICTING THE STATE

There does not seem to be much doubt that steps will be taken at the next session of the general assembly to redistrict the state, according to the opinion of a Hartford paper. The necessity is recognized but the constitutional and statutory questions involved make it no easy matter to effect a settlement that would be acceptable to the people of the state. The question was the subject of conversation at the capitol this week. The main difficulty was in the case of the 26th district which, with its population of nearly 63,000, made up of the towns of Stamford and Greenwich, is the largest district in the state. There are conditions in the constitution such as that which is expressed in the term "contiguous territory" that created a difficulty peculiar to this district which it was impossible to overcome without making changes in the constitution, according to the opinion expressed.

Those who were in the conversation were reminded that the people of the state, by their vote in rejecting the new constitution recommended by the last constitutional convention, indicated that they did not look with favor on attempts to change the constitution. It has been suggested that the people would not be so much opposed to particular changes in the constitution that might be committed to them by the general assembly for the purpose of solving problems in the makeup of the senate, based on constitutional provisions.

KEEP POST OFFICE INFORMED OF CHANGE OF ADDRESS

Mail delivery will be greatly facilitated, and prompt delivery of mail to new addresses assured, if the public will notify the post office immediately of changes in address, it was pointed out Wednesday by Postmaster Casper R. Bailey. Many persons are ignorant of the easy method of notifying the postal authorities of changed addresses, he said.

To notify the post office of a change in address, blanks may be secured from the carriers, and will be returned to the office by them after the new and old addresses have been noted. These blanks may also be filled out at the post office, but telephone notices of changed addresses will not be accepted. The information may be mailed to the post office on an ordinary post card or by letter, if it is not convenient to secure the official blanks.

TRY THESE CARROTS FOR JADED APPETITES

Hard to Resist the Flavor When Cooked This Appetizing Way

A well-known woman cooking authority, realizing the importance of vegetables in the diet, has worked out this new recipe for Flemish Carrots:

Scrape 18 young carrots and slice lengthwise into thin strips like matches. Melt 6 tablespoons butter. Add carrots, 1 tablespoon sugar, 1 teaspoon of chopped parsley, and salt. Cover the pan and let simmer until tender, about 20 minutes, turning frequently with a spoon. Add cream, stir well, heat and serve.

Remember the importance of vegetable foods in the daily diet, and profit by the old secret rediscovered by four famous women cooking experts. Add a dash of sugar to each vegetable while it is cooking. The little sugar works wonders for freshness, color and taste.

Sugar is the supreme condiment for developing the delicate, natural flavors of fruits and vegetables so that children and adults will be tempted to eat variety. The balanced diet is so important in promoting health that it is well to serve stewed and fresh fruits daily. If your family does not drink enough milk, serve milk shakes, eggnogs and milk desserts, such as junkets and custards. Add a dash of sugar to cooking cereal to develop its flavor. Serve cakes and cookies containing chocolate or cocoanut, ices and ice creams, canned berries and fruits, or candy for dessert. A bit of sweet makes the meal complete. The Sugar Institute.

53 SHIPS DECOMMISSIONED BY NAVY DEPARTMENT ORDER

The Order is Confined to Destroyers of the Battle and Scouting Fleets—Action Taken Because of Unsatisfactory Boilers and Engines—President Hoover Will Select an Outstanding Democrat to Participate in Naval Limitation Conference.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19 —(AP)— Fifty-three destroyers now in active service with the battle and scouting fleets soon are to be decommissioned for eventual sale or scrapping.

Built during the war, the ships were considered unsatisfactory from the beginning by the navy and after ten years of hard service of repair of their engines and boilers is deemed uneconomical. Today they were ordered decommissioned.

Their passing was recorded today in navy orders which showed they will be replaced from among the 159 destroyers tied up at San Diego and Philadelphia since the war. Because the ships being taken out will eventually be removed from the navy list, America's present large destroyer preponderance over Great Britain, 262 ships against 184, will be materially reduced.

The destroyers at San Diego and Philadelphia have been maintained in good condition. Squadrons eleven and twelve of the battle fleet, less the squadron leaders Decatur and Litchfield, will be tied up at San Diego and squadrons six and ten will take their places.

Squadron nine of the shooting fleet and the experimental ship Converse will be decommissioned at Philadelphia and replaced by squadron seven The Dallas, squadron leader, will remain with the fleet.

DEMOCRAT WILL FIGURE IN NAVAL CONFERENCE

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—(AP)—Selection of an outstanding democrat as a member of the American delegation to the proposed January naval limitation conference is one of the tasks President Hoover will have in preparing for American participation in the five-power parley.

In all international conferences of such importance the administration has accorded the minority party in this country representation among the American delegates. This is particularly important in the present situation because the president will have to rely on democratic support to obtain senate ratification of any treaty that may grow out of the meeting. In the 1921 naval conference, President Harding found little difficulty in making a selection. Washington was the meeting place and he was able to appoint the late Oscar W. Underwood, then democratic leader in the senate, as the minority representative on the commission even though congress was in session.

At the time of the London conference, the 71st congress will be in the midst of its first regular session. Since the 1930 naval meeting is expected to consume upwards of six weeks there is doubt whether the present democratic leader of the senate, Robinson of Arkansas, or any of the other ranking democratic senators, would feel that they could absent themselves from the senate for so long a period.

Should that prove the case, Mr. Hoover would have to look elsewhere for the democratic member. John W. Davis, ambassador to Great Britain, under Woodrow Wilson and democratic presidential candidate in 1924, is one of those whose name has been brought into the unofficial discussions. Secretary Stimson may head the delegation.

MERGER CREATES CHAIN OF 100 BRANCH BANKS IN N. Y.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 (AP)—The concentration of banking activity notable during the past year, moved forward a pace today. A union of the National City bank and Corn Exchange Bank Trust Co., created a system of more than 100 branch banks in the New York metropolitan area, was arranged, and the directors of the bank of the Manhattan Co., disclosed a plan to form a holding company under its charter of 1799, which may be used as the nucleus of an extensive chain or group of banks.

The acquisition of the Corn Exchange by the National City places the latter pe-eminently in the lead in what Wall street has been disposed to regard as a contest for position of largest bank in American. National city has total resources of somewhat more than $2,000,000,000, while the Guaranty Trust Co., which acquired the National Bank of Commerce this year, now has resources of nearly $2,000,000,000. Acquisition of the Corn Exchange will give the National City Exchange will nearly $2,500,000,00. Directors of both banks have approved the merger, and it only awaits approval of the stockholders, which Wall street believes will be eagerly granted.

Stockholders of the three banks involved in the day's news stand to profit all around. National City stock has risen $22 a share during the past week to $500. An announcement of the merger plan, Corn Exchange stock, which will be exchanged for National city on the basis of four-fifths of a share of the latter for one share of Corn Exchange, rose $65, a share to $390 bid, $410 asked. The reorganization of the Bank of Manhatta Co. contemplates splitting the stock five-for-one and offering stockholders rights to purchase the new stock at $120 a share in the ratio of one additional new share for each six held. This constitutes cutting a melon of approximately $17,000,000.

MRS. PAUL F. MOORE ASKS FOR A SEPARATION

NEW YORK, Sept. 19 &—Filing of a suit for separation from his wife by Paul Frederick Moore of Springfield, Mass., vice president of the Westfield River Paper mills at Russell, Mass., was revealed today.

In a counterclaim Mrs. Katherine Sanford Moore, a graduate of Smith college in the class of 1922, states her abandonment of her husband on May 3 last, was justified denies all accusations made in her husband's suit, and asks a separation on the ground of cruelty.

Existence of the court action was disclosed when an order permitting Mrs. Moore to withdraw a motion for alimony and counsel fees was filed.

In an affidavit Mrs. Moore stated that she now lives in Cleveland, O., and that her husband had falsely accused her of maintaining an improper correspondence with Mrs. Ruth King Bordner, a booking agent for Cleveland theatrical performers.

DISPUTE IN COUNCIL OF LEAGUE OF NATIONS

GENEVA, Sept. 19. (AP)—A hot dispute took place in the council of the League of Nations today over whether a conference on the treatment of immigrants, called for November 5, should be held in Paris or Geneva, Latin American members of the council united in favoring Paris and finally won their point with the provision that the meeting should be held there if the funds of the league would permit the added expense.

Dr. Carl Von Schubert, German representative of the council, reported unfavorably on the Latin American proposal of the French capital as a meeting place. He said the change would entail extra work on the secretariat of the league and that it would mean an added expense of $10,000 to $14,000.

Mariano Cornejo, the new Peruvian member of the council, said he failed to understand why there should be so much added cost. He and Cesar Zumeta of Venezuela argued that it was very difficult for South Americans, who mostly reside in Paris to come to Geneva for three or four weeks in November.

When Dr. Von Schubert insisted on the meetings being held in Geneva, Aguero y. Bethancourt of Cuba hinted that unless the change were made in the plans, Latin Americans would remain away.

LONGER SESSIONS OF SENATE ON TARIFF BILL

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19. —(AP) — Senate republicans, anxious to get the tariff out of the way before the regular session in December, agreed in party conference today to have the senate meet an hour earlier than the usual noon convening time beginning Monday.

The majority senators also listened to a plea by Senator Watson of Indiana, the party leader, that they buckle down to the task of disposing of the issue in the quickest possible time.

Should progress still be delayed after a trial of the 11 o'clock meeting hour, it is planned to propose night sessions or to convene at 10 o'clock in the morning.

Announcement of the conference action coincided with the disclosure that the finance committee republicans would agree to the elimination of two highly controversial provisions from the pending bill.

Gov. F. D. Sampson Of Kentucky Indicted

FRANKFORD, KY., Sept. 19.(AP)—Indictments charging Governor Flem D. Sampson and seven members of the state textbook commission with "unlawfully receiving gifts" from publishing companies were returned here today by the Franklin county grand jury which has been investigating state affairs for three weeks.

The alleged gifts were specified as "a great number of common school textbooks, the exact number, description and time thereof unknown to the grand jury." The books were alleged to have been accepted from eight firms which were seeking to have texts published by them adopted for use in the Kentucky public schools.

Under the statute creating the textbook commission and making the governor its exofficio chairman, a penalty of a fine not exceeding $1,000 and imprisonment of not more than six months in the county jail is provided for a person convicted of receiving "any proterty of value" from a firm qualified to bid on furnishing books for the public schools which is seeking to have its books adopted by the commission.

The jury made it clear that the report was not a complete one and Judge Ben G. Williams granted it another week which to complete its investigations, which have dealt with half a dozen state departments.

Sampson was alleged to have received books from Ginn & Company the others indicted firms mentioned in connection with each were: Frank V. McChesney (Cap C), American book Company; K. R. Cummins, Silver-Burdette Company; Samuel Walker, D. C. Heath Company; W. R. McCoy (Cap C), Laidlow Company; Miss Delphia Evans, McMillan Company; Robert J. Nickel, Houghton-Miffen Company; Mrs. George R. Smith, Lyons-Carnahan Company.

McChesney and Sampson have been unfriendly for several weeks, the governor having made an effort to put McChesney off the commision. McChesney appealed to the courts and won the case.

The indictments followed months of unsuccessful efforts to adopt books for the schools for the current year.

Sampson, a republican, was elected in 1927 after a champaign in which W. G. Clyde, president of the Carnegie Steel company, of Pennsylvania, are the men to be honored.

BANK ROBBER KILLED IN EFFORT TO ESCAPE

LOCKHAVEN, Pa., Sept. 19.—(AP)—While state police were reported closing in on at least two of his companions, one of the four robbers who held up the Beech Creek National bank near here today at noon, died tonight a victim of his own efforts at escape.

The robber who succumbed in a Bellefonte hospital to injuries suffered in the wrecking of the automobile in which he and two others sped away from the scene of the robbery gave his name as George Williams, 29, of Pittsburgh.

Although deserted by his two pals after the accident, Williams declined to reveal their identities. He suffered a crushed chest and internal injuries in the crash.

Williams and three companions robbed the cashier of the bank of about $12,000. All the missing money except about $275 was found on Williams' clothing and police believe he was the leader of the gang.

He was captured by Dr. George F. Tibbens, brother of the bank's president, McDowell Tibbens and Frank Williams of Howard, Centre county. They had exchanged shots with the speeding bandit car before it was wrecked.

The four robbers traveling in a large automobile stopped and robbed Milton Sykes between this city and Beech Creek. They took his car and $17 in cash. After questioning him about the Beech Creek bank they tied him to a tree and drove off, three in his machine and one in their own car.

Protests Shelling By Coast Guardmen

Halifax Action Has Been Reported to Present Case For Nova Scotia Vessel Shawnee.

HALIFAX, Sept. 19 (AP)—A story of the shelling of a Canadian motorship by a United States coast guard cutter, off New York, was told today and confirmed in part in Washington, and within several hours counsel had been engaged to file formal protest to the Canadian overnment.

After Captain John McLeod, of the Nova Scotian ship, Shawnee, brought his vessel into port bearing the scars of two shells, announcement was made that a local law firm had been retained to act for McLeod before the authorities at Ottawa. Meanwhile in Washington the headquarters of the coast guard said the Shawnee had been shelled but the coast guard statement was at variance with McLeod's data of the encounter and contradicted his assertion that no warning to stop had been given.

Coast guard boat No. 145, said McLeod, came up to the Shawnee 26 miles off New York last Friday night and approaching it with all lights out to within ten yards of the Canadian craft, fired five four pound shots without warning. Two shots hit one piercing the stern port quarter and the other striking the rail on the wheelhouse. The Shawnee's crew of six escaped injury. After the shelling, McLeod asked the identity of the motorship, and the skipper said the reply was "Well you should know."

The cutter's searchlight swept the Shawnee and the cutter radio man summoned the coast guard vessel Gresham. The Shawnee went to sea and for four hours was followed by the Gresham, which was relieved by another boat on Saturday noon. The Shawnee left the consort behind that night.

McLeod said his ship was bound from Bermuda to Halifax in ballast and was showing all lights when the 145 appeared. Then the Canadian ensign was run up to the mast head. McLeod said, but still the cutter opened fire.

McLeod said he could give no reason for the attack. Washington advices said the coast guard had listed the Shawnee as a rum runner which had been watched by the American rum chasers.

The coast guard statement said the Shawnee was running without lights and appeared to be an American craft. There was no name on the stern to identify her, the coast guard reported, but as the ship proceeded coast guardsmen made out the name Shawnee on her bow. The vessel was allowed to proceed.

JURY DEADLOCKED IN CASE OF MRS. ROGERS

NEW BEAUNFELS, Tex., Sept. 19 —(AP)—Although the jury which tried Mrs. Rebecca Bradley Rogers for the robbery with firearms in connection with the Buda bank robbery of 1926 reported for the second time late today that it was hopelessly deadlocked, Judge John Watson ordered the jurors to continue deliberations.

Judge Watson indicated he would keep the jury tonight and probably tomorrow in an effort to obtain a verdict.

He said the trial of the former university of Texas coed had cost the county approximately $1,500 and he intended to obtain a verdict if possible.

Earlier in the day the foreman of the jury reported the jury hopelessly deadlocked. He said each juror had a different opinion of the guilt of the defendant, who pleaded temporary insanity.

This is the fourth trial of Mrs. Rogers since she flourished a gun in the face of officials of the Farmers National bank of Buda, herded them into a vault and escaped wiht $1,000.

The resolution consenting to ratification stipulated that the United States construed the treaty to impose no restrictions upon a nation's right to exclude prison made products or those made by slaves.

LOW TEMPERATURES FOR DATE IN SEVERAL STATES

Frost Was Noticeable in New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts—Low Temperatures For Sept. 19 Were Broken in Buffalo and Boston—In Boston the Reading Was 42, Two Below the Record Set in 1875.

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—The persistently torrid heat of summer today gave way to frost.

After unseasonable hot, humid weather in the eastern states, the temperature tumbled suddenly overnight and several North Atlantic states this morning reported new low temperatures for the date.

Frost was noticeable in New York, New Jersey and Massachusetts, and in New York city, Buffalo and Boston the record low temperature for September 19, was broken. The temperature went to 44 degrees in New York city, one degree below a record of 54 years standing; Buffalo thermometers recorded 40, and in Boston the reading was 42, two below the record set in 1875.

A week ago, the North Atlantic states were sweltering, and everywhere mid-summer modes were in fashion. Last night and today, however, topcoats and other heavier clothing appeared—to stay until tomorrow, at least, if the prediction of the weather bureau is heeded.

SESSION OF COURT WAS HELD ALOFT IN AIRPLANE

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—A strange court flew over Jamaica Bay today, the judge and his attendants sitting in the passenger seats and the defendant, who is charged with manslaughter, silently pleading his case at the controls.

Ten days ago William Alexander brought his transport seaplane down in the surf at Coney Island, where it mowed through bathers and overturned on the beach after killing two children and injuring a dozen other persons.

He pleaded in court today that the plane had not responded when he "kicked the stick" in an effort to swerve away from the bathers.

It was too technical for Magistrate Leo Healy and he ordered court adjourned to the sky, that the prisoner might demonstrate just what he meant.

The same ship that figured in the accident was used, Alexander took it up, Magistrate Healy sat in the front seat, there were also present in the aerial court an official stenographer, a detective representing the district attorney, the defense lawyer, and two guests of the judge.

Alexander brought the plane down on the water just beyond the breakers at Coney, showing the judge that at the reduced speed necessary for alighting the rudder was not quickly effective if a sudden turn in the air was desired.

The court session in the air lasted half an hour, the judge then reserving decision until next Thursday, when he will hand down an opinion. It was his first ride in a plane, but he showed no nervousness except on the occasion of a steep bank just before landing, and said he had enjoyed the experience.

The court stenographer, also a novice in the air, took notes during the ride which the magistrate said would be incorporated in the record of the case. They consisted largely of notations of height and speed and comments on the weather. The stenographer showed more nervousness than the magistrate and at one point shouted: "If I ever set down out of this, judge, I'll kiss you." When the flight was over, however, she apparently had reconsidered this decision.

"HUMAN CANNONBALL" SEVERELY INJURED

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Sept. 19—(AP)—Captain Wilno, celebrated "human cannonball" who has been appearing at the Eastern States Exposition, during this week, was injured, probably fatally, late this afternoon, when he failed to come out of the cannon at the explosion of the powder charge. He was removed to Springfield hospital where his condition was described as grave.

Thousands of spectators who filled the grandstand at the race track, were horrified when after the explosion, Captain Wilno slowly appeared at the mouth of the gun and hung by his heels with blood streaming from his face. An attempt was made to lower the gun but Captain Wilno dropped to the ground before anyone could catch him. The emergency service of the exposition immediately got into action but little could be done before removing Captain Wilno to the hospital.

The police ambulance arrived within five minutes after the alarm. His face was terribly mangled and he was hardly recognizable. This is the first serious accident that has occurred during the 1929 exposition.

PEACOX CASE DEVELOPS INTO "MOTIVELESS MURDER"

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Sept. 19—(AP)—The admitted slaying of Dorothy Peacox by her husband, who set her body afire after it had lain in a thicket for six days, seemed today to have developed into a "motiveless murder."

District Attorney Frank H. Coyne asked for the death penalty for Earl F. Peacox in his opening statement to the jury, but nowhere in his address did he mention motive. He said he would prove that the 21 year old radio technician had strangled his wife to death on the first anniversary of their marriage, but he made no promise to show why.

Sydney A. Syme, chief of defense counsel, made a point of this in his opening, which immediately followed the prosecutor's saying that the only possible motive in view of Coyne's outline of the state's case was a desire on the part of Peacox to be rid of his wife.

MAN RELEASED ON BAIL SHOT DEAD IN STREET FIGHT

ALBANY, N. Y., Sept. 19—(AP)—Leonard Leone, 32, of thos city, was shot and fatally wounded late today in a street fight here several hours after he had been released on bail on a charge of complicity in a $19,000 robbery at East Boston, Mass., two months ago.

Joseph Rappazzo, arrested in a basement store into which Leone fled before he was shot in the neck, wrist and left side, was held by police for questioning.

Police said a fist fight between Leone and his slayer preceded the shooting. Detective John J. Metz, in a restaurant, heard a shot, ran out and saw a man he declared to be Rappazzo passing Leone. The pursuer, said the detective fired another shot and Leone ducked into the basement store. Metz said he arrested Rappazzo as the latter backed out of the store with a gun in his hand.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR COOLIDGE-TRUMBULL WEDDING MONDAY

PLAINVILLE, Sept. 19—(AP)—With virtually all other details of the wedding of Miss Florence Trumbull to Major John Coolidge, son of former President Coolidge, completed, the family of Gov. John H. Trumbull, the bride-to-be's father, busied itself tonight with arrangements for the handling of transportation of guests and wedding day traffic in this seat of the trumbull home.

Gov. Trumbull has arranged to have 22 state policemen to handle the traffic next Monday afternoon, the time of the wedding. Automobiles will be so routed that when the wedding party is traveling from the Trumbull home to the Plainville Congregational church and when it is returning to the home for the reception that will follow the ceremony, there will be one-way traffic along Main street, the city's leading thoroughfare. The trip each way will take about 20 minutes, according to calculations.

South-bound cars bringing guests to the weddine and the executive mansion will be parked in a lot east of the mansion, while north-bound guest vehicles will be parked in a lot north of the home.

Cars parked in both areas will be given individual numbers so that when the time comes for departure of the guests each will be called to the Trumbull doorway in numerical order. Only two cars, Gov. Trumbull's and former President Coolidge's will be allowed in the driveway to the house during the wedding and reception periods.

The former President and Mrs. Coolidge are expected to arrive at the Trumbull home early Monday afternoon, at least three or four hours before the ceremony.

SMALL RECOVERY FOR NEW YORK BANKERS

NEW YORK, Sept. 19.—(AP)—Federal bank inspectors today indicated that New York bankers will recover only a small part of the half million dollars which they lost through recent fraudulent manipulations by Charles D. Wagonner, small town banker from Colorado.

All but $100,000 of the $500,000 which Waggoner obtained through fake coded telegrams and cashiers' checks is in past recovery, inspectors said, as title to the money had passed to private individuals.

This theory, they said, is based on information given them by Amelia and Margaret Jones, nieces of Waggoner, president of the Bank of Telluride, Colo., who is under indictment for mail fraud in connection with his financial coup.

The bankers had held to the hope that Waggoner had not realized any cash upon the certified checks he obtained from the six financial houses here.

WINDHAM'S SCHOOL COST ONE OF LOWEST IN STATE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, Sept. 19.—The cost per pupil in both the elementary schools and high school of the town of Windham was the lowest in the state with but one or two exceptions, according to the statistics contained in the extensive annual report of School Secretary Egbert A. Case. The report was accepted in its entirety by the school committee at the monthly meeting held Wednesday evening when the 1929-'30 budget of $200,000 was also approved.

The report of the committee as a whole shows that as in years past, the schools have been financed strictly within the limits of the budget. Satisfactory progress has been made in the schools, justifying the new features introduced for the first time. The efficient work of the school nurse has proved that no school system should be without this type of service. The report continues in part: "The state trade school has a registration of over 100, of whom 50 are from Willimantic. If this relief had not come the high school would have been crowded beyond the working limit. The increased salary schedule has made it possible to retain most of our experienced and successful teachers, there being only two changes in the high school and two in the grades.

"It is gratifying to the committee that they were given the money and authority to make desirable changes at North Windham. Our schools have been conducted so economically in the past that new needs must be met by new appropriation. Next year's budget calls for $200,000, but anticipates an income which reduces the requirements of local taxation to $186,000. We fail to find any city in the state that conducts a school system of our size with so small a burden to the local taxpayer." The report closed with an expression of regret in the loss of James L. Harroun, late principal of the Natchaug grammar school.

The actual income for last year as shown in the secretary's report was as follows: High school tuition, Andover, $1,436; Ashford, $292; Chaplin, $952; Columbia, $1,650; Coventry, $2,-160; Eastford, $110; Franklin, $460; Hampton, $2,468; Hebron, $4,331; Mansfield, $10,021; Scotland, $1,493; Sprague, $1,024; Willington, $2,302; tuition paid by parents, $132; total, $29,683.64; grade school tuition, Lebanon, $320; tuition paid by parents, $485; total $805, state enumeration grant, $7,562.25; library grant, $130; evening school grant, $302.35; total $7,994.50; town deposit and local school fund, $405.76, refunds on trolley books, $97.45; rental, $50; local taxation, $151,878.45; grand total, $191,000.

The proposed budget of $200,000 for next year would be used as follows: General control, $4,500; instruction, $103,755; operation of school plant, $18,285; maintenance of school plant, $6,260; capital outlay, $2,550; auxiliary agencies, $9,825; Model school tuition, $52,500; contigent fund, $2,-175. Increases are noted in the contingent fund, instruction, operation and maintenance of the school plant. There was no contingent fund maintained last year and none was needed but it is considered good fortune rather than skill in management when nearly a million dollars worth of buildings do not require some unexpected expense. An estimated increase of $3,000 is expected in tuition income.

Sister M. Onuphrie (McGuinness), one of the most highly esteemed and beloved sisters of St. Joseph's convent, died there Wednesday night at the age of 73 years. She had been ill for about eight months. Her death ended 51 years of service with the local convent, she having entered the religious service 56 years ago. Sister Onuphrie was born in England, March 16, 1856, and after her schooling entered the institution of the Sisters of Charity of Our Lady Mother of Mercy at Tilburg, Holland, on March 19, 1872. With five sisters of the order she came to Willimantic in the spring of 1878, the group becoming the first teachers of the present St. Joseph's parochial school which was opened under direction of the late Rev. Florimond DeBruycker. Untiringly and patiently, Sister Onuphrie devoted over 40 years of her life to the education of the boys and girls of the parish and hundreds of them will ever cherish her in memory. Upon the opening of St. Joseph's hospital, Sister Onuphrie was placed in charge of the office work and in that capacity she met with kindly smile and friendly word the sick and the afflicted. Her survivors are two brothers, Thomas and John McGuinness, a sister-in-law, Mrs. J. McGuinness, one niece and two nephews, all of Melbourne, Australia.

She was born in New Hartford, June 14, 1874, a daughter of Joseph Desmarais. Surviving her are two sons, Henry Roberts of this city and David of South Coventry, and one daughter, Mrs. Marguerite Perkins of Mansfield Depot.

SCHOOLGIRLS' FRIENDSHIP RECALLS ANCIENT SONGBOOKS

Close to 50 years ago, the late Charles Edward Prior and the late Rev. Charles W. Ray, D. D., were associated in the publication of a number of song books. Among these were two of special merit, "Spicy Breezes" and "Sparkling and Bright". Both these men were one time residents of Jewett City. Within a week, these two men's sons, Harry Ray of Chicago and C. E. Prior, Jr., of Bridgeport, were callers in the borough, where both were born. By a coincidence, the two daughters of the second generation, Miss Elizabth Prior of Bridgport, and Miss Ray, of Chicago, were classmates last year at the famous Emma Willard preparatory school, Troy, N. Y. The school girl acquaintance of these two girls is not without unusual features, when it is considered that a half century ago their grandfathers published Sunday school song books in Jewett City.

Mrs. George H. Prior, president of the King's Daughters in Connecticut, and ex-international president, is in South Harpswell, Maine, where this (Friday) evening she will address the meeting of the state convention of King's Daughters of Maine.

MERCURY LOWERS TO 36— SOME FROST REPORTED

Along before sunrise Thursday morning the mercury touched the low mark of the season, dropping to 36. Partly overcast skies with a light breeze stirring all night, saved this section from a general frost, although light touches were reported in Lisbon and parts of Griswold. Following the low temperature of the night, the silver failed to get out of the lower 40's all day. Furnace fires were started all through the borough, while the ice men turned their attention to delivering hurry orders for wood and coal.

Last fall on the night of October 10th, a black frost in this section trimmed everything that was unprotected. The mercury fell to 31, with ice as thick as window glass, reported from numerous places in the borough.

Fresh native cabbage, 6 lbs. 25c; tomatoes, No. 2 can, 10c, $1.15 dozen; 66x80 cotton and part wool blankets, $1.98 and $3.98; 36-inch bleached outing flannel, 19c yard, are among the hundred specials offered at Dearnley's, Friday and Saturday.—adv.

The show down on the recent caucus results from the neighboring town of Lisbon presents some radical changes in political preferences. In both Griswold and Lisbon, for a dozen years, the meetings of the voters to select the names of town officials for nomination, have been scarcely attended and altogether perfunctory affairs. This fall, resembling the eruptions of a sleeping volcano, both towns developed political aspirations to an unusual degree, and Presto! the caucuses were crowded. When the votes were counted, astonishing choices were declared by the moderators.

AUTO CASES NOLLED PENDING DECISION BY COMMISSIONER

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, Sept. 19—When Henry A. Augur and William Deforest, both Webster public service car operators, were presented before Judge W. Fenner Woodward in the town court this morning, to answer to charges of violating a section of the motor vehicle laws of the state the cases were nolled. Augur and Deforest have been making daily trips between Webster and Danielson carrying operatives employed in one of the local mills of Powdrell and Alexander. It was charged against the taxi drivers that they were doing public service car work in Connecticut without having a Connecticut public service registration. While their cases were nolled this morning, the facts pertaining to them, as claimed by the state, will be presented to the commissioner of motor vehicles for a ruling. If he rules that Augur and Deforest were violating a section of the Connecticut motor vehicle laws in doing an interstate public service car business between Webster and Danielson, the cases likely will be reopened.

In a justice's court in Brooklyn last evening Burton Butts of Moosup was sentenced to serve 10 days in jail for operating a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of an intoxicant, the execution of the sentence being suspended. Verney Snyder, who was riding with Butts at the time the offence is charged to have occurred, operating over a week ago, was fined $2.00 and costs for intoxication. Snyder had a revolver in a holster belted bout his waist while riding with Butts. He had a state permit to carry this, so no charge was filed against him on account of his possession of the weapon, which he carried, he said to protect himself from possible holdups.

State Bank Commissioner Lester E. Shippee, whose parental home is in this town, where he began his banking career, will be in San Francisco the coming week attending the annual convention of the National Association of Supervisors of State Banks. The sessions of the convention are to open next Wednesday and continue for three days. Commissioner Shippee is to have a prominent part in the proceedings.

Thursday evening of next week the fifth anniversary of the dedication of the Baptist church building at the corner of Academy and Broad street will be observed with a special service. Rev. J. Walter Houck of the Pilgrim church in the Bronx section of New York is to preach the sermon. Rev. Mr. Houck is a former pastor of the church. Invitations have been extended to other former pastors to attend and some of them will arrange to be in attendance and it is hoped all of them will find it possible to attend. A history of the church during the past half century will be read by Deacon Frank T. Pressler and a prophecy read by the present pastor, Rev. Chester J. Armstrong. There will be a special musical program. Following the service in the auditorium there will be a friendly hour for social intercourse in the vestry. Music there will be by a string ensemble and refreshments are to be served.

Arthur A. Dean, clerk in the office of the board of selectmen and personal tax collector has prepared a highly interesting and instructive article dealing with uncollected taxes, which he describes as likely to be in many instances "uncorrected taxes." Mr. Dean sets forth in detail the difficulty, practically the impossibility, of making a grand list on which every dollar of its face value can be collected. He points out that the official removal of unwarranted charges which the process of collection brings to light, is a very necessary part of dealing with a list. Many of these unwarranted charges arise through the fact that so many automobiles are owned in the town. The motor vehicle departments furnishes a list of these from its records, but it so happens that many times between the time a car is registered with the state and the time when tax lists must be filed the car has changed ownership. Hence an error in the grand list. This is but one of various ways in what may be termed unavoidable errors occur.

Henry Boccali, 56, resident near South Killingly for several years, died during last night at the Day Kimball hospital, where he had been a patient to undergo a surgical operation. He was a native of Italy. He leaves a daughter, Miss Pauline Boccali, of Danielson. The body was taken in charge by Undertaker L. E. Kennedy and conveyed to his funeral home here.

Recently several members of Sarah Williams Danielson chapter, D. A. R., with a large delegation from Elizabeth Porter Putnam chapter, D. A. R., of Putnam made a pilgrimage to Old Deerfield, Mass. Their time there was devoted to viewing and inspecting colonial homes, calling at the Old Indian house and studying historic relics at Memorial hall.

The time allotted for Danielson people to send money contributions for the Day Kimball hospital fund grows short. The period expires next Monday. The work here is being carried on under the auspices of the Killingly Woman's club. It was pointed out this afternoon that modern hospital treatments require the best drugs and medicines, and that these together with x-ray supplies, surgical appliances and instruments, ambulance supplies and such are among the important expenses of the hospital which are cared for from the fund raised each year through such an appeal as is now being made to the public.

Thursday afternoon members of the Roundabout club are to hold their first meeting of the season with Mrs. Adah Potter at her home on the West Side. There is to be a business session and whist.

Fanning, the latter of Long Island. Dainty refreshments were served. Ernest Lavallee and Miss Beatrice Lavallee favored with violin and piano selections.

The Assawaga Woolen company organization and the Danielson Trust company will be represented on Friday at the funeral of Angus Parx in Hanover.

County commissioners and other county officials and a number of selectmen and town and city court judges visited the county home in Putnam yesterday and also the county jail in Brooklyn, where a lunch was served for them.

Only ten days remain for observing the daylight saving time in this territory this year. The change back to standard time will be made a week from next Sunday. Fast time has been in use in all the territory hereabouts since April.

From about every part of the town applicants to be made voters will come here Saturday to be queried as to their qualifications and admitted as electors if they pass the tests.

It was said today that no definite arrangements have as yet been made for having a night school in Danielson, as was done last year, but the matter likely will receive consideration later.

REVISION OF TRAIN SERVICE OVER THIS MIDLAND DIVISION

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, September 19—The passenger train service being rendered by the traffic department of the New Haven railroad, which at the present time is prompt and efficient and which is suited in every way to the convenience and satisfaction of Putnam people and particularly the business men and women is due to undergo a change, which is believed will create a vast amount of dissension among the people of this city and Willimantic, who will be affected by the proposed move. On September 29, according to bulletins received today by railroad officials, train No. 112 running east out of Hartford to Boston, arriving at Putnam at 7.26 a. m., (standard time) is to be withdrawn. After this date there will be no morning passenger trains over the Midland division for Boston until 9.35 a. m. when train No. 46 arrives from Hartford. Buyers in the local retail houses when making weekly and semi-weekly business trips into Boston will be unable to reach their destinations until about 11 a. m., following the adoption of the new time table. With the present service the merchants are in Boston at a fairly early hour, transact their business and are ready to return on the early afternoon train.

The announcement also notes the inauguration of a later afternoon service, with a new train leaving Hartford at 1.10 p. m., daily, running east and due in this city at 2.34 p. m., departing on a schedule so as to arrive at South station in Boston at 4 o'clock. According to local people this train will be worthless to the business men, because of the late hour of the completion of its run. It will however, benefit travelers seeking mid-afternoon service from Putnam.

The official bulletin of the proposed change shows no intentions of the renewal of train service over the Norwich and Worcester branch of the road. Early in the summer stories were widely circulated and were heartily received by people of Danielson and other points further south, where no train service is available, to the effect that the restoration of service would take place in the fall. Such stories were proven unfounded today.

The leisure hours of the past four years, coupled with the ideas of Albert "Bert" Sheldon of Dedham, Mass., popular road foreman of engines on the Midland division of the New Haven railroad, have realized his dreams of a unique summer home, which could not be purchased at any figure. Mr. Sheldon is the proud owner of "Clear Block Camp," situated on the Southbridge and Worcester branch of the New Haven road and running alongside the Putnam-Webster road on the shores of Webster lake. Clear Block, in all respects, even to the most minute detail is constructed to furnish the rest and peace to a railroad official. In the first place the camp, was originally a passenger train coach. It was purchased by Mr. Sheldon and has been converted into an ideal home. On the east side facing the lake, a glassed-in porch, eight feet wide has been added, the length of the car. The old fashioned seats have been removed and in their places three rooms including a kitchen, have been made, each luxuriously furnished. The walls are adorned with photos of famous trains and engines and crews, including a rare print of the famous "Ghost Train," which at one time ran through this city, scooping up its water supply on the "fly." Electric lights and running water, and a shower bath are present. The cellar too, attracts the eye of a visitor. In one room a modern and complete work shop, equipped with tools of all description, has been contrived by Mr. Sheldon. On the outside of the converted car is the name plate cleverly conceived to blend with the surroundings, "Clear Block Camp." Between each word are high board signals, each showing clear. The grounds have been beautified with a bit of lawn patch-work to offset the once dull greenless spots and on the east side facing the lake is a wharf and a large light house to the top of which is affixed a beacon. The lamp is a regulation whaler's light procured for its position by Mr. Sheldon from an old Boston seaman. "Bert", as he is known to everyone along the line, is justly proud of his railroad home and his holding is the apple of every visitor's eye.

Robbins B. Stoeckel, commissoner of the motor vehicle department today was granted permission by Captain of Police William J. Jarvis to use the city court room as a place of hearing all petitions pertaining to the motor vehicle department. It is the aim of the Hartford department to take up Putnam business in this city and dates for fall hearings have been set to take place on Tuesday, September 24 and on Tuesday, October 1.

English officiated and also conducted a committal service at the grave in Grove street cemetery where burial took place.

A death in Putnam today was that of Mrs. Ann Toolin of Pomfret street who died this morning at the age of 83 years. Mrs. Toolin's advanced years and weakened physical condition is thought to have brought on her death. Sammy's Shopping Suggestions for the Fellers in Putnam

Dear Fellers:

It was just my luck to get picked for a best man's job—and me an old batch at that. But it's one of those questions you just can't say no to and even it's not half as bad as the other poor feller's job. When they told me that a wedding, clothes made the man I just fell sick at the thought of buying a new outfit. It had to be done and I tell you I found the place—Lizotte's Smart Shop on Main street in Putnam. Talk about suits. They've got the goods, fall colors galore and all the latest university models tailored by Leopold—Morse and Club Clothes. Woolens and worsteds and made to fit.

And when I got to shoes I found just the thing to cure those "barking-dogs," a pair of Bostonians from Lizotte's. And also a full line of the Arch Preserver shoe. These are the "cats." They allow your feet to function naturally without the interference or abuse that comes from the ordinary sagging-arch shoes. I tell you fellers, you should come in and see Lizotte's offerings in clothing and haberdashery before buying, because with the aid of the courteous clerks, whose motto is Service, you will get everything that will be to your heart's delight. And I don't mean maybe.

So long fellers. I'll see you next week after the wedding and will tell you all about it and what they had to eat.

Devotedly,

OUR RAILROAD CROSSING

At the hearing before the utilities commission today concerning the establishment of a flash signal at the Eighth street crossing in place of the flagman maintained there, it is expected that due consideration will be given to the dangerous character of that crossing and that insistence will be placed upon the insurance of as safe conditions as possible at that point. At the foot of a sharp grade with the vision of the highway user cut off in both directions, the menace there is by no means imaginary. Whether a signal there would serve the interests of the public may be open to doubt. If a signal may mean that a switcher is at work on the line either side of the crossing and users, not being able to distinguish between a through train and a switcher which might not actually use the crossing but would be near enough to throw the light, get accustomed to disregarding the signal since a switcher might not involve any immediate danger it would not give to the crossing the protection that is afforded by the flagman. It would tend to encourage the taking of a chance by crossing users instead of the respect which signals should get at all times.

There is unquestionably need for signals at the unguarded crossings in the Greeneville section of the city. Several fatalities have occurred there because of the failure to stop, look and listen and because of the inability to detect the approach of a train until it was too late. These crossings are numerous, blind and much used and while a signal might not meet requirements in Eighth street there are crossings in that part of the city where such warnings would be highly effective. That such crossings may be private doesn't lessen the need for protection for the many who are obliged to use them.

Crossing elimination at these points is out of the question. It is evident that such a step is not contemplated or required, but it is important that adequate safe guards shall be maintained for the protection of the public in cooperation with the protection which the crossing users should exercise for themselves. With bad crossings guarded and blind private crossings signalled there would be removed that serious danger which exists at every crossing where the view is obstructed.

PREVENT RUNAWAY CAR

Any city which has hills has reason to be concerned about the automobiles parked thereon. That is it has reason to be concerned if they are not left in such a manner as to prevent them rolling down the hill while no one is in them.

The car in motion on a grade without a driver is a dangerous object. Waterbury has recently had two of them, and it is not the only city to have similar experiences. Whether it is a case of the brakes not holding or someone tampering with the brakes makes no difference to the person who may be struck, the owner of the machine which may be smashed or anyone who may be involved in the resulting mixup, for there is good chance that there will be damage of some kind resulting.

Experience teaches that a car that is parked on a hill should be left in gear in addition to having the brake set. Further than that the front of rear wheel, according to which is the further down the hill should be turned into the curb This means that should the brake not hold the car would be kept because it was in gear, while should someone tamper with the brake or the clutch the car would be prevented from rolling down hill because it would be turned into the curb

It isn't to be expected that those who leave their cars standing on a hillside either expect or desire them to take French leave of their position. Drivers or owners do not court trouble of the kind that is likely to follow any such rolling, but there is no telling when it will happen and the only safe thing to do is to apply sufficient methods of prevention to avoid it

Cars which have rolled down hills have caused some frightful accidents and caused much damage, but in view of the fact that it can be so easily prevented the wisdom of complying with the simple requirements is obvious. When a car gets to going it is aimless in its conduct and it gives no warning. One might as well stand on a railroad track in front of a locomotive as to be struck by a car that is running away after gaining momentum on a hill. But there is no need of the runaway if the triple precautions are observed.

TIME TO FIND OUT

When the merchant marine act was passed by congress last year it was considered that valuable assistance had been provided for American ship owners. It was believed that it would give encouragement to private capital to acquire and operate ships under the American flag.

Among the features of that bill was one concerning the placing of mail contracts and it was natural to anticipate that with the purchase of a steamship line a mail contract would go along with it. That, at least, is the view that was taken of the legislation by those who have become interested in obtaining certain of the lines which have been offered for sale by the government.

When the committee which was named to consider mail contracts got busy it was found that there were lines which underbid those which have been purcased wit te view of getting a government mail contract. Inasmuch as lines were purchased under the expectation of obtaining this government subsidy there was an immediate desire on the part of buyers to throw up the deal. The purchasers or the bidders presented a problem to the committee which it was powerless to solve. Whatever expectations may have been it could not be found that the law directed the giving of mail contracts to each and every line acquired from the government.

Under the circumstances it is the opinion of the shipping board that transactions which are underway should be held up until congress is given an opportunity to indicate what its intentions were and to set forth whether each line is to get a contract or whether it is to go to the lowest bidder.

There is a desire to get rid of the government owned ships but there is no intention of doing so through any misrepresentation. If the law is not sufficiently explicit or if the intention was that the postoffice department should use its judgement in awarding contracts, it has been indicated that it is time to find it out before any more ships are actually sold or any more mail contracts are let. Everything considered there can be no criticism of the bidders or the government agents in seeking an interpretation of the legislation. It is time to find out what was intended.

WOONSOCKET'S EXPERIENCE

What comes from a municipality plunging into debt year after year is presented by the city of Woonsocket. That city has been doing business by borrowing so long that it has gotten to the point where it needs $200,000 in anticipation of taxes to meet current expenses and it is having a rather difficult time getting it. The bank which has loaned it $2,600,000 is hesitating about furnishing any more.

Woonsocket has not been operating on the policy of pay as you go. It has resorted to the practice of issuing bonds and borrowing money until it has gotten into an unpleasant situation to say the least and those who are responsible for it can hardly be proud of their work. It has been spending with apparently little regard for where the money was coming from and it has little to show for it. On the other hand it is obliged to meet a heavy outlay each year for interest on its borrowings, and unless the banks can be convinced that it should be advanced more money it faces an embarrassing situation.

In addition to this Woonsocket has been ordered by the state to stop sewering into the river and establish a sewage disposal system. This will involve an outlay of about $450,000 and the project has been vetoed by the mayor because of the serious condition of the city's finances.

Who is to blame for it? Well, in the final analysis it would appear that it was the fault of the citizens of that city themselves, those who are responsible for a tolerated inefficient or unbusinesslike city government and those who have been responsible for pushing the city into debt up to its eyes. That's where the unbridled policy of piling up indebtedness and indulgence in wasteful practices in city government and a city if given the chance.

IN THE WRONG BUSINESS

Whether he expected it or not the rector of an Episcopal church in Brooklyn has received a storm of protest because of the statement which he made in his pulpit to the effect that his church was a white church and he did not expect it would be attended by Negroes He claimed that there were several churches in the neighborhood which serve the Negroes and it was expected that they would go there.

This is most unusual attitude for any clergyman to take and it is questioned whether it represents the sentiment of the church or which he is the rector. It would not seem to be inasmuch as there are number of Negro members of that church and Negroes in that neighborhood have been accustomed to attend services there.

The explanation of the matter seems to lie in the fact that the clergyman belongs in Texas and the views which he expressed would appear to be those of a southerner. That throws a different light upon the situation but it has put before that particular church the question of whether the wish of a southern preacher in a northern church is going to upset the policy of that church and diocese.

It is a new practice for a minister of the gospel to tell any worthy members of a congregation, whether members of the church or not, that their attendance is no longer desired. This is true regardless of color, for the opportunity to worship God is seldom created in the north on the color line.

That members of the congregation, members of the denomination and fellow clergy men should denounce any such proclamation is only what should be expected. Such a declaration indicates that the rector is not only in the wrong part of the country but in the wrong country and business

Not much encouragement is being given to those who would stick by the old straw lid.

A ride over the completed portion of the rebuilt North Main street pavement is in delightful contrast to the experience six months ago.

Some communities do not seem to care how they get publicity, so long as they get it. Gastonia N. C., is getting as bad a reputation as Herrin, Ill.

Such good judgment as North Carolina has been showing for law and order in contrast to some other states seems to be knocked into a cocked hat by the occurrences at Gastonia.

TONGUE-TIED

If you are homely and poor it is bad, but if you are poverty stricken and beautiful it is not to be borne. Thea Waite was 26 years old and all her life she had had to look at $100 dresses in their upstairs cases and then take the elevator to the basement, where frocks were selling for $15. She hated those basement racks.

Even her wedding dress had been made at home by a seamstress at $5 a day. Poor George! All the raptures and glory of that love affair when she had been 18 and he 20 had faded, flickered out and been made as nothing by the crush of two people trying to live on less than enough salary for one and the change in George from an attractive boy with a weak chin to a peevish, selfish man with a weak spirit.

It had been two years since he had died and she had now only memories of their early happiness. Small wonder then that the touch of pathos on her lovely lips, her gravity when she seemed made for laughter, provided the finishing push which sent no one less than H. Cunningham Jones prostrate at her feet.

H. Cunningham was the head of the firm for which she worked, an immaculate bachelor of 40 with steel-gray eyes and a mouth which looked as though it had been a hard winter and the entire country was frozen over. He had been too busy piling up hundreds of thousands yearly ever to relax to the pleasanter things of life. And he had asked her to marry him with no warning preliminaries. There had been no supper parties, theaters or dances. Nothing but his daily aloof courtesy to an employe.

It was characteristic that on this momentous occasion he had asked nothing beyond that she should marry him, but he had seemed insistent, almost eager, about what he could give.

"You can have a house built anywhere you like and as you like," he had told the astounded Thea. "With everything which goes with such an establishment. Your own motor and chauffeur. Your own bank account, a liberal one. Freedom—I think I know you and I have utter confidence in you. I—it would make me very happy, Thea!"

And she was trying to make up her mind, for she had begged for a little time. There were things about him that she liked very much. She liked his confident poise and power, his even voice, his little shy kindness. Being his secretary, she knew about his paying the big hospital bill for the office boy's mother. She recalled the friendliness for him shown by important men. He was distinguished looking, a man of whom a woman might be very proud.

If in addition to all this he had been in love with her, it might have been different, but not one word of sentiment had colored that proposal of his.

Why, why must she be such a fool, she asked herself. Because she felt she not only was going to tell him no, but in common decency remove herself from her present job and be obliged to hunt another. And why, she asked still more furiously, should he be such an idiot. A version of what life might be as his wife, with real affection between them, shook her. Perfect, no less

And it couldn't be and so she was going to do a crazy act and turn down H. Cunningham Jones' sensible proposition and go on hunting basement bargains.

She looked breath-takingly beautiful when she faced H. Cunningham after hours one day and her chin was high.

"Well, Thea," he asked in a voice not quite as even as usual, "have you decided?"

For a long moment they looked at each other. Then within her something crashed and to her horror she found herself crumpled on a chair crying hard. She was crying because she felt so uselessly defrauded.

"Thea! Thea!" a voice in her hair was speaking hoarsely. There were arms about her. H. Cunningham Jones had gathered her to him commandingly. "Don't! What's wrong? I can't bear to have you unhappy! Why I've planned and planned how happy I could make you if you would say yes—of course I never dared hope you'd care—all I ask is just for you to let me love you!"

Thea Waite choked on a sob, blinked out of wet eyes and with a great flood of happiness pushed him away violently.

"Idiot!" she said right out to her transformed boss, "then why on earth didn't you say so at the beginning? If that isn't just like a man!"—Chicago News

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—Now that Mr. Frank B. Kellogg's justly celebrated peace pact has gone into effect with much eclat, the Bystander wonders what became of the "peace stamp" movement launched in Minnesota to aid Mr. Kellogg's plan.

It was fostered by the "World Peace Postage association," with headquarters in St. Paul, and contemplated inducing every nation to issue a peace stamp supplemental to its regular postage stamps.

The would be obtainable by users of the mails on request as a substitute for the regular stamps, and the association figured that each stamp so requested and used would be visible evidence of a "peace ballot" by the mailer.

J. W. Hamilton, secretary of the association, said some months ago he had received favorable reports from Canada, Cuba, Mexico, Germany, England and other countries as to reception of this novel idea of mobilizing the mail users of the world as an expression of public opinion for peace.

Not Sneered At.

What the effect might be of such a bit of world-wide peace propaganda no man can tell. Any observer of the forces that brought the Kellogg pact into being could not sneer at the notion that the peace stamp method might create such a gale of public demand as would bend politicians and statesmen to its will in any international emergency.

It cannot be challenged that public opinion in most countries was the force that overcame reluctance of statesmanship to embark on the peace pact adventure.

Nor can it be seriously questioned that Mr. Kellogg himself, had he been able to escape public opinion at home, would never have seized on the universal anti-war declaration idea as an answer to Premier Briand's troublesome proposal for a bilateral Franco-American pact of that nature.

The American public demanded action of the Coolidge administration on the Briand proposal, and it got it in the Kellogg pact.

If you don't believe that the voice of the public resounds loudly in the ear of statesmen and politicians, go back and look at the record of the senate's vote ratifying the Kellogg pact.

Read what slighting things a surprising number of senators had to say about that plan for keeping nations from each other's throats; then see how they voted on the showdown. They voted "aye".

Effective.

And as to effectiveness of the peace pact there already is considerable that could be said. The Bystander previously has noted that it was the only bit of diplomatic machinery which lent itself to instant use in efforts to avert a Russo-Chinese war over the Chinese Eastern railway dispute.

Look also at the Anglo-American naval conversations. The peace pact was made the jumping-off place in attempts to get rid of the involved snarl over relative cruiser fleets by both governments.

President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald both appealed to the spirit, at least, of that pact to justify their efforts.

And out of those conversations, even before a cruiser accord could be formulated, grew MacDonald's declaration to the world that Britain never would build against the American fleet.

Credit another hit, or at least a timely sacrifice, to the peace pact,

YOUR HEALTH

Making Vacations Pay

By Shirley W. Wynne, M. D.
Commissioner of Health
New York, N. Y.

Vacation time should be "building up" time. Too many people after their vacations are "all tired out". In planning your vacation make it pay; make it yield the greatest possible return in good health.

Do not choose that place for your vacation where you are judged by the clothes you wear. The purpose of your vacation is not to show other people how the many different styles become you. The purpose of your vacation is to show everybody that health is always in style.

Do not make the children get "all dressed up". Let the youngsters play and romp about in loose, rough clothing in which they are comfortable and happy. They cannot be happy in their play if they are forever being cautioned not to spoil the pretty frock.

Do not permit the children to do more than is good for them. Exhaustion is likely to result from strenuous competition in running and swimming. The younger and weaker children should have regular periods of rest and sleep.

To those of you who plan to spend your vacation on camping and motor trips, a word of caution against drinking water from any spring or brook that you happen to be passing. There is great danger of typhoid fever if you drink water from undetermined sources. Better be a thirsty person than a typhoid fever victim. Do not take unnecessary chances. Various state authorities are now beginning to post signs at springs and brooks likely to be used by tourists, indicating whether or not the water is safe to drink.

I appreciate the delights of an automobile trip for your vacation—the opportunity to see things—to get to places—to view the many incomparable scenic beauties of our country. But there is no health advantage to be cooped in a closed car all day long for every day of your vacation. If possible, ride in an open car so that you can get the full benefit of the fresh air and sunshine. Allow yourself sufficient time along the way for rest periods. Drive slowly. You'll get much more enjoyment out of the scenery and will run less chance of a smash-up.

Be particularly careful of the food you eat while you are away from home. Do not indulge in the heavy meals. Follow the line of the fresh green vegetables, eggs, fruit and milk. Avoid fried foods. If you are hiking or travelling by automobile, do not stop at every little stand along the way to stuff yourself so full of innumerable "little meals" that you get away from your three, regular meals each day.

Do not attempt long walks during the heat of the day.

Do not attempt vigorous exercise when the sun is high in the heavens. You body has all it can do to withstand the terific heat. Do not place additional strain upon it.

Camp life is ideal for the children if the camp is a good, reliable one managed by persons competent to care for children.

In selecting a camp for your youngsters, make sure that the camp is a desirable place for residence—that it has all the scientific aids that modern sanitation has developed—that it has a safe water supply, safe sewerage disposal, a pure milk supply and is in charge of a thoroughly trained and conscientious director.

There are many of you who, for one reason or another, will have to spend your vacations at home. Let me suggest to those of you that you try to plan each day's activities so that you give yourself a change. Make frequent use of the nearby groves beaches, golf links. Wear old clothing that you will not have to think about. Get some good, perfect-fitting hiking shoes. Take your lunch along. You will find it tastes much better out in the open of the country than the same food would taste served home.

The wise man takes a few weeks of rest each year. It makes a new man out of him—it peps him up—it clears the "cobwebs" from his brain. He comes back with renewed vigor, eager and ready to tackle any problem. That is the way you too should come back. You will—if you remember—what vacations are for. A vacation well spent will buy vim and vigor.

CHILD TRAINING

Childhood Speaks

Pauline H. Thomas

Finally, when Aunt Mary hesitated just a moment in the midst of something she was relating, Jeanne burst in with a tale of her own. I felt obliged to reprove her and she obediently asked to be excused. However, she exclaimed, "Mother, you tell me to wait until no one is speaking, but if I do, I never get a chance to say one word!"

Realizing that I had gained nothing by such a reproof in the presence of guests and wishing to avoid the impending discussion of children's behavior in Jeanne's presence, I said quickly, "Jeanne, dear, there is Evelyn calling for you. You may be excused to run and play with her."

Then said young Miss Miller, "It is true, we grown ups never give children a chance. I don't blame the child."

Said Aunt Mary, "When I was a child, I not only did not speak until spoken to ,but I never once felt that I was being restrained. I was glad to remain unnoticed, for I was very bashful."

Thought I to myself, "As a child, I was glad to be seen and not heard because my parents adopted such rules for me from babyhood and I did not feel it a repression at all. When a guest asked me a question. Mother promptly answered for me. I received no special notice. On the other hand, Jeanne has been taught to answer a question put to her, herself. I am the one responsible for her ready expression of thought. She is noticed and spoken to by every guest and consequently is not bashful. It is natural for her to feel the restraint when she can not join in conversation."

After the guests left, I called Jeanne and tried to explain that problem of hers. She was merely groping for understanding, not being impertinent.

I said to her, "You see, dear, each guest was not talking all the time; it was only because there were six guests and only one little girl that they seemed to be doing all the talking. Sometimes older folk forget that little folk like to talk too, and if they do forget then it is best to practice listening. You can learn to be a good listener as well as a good talker. And never is it polite to interrupt anyone else, because it is forgetting the rights of others. If all the six guests did that, you know, you could not tell what anyone was saying. If everyone rushed ahead when Daddy's car had the 'right of way', what would happen? If all your little playmates tried to snatch the swing from the one who got it first, no one would enjoy the swing."

Gross boldness in a child is far from admirable, yet were I obliged to confess the many instances of agonizing, handicapping self-consciousness I have suffered as an adolescent, yes, even as a woman, all of which were the outgrowth of bashfulness in childhood, I should be more than abashed. Surely there must be a happy medium for my own little girl and for other little children.

IN DAY'S NEWS

The Hague

The Owen D. Young plan conference now being held at The Hague, brings Holland's capital and one of the world's peace capitals into the news limelight again. The Hague is in southwestern Holland about two miles inland from Scheveningen on the coast.

"The tourist on his first trip to Holland migh t mistake The Hague for a transplanted French city," says a bulletin from the Washington D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society. "There are no signs of windills or quaint Dutch caps or wooden sabots or any of the colorful things that first visitors to Holland expect to see even in the cities.

"Except for the occasional Aanspreker who treadec the streets, the inhabitants look like any crowd of New Yorkers that one might pick out at random. The Aanspreker, the modern survivor of an early custom, makes the rounds of the neighborhoods announcing deaths. He is attired in sombre black streamer; and square toed black pumps with huge silver buckles. Sometimes in the fish market there may be seen fisherwomen from Scheveningen in picturesque peasant costumes.

"Even the buildings of The Hague have a French touch. Although they are mostly the square, solid structures usually associated with Dutch architecture, they are embellished with decorative motifs in the French manner. Exquisite lace curtains adorn the windows of the larger private houses. Dwellings where the door is decorated with a large square of lace, bearing in the center an embroidered coat of arms, are announcing the advent of a child in the family.

"The wide streets of The Hague with their flat, yellow stone pavements are immaculately clean. Large automobiles bearing coats of arms and splendid carriages roll through the streets. The city is the home of many of the Dutch nobility. Besides these people with their picturesque but little-used titles of count, baron and jonkheer, are wealthy diplomats from all the countries of Europe. The wealth embodied in the population is shown in the handsome houses of the city and the spacious shops which line Spui Strnat and the Lange Poten.

"Compared with Amsterdam and Rotterdam, The Hague has very few canals. Those that exist are found in the by-ways rather than in the main streets. However a resident of The Hague can view all the canals he desires by taking the railway trip of one hour to Amsterdam or the half hour trip to Rotterdam. Many tired business men, wearied of the commercial aspects of Amsterdam and Rotterdam, commute every day to the comparative quiet of The Hague. Like Washington, D. C., it is a city of few industries.

"Also just as Washington has its famous Rock Creek park, The Hague has its farious Bosch, a large wood east of the city where tame deer roam. Numerous precise little paths intersect this heavily wooded area. The Huis ten Bosch, or House in the Woods, a villa erected in 1647, is located in the northeast corner of the park. It is noted for its interior done in Dutch, Japanese and Chinese. In the Japanese room is a chandelier made of cups and saucers. The Chinese room is papered in eighteenth century rice paper.

"Washington, D. C., has its reflecting pool mirroring the Lincoln memorial, and The Hague has the Vyver, a lake situated almost in the center of the town and surrounded by handsome buildings which it reflects. Nearby stands the Binnenhof, a group of medieval buildings. The Hall of Knights, a lofty gabled and turreted building, is the most prominent. Perhaps the most famous building in The Hague is the Palace of Peace, built largely through the munificence of the late Andrew Carnegie. It was constructed from a design submitted in an international competition, and is of brick set off by marble trimmings. The Hague possesses one of the most famous collections of pictures in Europe in the museum at the Mauritshuis."

Flip Tries the Slippery Slide.

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The things that I delight to do,
May not be possible for you.
—Little Joe Otter.

Flip sat at the top of Little Joe Otter's slippery slide where the bank of the Smiling Pool is deepest. It goes almost straight down right there. Flip had been watching from the opposite bank. When he could stand it no longer he had swum across at the narrowest place. By the time he got across Little Joe Otter had given up sliding and had gone off down the Laughing Brook.

"It is a nice slide," said Flip, to no one, for there was no one there. "Yes, sir, it is a nice slide. I should think it would be fun to go down it."

"Let's see you go down the slide, Flip!" barked Bowser the Hound from across the Smiling Pool.

Flip pretended not to hear. He leaned over and looked down. The water at the foot of the slide was deep. Somehow Flip couldn't find the courage to try that slippery slide. From his point of view, going down that slide didn't seem quite such a simple matter as it had seemed when Little Joe Otter had been sliding there. Flip hadn't noticed particularly just how Little Joe Otter had gone down the slide. He hadn't noticed that Little Joe's front legs were back against his body and his back legs straight out behind his body, so that there was nothing whatever to interfere. As Flip sat there at the top of the slide he got to wondering what he should do with his feet; how he should get them out of the way if he attempted to go down. Sliding had seemed such a simple thing when he watched Little Joe Otter. Now it didn't seem simple at all.

"Chug-a-rum!" cried Grandfather Frog in his deepest voice. "Chug-a-rum! I believe you are afraid to try the slippery slide."

Flip again pretended not to hear. He looked over to the Big Rock in the Smiling Pool. Billy Mink was sitting on it and looking up at him. "You don't dare try the slippery slide," squeaked Billy Mink.

"Ha, ha, ha!" he cried. "Little Joe Otter should have seen that"

Once more Flip pretended not to hear. He leaned over, the better to look down the slippery slide. His front feet slipped a little. He tried to pull himself back. They slipped still more. Flip now began to try to scramble back, but it was no use. He couldn't get hold of the ground with his hind feet. That slippery slide was too slippery and too well packed for him to dig his toenails into it.

Flip gave a little yelp of dismay. He was pitching forward and he couldn't stop himself. Right over the edge of the bank he pitched and, yelping with fright, down he went turning heels over head until he landed with a great splash in the water. He went down, down, and he swallowed a lot of water, for his mouth was open. Coughing and strangling he finally got his head above water and started to swim across to where Bowser the Hound was dancing about on the bank.

"Ho, ho, ho! How do you like the slippery slide?" barked Billy Mink.

Even sedate, dignified old Grandfather Frog on his big, green lily-pad was holding his sides as he shook with laughter. "Ha, ha, ha!" he cried. "Little Joe Otter should have seen that."

Flip felt very sheepish. He didn't like being laughed at. He knew that he must have looked very, very funny going heels over head down that slippery slide. But he wasn't hurt anywhere except in his feelings. So, being withal a wise little dog, he made the best of it. "Well, anyway," said he, as he shook himself on the bank of the Smiling Pool, "I tried the slippery slide and that's something you haven't done, Bowser."

"No," said Bowser, "and I don't think I shall try."

Lending a Hand

Herbert, Jr., three years old, while visiting in the country recently, was very much interested in the pump, so when his aunt approached with the water pitcher he rushed over, seized the pump handle and said: "Here, auntie, let me shake this for you."

Rusty Beans

She liked green beans but she had never seen any cooked half shelled.

About dinner time she became hungry and asked her aunt what they were having for dinner. When she was told that they were having green beans she was delighted.

She refused the beans when they were passed. A second time she didn't seem to care for any.

"Why don't you want some beans?" asked mother. In a voice not intended for her aunt to hear she said to her mother:

"Look, they're rusty."

Walks Miles Daily Without Getting Sore Feet

A Cleveland letter carrier, a popular veteran, suffered so greatly from sore feet that periodically he had to lay off and stay in bed until his tired, aching, painfully swollen feet got well enough that he could resume his route.

It happened that among his "customers" was a well known pharmaceutical manufactory whose chemists had just perfected a balm containing organic iodine (a new scientific discovery) and other powerful antiseptic, astringent, germ-killing, healing medication for the relief of sore feet. They decided to test it out with their friend, the postman.

Results were almost miraculous—far beyond their fondest hopes. The new balm instantly soothed, relieved the aches and pains the old man had suffered nightly. In a few days all swelling had vanished, corns and callouses had disappeared. Now he walks his daily miles with youthful sprightfulness and perfect comfort!

This amazing prescription is called McCulloch's Foot Balm. It is delicately scented and doesn't stain clothes, hose or bed linen. It worked wonders with the old postman. It is guaranteed to bring YOU relief—or money back! Try it—TODAY. At all good druggists.

NORWICH STORES SHOW BEAUTIFUL WINDOWS FOR FALL OPENING DAY

The fashion parade and window decorating contest by the Norwich stores for the fall opening day reached the best mark ever Thursday night when the event attracted admiring thousands that thronged the streets all the evening, first to see the fashion parade in automobiles and then to stroll past the store windows to enjoy the rich and beautiful display that the decorators had arranged. Brilliant lighting plans aided in the effectiveness of the display and the admiring throngs on foot and by automobile circulated from street to street throughout the evening so that none of the handsome windows might be missed.

The fashion parade, which was in automobiles, made a colorful feature to open the evening, starting at 8 o'clock from in front of the Jordan Auto company on Main street, just over Preston bridge, and proceeding over the assigned line of march till it came back to the starting point and disbanded. Swahn's Military band led the line, making over a dozen brief stops at assigned points to play where there were window displays.

Fashion Parade

Leading the line were the four machines carrying the feature of the Porteous and Mitchell company, a wedding party, with bride, bridegroom, bridesmaids, flower girl and best man. Right behind it came the Hanover-Curland company with a radio playing the wedding march from the machine. Then in order followed John Ogulnick's display of wedding gifts in silver, two machines showing fall hats and coats from the Reid and Hughes company on young lady models, the Worth shop with ladies' fall coats, the Model Booterie with fall shoes, the Lincoln store with a beautiful display, and the Baby Shoppe with a stork on top of the machine and a baby and several children riding with their mothers to show babies' and children's clothes.

The Eaton-Chase company had its own truck with a sportsmen display and Morley's hat store and Gerry's men furnishings showed their distinctive lines. Caron's Specialty shop had a beautiful showing of ladies' coats, worn by models in two machines, Smith's shoe store displayed shoes and the United Music company had a radio operating with the loud speaker hung over the front of the radiator.

The Lee and Osgood company featured first aid supplies with Miss Yvonne Boulanger and Miss Cherilla Smith of the Backus hospital nurses in uniform riding in the machine. Behind them came the Backus hospital ambulance with Frank Costa at the wheel, the nurses in costume, Miss Alice Glasbrenner and Miss Edna Holmberg, riding with him. Schwartz Bros. furniture store made an attractive display. Boy Scouts in uniform acted as escort with the machines.

Jordon Auto Co., six-cylinder Dodge sedan; Olson's garage, Auburn sedan; E. B. Patterson Co., two five-passenger 726 Packard sedans, seven-passenger 740 Packard sedan, 733 Packard sedan; William C. Noyes, two Chryslers 70 and 77 sedans; Dix Chevrolet company, six-cylinder Chevrolet sedan; O. C. Wolfe Co., Ford town car; Julian L. Williams, four Buicks including sedans and sport roadster; William Schechtman, Hudson sedan and Essex coach; William F. Bailey, Roosevelt straight eight; A. C. Swan Co., Cadillac town sedan and LaSalle sport touring; Eastern Connecticut Motor Sales Co., six-cylinder Hup sedan and Pontiac fuor-door sedan; T. N. M. Lathrop, Inc., Studebaker 620 champion sedan; Krieger and St. Germaine, two De Soto roadsters.

Judging Window Decorations

The three judges, started on their inspection tour of the window displays about 6:30 o'clock and it was approaching 9 o'clock when they met at the Wauregan hotel to compare notes and make the final awards. The list of winners was announced at 10:20 o'clock. In several cases it was extremely difficult to reach an agreement as to the winner. This was so in the case of the Diamond Shoe store and Smith's Shoe Store. They were close in points, the Diamond Shoe store scoring 275 points and Smiths Shoe store, 270 points. Another case in which it was quite difficult to make an award was in the furniture store class. Schwartz Bros.' display scored 275 points and Gilbert's Furniture store, which has won first place for several consecutive years previously, scored 262 points.

The judging was done by a committee of three headed by Edward Frink of Hartford, who had with him two local people. It was decide by the Merchants Bureau, which was in charge of the fashion parade and window decorating contest, not to reveal the names of the local judges this year, thus saving them from the embarrassment which has been the experience of the local judges in other years.

MENTAL HYGIENE CLINIC OF THE UNITED WORKERS

The name of the neuropsychiatric clinic has been changed to the mental hygiene clinic since this name is more convenient and more comprehensible to the general public, and it expresses more clearly the type of work undertaken by this department of the United Workers.

Mental hygiene presents a new method of working in puzzling school, home and work relationship, and wherever tried out has shown a much higher degree of success than previous methods in trying to unsnarl difficulties.

The psychiatrist trained in preventive work in mental hygiene brings to his work not only imagination and sympathy that give him unusual insight with hidden motives, but years of training and experience in helping the patient to straighten out his quirks and kinks before they reach the stage where he may be considered a sick person.

With no resources of its own and therefore dependent upon the general fund, this youngest department of the United Workers without doubt most important to the community, is one example of the expansion required of such an organization.

ADDRESSED SCOTLAND MEETING ON LINCOLN SCHOOL WORK

About 250 townspeople and about 25 teachers from the towns of Lisbon, Voluntown, Sterling and Canterbury, enjoyed an illustrated lecture about the work that is being carried on in the Lincoln school in New York city. The lecture was given Wednesday evening at Scotland grange hall by Miss Katherine Keelor, a teacher in the Lincoln school.

The development of the child's personality and interest is considered of first importance, she said. Before the child is taught so much subject matter which has been emphasized in the old-time courses of study, it is first discovered whether the needs of the child in his future development demand this type of subject matter.

Many manual activities are carried on within the school room such as boat making, miniature village construction, dramatization where the children make their own stage scenery and other equipment necessary to demonstrate what they have learned from their activity. Around these activities the children find opportunity for wide reading and all subject matter grows out of the needs of the child as the activities present them.

NEWLY MARRIED COUPLE SUE FOR AUTO CRASH HURTS

For damages to his automobile that he expected to use on his wedding trip and could not after it had been run into by the machine driven by Fred J. Ortmann of this city, George Belemenzis has brought suit in the superior court against Ortmann for $1,000 damages and his wife is suing Mr. Ortmann for $2,500 damages for injuries she sustained. The Belemenzis car stalled on the road and was standing in the highway with its lights on, according to the complaint, and was run into by the Ortmann machine which hit the other with such force as to push it 35 feet into a telegraph pole. It is alleged that the Ortmann machine was running with one light on and was driven at 50 miles an hour at the time of the crash.

Damage to the Belemenzis car according to the complaint, consisted of rear of body driven in; steering apparatus broken; fenders damaged; tires blown out; glass shattered; rear end sprung; gears broken; frame twisted; top was torn, etc., all of which damage amounted to $400 and by reason of the damages Belemenzis claims that he has been deprived of the use of his car on a wedding trip for which he was compelled to hire another car at an expense of $75.

Mrs. Belemenzis claims that she was severely injured in the crash and was taken to the hospital, where she was a patient for a week with the severe contusions, wounds and bruises in all about the body; she claims that she has suffered permanent injury to her nervous system.

JUMBLED ALARM SENT FIREMEN ON WRONG TRAIL

A jumbled alarm, pulled in from box 23, Franklin square, at 10:20 o'clock Thursday night, for a small fire in the basement of a Main street store, caused considerable confusion in the fire department. The box, pulled in by a local woman who was unfamiliar with fire boxes, registered 13 at the central fire station and sent the apparatus from that station to Thames street and High street. At the West Side station the box sounded 132 and sent the apparatus at that station to the wrong box. The woman who pulled the box jiggled the hook in sending in the alarm. This prevented the box in registering the correct number for the first couple of rounds.

However the mixup in the alarm was quickly straightened out and the apparatus responded to the correct box. The fire was a small, but smoky one. It was in a pile of rubbish beneath the sidewalk grating in front of the vacant store at No. 263 Main street, formerly occupied by the Hudson Silk and Woolen house.

The store and the basement were filled with choking smoke but the fire was negligible and was quickly extinguished with the contents of a couple of cans of chemical. The recall was sent in a few minutes after the box had been pulled. The property is owned by the Mohican Company. Chief Henry R. Taft tested the box and found it in perfect working order.

BACK YARD CABIN IS VACATION SPOT

ST. LOUIS—(AP)—No long trek to the woods or seashore faces Victor J. Azbe, St. Louis engineer, when he takes his vacation. Azbe merely steps into his backyard.

Only a few steps separate Azbe's city home and his log cabin "country retreat." Both built in the same yard, he has surrounded each with the atmosphere befitting its purpose.

Azbe, who came to this country 22 years ago an uneducated Austrian emigrant youth of 17, started out as a furnace man. Now he is a successful consulting engineer.

He built the cabin originally for seclusion when working on involved engineering reports. Now it's his hobby and he actually does take his vacations in the back yard. When he wants a day or a few hours away from business cares or rush of city life, he steps out to the cabin.

Azbe fashioned the hermitage invariably a male domain—with his own hands and equipped it as nearly as possible as such a cabin would have been furinshed in early American days.

Eat has promised Lenny Marullo, his trustee, that he will be the best man when Lenny takes unto himself a bride late this month. And he has promised himself that he will be the best man when he faces Andre Routis of France, the world's featherweight champion, in a title bout at the Hurley stadium here on Monday, September 23.

The Hartford boy—he has just turned 21—is a bundle of nervous energy. In that regard he is like the other great Connecticut featherweight, Kid Kaplan who once reigned, as Bat hopes to, as the world's featherweight champion. Kaplan is perpetual motion in the ring and in training as well. During a fight, Kaplan never leaves the stool in his corner. Between rounds he stands up dancing nervously and waiting for the bell for the next round. Battalino is just that way. While the gloves are being removed from his hands at the end of the day's work in the gym he is jigging up and down and he runs at top-speed from the training quarters to his home, half a mile away. Always on edge as a bout draws on, this time he is more impatient than ever, in fighting mood and anxious for the bell.

Bat has been making life none too pleasant for his sparring partners and he has been tearing savagely at the bag, hitting it so hard, according to Trainer Marullo, that the lights in the gym blink during bag-punching part of the gymnasium routine. The challenger's chief worry as he makes ready for the fight is that he has got to wait a few days yet. Once in the ring, he is a furious fighting man—a slashing, relentless battler. He is a real fighter of the Dempsey school and he is a fighter bound to be a great favorite with the fans in the larger cities after he extends his campaigning as he plans to do after the Routis title battle—win or lose. Battalino's area has been a small one thus far, Connecticut and Massachusetts are the only satties that know him, but he expects to write "world's champion" after his name and to be more extensively known after Monday night. Routis has never met as stiff a puncher as Battalino; the featherweight class probably has never known a boy who hits as terrifically as this Hartford youth who has yet to cost his first vote. Battalino is a short, straight puncher. There is a "click" to his punch as it hits the button and then the fadeout.

McKAIN BLANKS YANKS WITH 4 HITS BEFORE SMALL CROWD

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—The Chicago White Sox easily defeated the Ex-Champion Yankees here today by 7 to 0 behind the excellent pitching of young Harold McKain. The game was witnessed by fewer than 500 fans, one of the poorest crowds to enter Yankee portals since the stadium was opened in 1923.

McKain's support was erratic, although he did have the help of four double plays. He gave the Yanks just four hits, all singles. George Pipgras was ineffective, and retired in the seventh for a pinch batsman. The score:

Graham-Martin Bout Tonight

BOSTON, Sept. 19 (AP)—Bushey Graham, the bantamweight champion, will make his first important invasion of the feather weight ranks here, tomorrow night, when he clashes with Andy Martin, of Boston, in the Boston Garden's feature ten round bout.

Didja see the fashion parads last night?

Pretty nifty, what? And didja see those young women all dolled up in store finery, and ridin' in those nice new shiny autos.

I wonder what those young ladies were thinking about as they rode along. Some of 'em looked like they'd rather be most any place else than where they were.

Others seemed perfectly at ease and not the least bit conscious that they were being gazed at. But just the same I'll bet there wasn't one in the gang who wasn't wondering just how she looked.

I'm willing to gamble that I can name some of the thoughts that passed through the minds of these young women. "Gee, I hope I look nice and that this color is becoming to me. I hate to think that maybe it don't."

"There, there's Johnny on the sidewalk. I wish the driver would go a little slower so Johnny could get a good eye-full. Shall I wave to him or not? I guess I just better pretend I don't see him. Yep, he saw me, but I'll bet he'll be burning up 'cause I didn't wave."

"And there's Mary and Jennie. Gosh, I'll bet they're jealous. Well, it ain't everybody that can wear clothes like I can. Mr. Blank sure knew his figuras when he picked me out as a model."

"Gosh, I wish this darned parade was over. I wonder if that feller is laughing at me or not. I'll bet he is. Well, he ain't no Beau Brommel himself, nobody'd ever hang collars on him for an advertisement."

"I wonder if I could buy these glad rags cheap now that they've been worn once. I guess I'll ask Mr. Blank when we get back. This sure does look neat on me."

Now girls am I right? Own up weren't those some of the thoughts that passed through your minds? What, you won't admit it? All right have it your own way.

But just to get back at you, didja know that one of you had your hat on crooked? None I'm not going to tell who it was. Just think it over and see if it was you.

And how about that stray lock of hair that hung down on one girl's forehead? No, it wasn't a curl, it was just a straight lock of hair. And who was the girl that had used too much lipstick?

There that ought to keep you guessing for a time.

KILLINGLY SHOWING PLENTY OF FOOTBALL SPIRIT

DANIELSON, Sept. 19—With prospects none too bright for a successful football season, Killingly's grid-men are showing the right spirit and eagerness, that comes before the opening game of a football season. Every man on the small squad is showing an unusual amount of pep, in order to place on the eleven. The going is tough for the squad, because they have to be in shape for Friday's game with Bartlett's.

With "Fritzie" Arnold barking them out, the squad went through an intensive signal drill with Coach Richardson correcting minor defects. After signal drill, Richardson demonstrated new plays which, from appearances, should net a good number of yards for the Red and White.

In the short scrimmage that followed Young, Greene and Lemanceos showed up well. Young is eligible this year, being out with studies last year, and Greene, a freshman, looks like a comer. The aerial work of Young and Arnold looks good for yardage. Arnold has a knack of pulling out of mid-air on the dead run. Killingly lacks a good punter this year; Young who is doing the punting gets off about 30 to 40 yards but at a great height. Bud Alvord, now being used at center, showed his versatility by getting some nice drop-kicks over the cross bars at 16 to 20 yards. George Kesavis, last year's tackle and letterman helped Coach Richardson with the line part of the workout. He had charge of a group of freshmen linesmen.

FOUR HITS IN NINTH GIVE SENATORS VICTORY

WASHINGTON, Sept. 19—(AP)—Four successive singles in the ninth inning gave Washington a pair of runs and a 2 to 1 victory over St. Louis today in the opening game of the series.

Fred Marberry and George Blaeholder battled through eight scoreless innings before the Browns broke the ice in their half of the last frame on two Washington errors and a single by O'Rourke. Three successive bunts followed by Sam West's single scored Washington's tallies.

The Brown's run was the only one scored off the Senators in 27 innings.

A triple play by St. Louis cut off a Washington threat in the eighth inning. Hayes doubled and held second while Marberry singled behind him. Judge hit a liner that caromed off Blaeholder's glove into Melillo's hands at second base, retiring one batter. Melillo touched second to double Hayes and touched Marberry on the line before he could return to first base.

MEMBERS OF NATIONAL LEAGUE PENNANT WINNERS REFUSE TO TAKE A HOLIDAY

CHICAGO, Sept. 19—(AP)—Joe McCarthy, manager of the new National league champions, today was a boss who couldn't get his men to take a holiday with pay.

When the Boston Braves clinched the pennant for the Cubs by defeating Pittsburgh yesterday "Marse Joe" decided to give his players a rest. He called several of them aside.

"You can have a couple days off now to rest up," he informed them.

"Not for a while yet," Hack Wilson, sudsy home run getter of the Bruins replied. "I am running for the home run championship and I'm tied with Chuck Klein and Mel Ott now. I want it and feel myself ready to go on a rampage any day."

"If it's all the same to you, I want to play," countered Rogers Hornsby, the only member of the squad who has played every inning of the season. "I have an outside chance to win my seventh batting championship and I am only two homers away from the three leaders. Anyway, I can keep in better shape for the Athletics by playing."

The "Rajah" wants to stretch his all-time National league record for scoring runs, which he established at 146 yesterday and stretched to 147 against the Giants today.

And so it was all down the Brain line.

VELVETMEN FACE STIFF OPPOSITION ON SUNDAY

With the Boston Twilight All Stars opposing them Sunday afternoon at the J. B. Martin grounds, the Velvetmen will have a tough afternoon taking this club into camp.

The Boston club is largely composed of players who have seen services in the Eastern league at various times. A few of the players to appear with this star attraction are Monroe, formerly of the Boston Red Sox and also with Providence; Buss Andrews of Quincy Twilight league, formerly in the American association and one of the best twirlers in this circuit; Chapman, the catching ace, is an old leaguer, having seen service in the New York State league; also Hughie Canavan, well known to the fans in this vicinity, who has been performing with the fast Taunton Twilight club.

Manager Eribeck of the J. B. Martin club is taking no chances with this club and is using the strongest collection of ball players that he can round up. During the past week he has been scouting around and it will be a fast outfit that will represent the J. B. Martin club on Sunday.

KOLP PITCHES REDS INTO TIE FOR SIXTH PLACE

CINCINNATI, Sept. 19.—(AP)— The Phillies today got only four hits off Ray Kolp who scored a 5 to 0 shut-out. The victory drew the Reds up into a tie with the visitors for sixth place. Gooch was hit on the hand by a foul tip, on the second ball pitched and forced to retire. Umpire Moran ejected Thompson from the Philadelphia dug out in the fifth inning for protesting a decision and chased Suce in the sixth.

RUMOR THAT DR. WILCE IS TO JOIN YALE COACHES

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Sept. 19(AP)—The statement by Dr. John W. Wilce, former head football coach at Ohio state university that he was going to New Haven, Conn., later this week and probably would see Yale athletic heads there gave impetus today to the rumors that he might become associated with the Yale coaching staff.

Dr. Wilce refused to either deny or confirm reports that he is to become consulting coach at Yale. "I am primarily interested practicing medicine at Columbus," he said.

Asked if he intended to see any Yale athletic officials while in New Haven, Dr. Wilce replied: "Naturallly, I expect I will see Mel Stevens (Marvin A. Stevens, head football coach). One can not break completely away from football after being associated with the game for as many years as I have."

Dr. Wilce resigned at Ohio state last year after having served as head football coach since 1912. His teams won the Western Conference championship in 1916, 1917 and 1920, largely through forward passing plays and he is given much of the credit for developing this type of play to the point of popularity that it now occupies in football.

Severe criticism by Ohio state Alumni because of the showings made by the teams after the successful 1921 season was believed instrumental in causing his resignation.

WILCE TO STUDY YALE'S PHYCIAL EDUCATION PLAN

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 19 (AP)—Marvin A. Stevens, head football coach for Yale, told the Associated Press tonight that although he had not been advised Dr. John W. Wilce, former head football coach at Ohio State university, was coming to New Haven, the reason he "might come" is to study Yale's physical education plan.

Coach Stevens denied any possibility of Dr. Wilce's becoming affiliated with the Yale coaching staff, even in the remote capacity of consulting coach.

"Dr. Wilce is returning to Ohio State university sometime this year as head of the physical education department." Coach Stevens declared "He has been making medical surveys in universities throughout the country and now wants to make one at Yale. His surveys are intended to help him develop knowledge he will use in his new capacity at Columbus."

LONDON, Sept. 19—(AP)—The soccer team from Worcester, Mass., which has been playing a series of matches in Worcester was entertained at dinner by the Pilgrim society. The lord mayor of London presided and expressed the hope that there would be many similar athletic exchanges between America and Great Britain. Donald Tullock, of the Worcester Sportsmen's association, responded on behalf of the team. He thanked their English hosts for their hospitality and their English opponents for their sportsmanship.

BENEDICT-BACHELOR GAME IS EVENT IN JEWETT CITY

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, Sept. 19.— Next Sunday afternoon is the time, Ashland park is the place, and the Bachelors and Benedicts are the unsurpassed attraction. Thursday afternoon a closely guarded meeting of the managers resulted in the selecting of the talent, each with a record for diamond work that few ever approach. "Jakie" Wechsler is to handle the married maulers, and Big Tom Barnett and Ed. (Soda Solon) Blake, the single stars. Some have wondered why the Bachelors need a dual management, but when one sees the gang, all doubts disappear.

The proposed line-ups which appear below are the result searching this locality with a fine tooth comb, and as will be noted the leading lights have actually been secured, and the borough is on tiptoe for the greatest ball game in all local history. The lineups:

Married men: Ed. Jodoin, p; Hector LeFevre, c; Babe Hiscox, 1b; Archilles Jodoin, 2b; Eudor LeClaire, ss; Bill Farrell, 3b; "Bub" Benjamin, lf; "Hal" Chase, cf; Johnnie LeClaire, rf; utility men, "Sheik Sullivan, Tom Barnett. Henry Ouillette

Leading among the special attractions will be the two pitchers. Brothers they are. Ed is the warden of the borough, an all around good man, but above everything else, a premier pitcher. "Bud" Jodoin, "of whom there is none other just like it." The style of pitching he is able to present is the result of many seasons of hard work on the mound. True they are brothers, but when the game is on family friendships cease.

For some reason not yet divulged the two umpires appeared before the Rotary this morning. Papers were made out, and it has leaked out from a bystander, who caught a glimpse of one mysterious document, that the words on top, as he was able to make them out, were: "I do hereby will and bequeath." "Pucky" Rioux, late of the Senators will pass on balls and strikes. Geo. Tormey, of the borough electric squad, will tell who is out and who is safe on bases, if he says so, it is so. If it is desired to locate any one Sunday that lives in New London county, don't call the house, go to Ashland park included in the lineups are a dozen men who saw the House of David game last Sunday. They have already cut loose from the barber shop. Manager Wechsler said tonight that if his Married men lose the game he will never shave again.

The scores for the four games played:

Married Men	2	1	9 12—24
Single Men	7	13	9 11—40

ROUTIS RETURNS TO TRAINING FOR BOUT

HARTFORD, Sept. 19—(AP)—Andre Routis, featherweight champion of the world, resumed his training today for a defense of his title in this city next Monday night, when he meets Bat Battalino, of Hartford, in a 15-round bout.

Routis, who is doing his conditioning in a Holyoke gymnasium, boxed four rounds, two each with Jerry Emard and Jackie Dupont. He devoted most of his attention to the bodies of his sparring partners, indicating that he means to pound away at Battalino's mid-section. He said he weighed about 128 at the close of his workout.

Battalino, weighing 128 before he started work, boxed six fast and furious rounds with Frankie Mack, former featherweight battler, and Mickey Fiahive, in this city. Battalino showed better than at any time in his training.

Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue, Connecticut's one-man boxing commission, returned here today and conferred with Promoter Ed Hurley. He was informed that the crowd was expected to be the largest in the history of boxing in this state.

PIRATES' ERRORS HELP BRAVES TO WIN

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Sept. 19—(AP)—Errors on the part of the Pittsburgh Pirates allowed the Boston Braves to score four runs in the seventh after being blanked by Burleigh Grimes for six innings, and the lapse contributed much to the Braves' 6 to 3 defeat of the Pirates here today.

The defeat left the Pirate-Giant race for second honors in the National league race still in doubt, with the Pirates still four and a half games ahead of New York by virtue of the Chicago victory over the Giants today. The score:

Mrs. Allyn and Mrs. G. S. B. Leonard gave the impressions which they received when they visited the sanctuary. After a brief business session, the club adjourned to the Mason's Island Yacht club for tea. Colorful tables were set in the dining room, and all greatly enjoyed the social hour.

RELIEF FROM CURSE OF CONSTIPATION

A Battle Creek physician says, "Coastipation is responsible for more misery than any other cause."

But immediate relief has been found. A tablet called Rexall Orderlies has been discovered. This tablet attracts water from the system into the lazy, dry, evacuating bowel called the colon. The water loosens the dry food waste and causes a gentle, thorough, natural movement without forming a habit or ever increasing the dose.

Stop suffering from constipation. Chew a Rexall Orderlie at night. Next day bright. Get 24 for 25c today at the nearest Rexall or Liggett Drug Store.

Gillette of Pleasant street, Colchester and Miss Frieda Louise Machholz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Machholz of Filley street, Bloomfield were united in marriage at 2 p. m. Wednesday, at the Bloomfield Federated church, Rev. A. J. Dressler, pastor of the Bloomfield church performed the ceremony which was of a simple nature, there being no bridal attendants. The bride was attired in a gown of white moire, wore a veil of princess lace and carried a bouquet of white roses. Only close relatives of the couple were present.

After the ceremony, there was a dinner and reception at the home of the bride's parents. After a short wedding trip to New York state, they will reside in Ithaca, N. Y., where the groom will continue his studies at the graduate school at Cornell university. Regret Mr. Phillips' Death

Many of the older Colchester residents were saddened to learn of the death, on Tuesday at the Lawrence and Memorial hospital, New London, of Frederick I. Phillips, 67, representative of the town of Montville in the state legislature and at one time a well known and respected resident of Colchester.

Mr. Phillips was born in Waterford, December 29, 1861. He had been in the plumbing business during the greater part of his life. During his residence in Colchester he was with F. F. "Keep Sweet and Keep Movin'."

Homely phrases of our Southland bright—
  Keep steady step to the fiam of the drum;
Touch to the left—eyes to the right—
  Sing with the soul though the lips be dumb
Hard to be good when the wind's in the east;
  Hard to be gay when the heart is down;
When "they that trouble you are increased,"
  When you look for a smile and see a frown.
    But
  "Keep sweet and keep movin'."

Sorrow will shade the blue sky gray—
  Gray is the color our brothers wore;
Sunshine will scatter the clouds away;
  Azure will gleam in the skies once more.
Colors of patience and hope are they—
  Always at even in one they blend;
Tinting the heavens by night and day,
  Over our hearts to the journey's end,
    Just
  "Keep sweet and keep movin'."

Hard to be sweet when the throng is dense,
  When elbows jostle and shoulders crowd;
Easy to give and to take offense
  When the touch is rough and the voice is loud;
"Keep to the right" in the city's throng;
  "Divide the road" on the broad highway;
There's one way right when everything is wrong;
  "Easy and fair goes far in a day."
    Just
  "Keep sweet and keep movin'."

The quick taunt answers the hasty word—
  The lifetime chance for a "help" is missed;
The muddiest pool is a fountain stirred,
  A kind hand clinched makes an ugly fist.
When the nerves are tense and the mind is vexed
  The park lies close to the magazine;
Whisper a hope to the soul perplexed—
  Banish the fear with a smile serene—
    Just
  "Keep sweet and keep movin'."

—Robert J. Burdette.

Mabel—Now that I'm all dressed, where shall we go?
Jack—Er, let's go swimming.—Boston Transcript.

"I say, I didn't realize that your friend was such a decided blonde."
"Ah, but she only decided recently."

"Just been lunchin' with your husband darling."
"So good of you, angel, but I do hope it won't come to his secretary's ears; she's so jealous."—Boston Transcript.

"Did you say your husband has been deceiving you?"
"Yes, the brute! He has been walking to the office and spending the bus fare I gave him every morning."—Vancouver Province.

"These are topsy-turvy times, are they not? The line of demarcation between the sexes has almost reached the vanishing point."
"Yes. The gals are so buoyant and the boys are so gallant."—Pathfinder.

She: Is it dangerous to drive with one hand?
He: You bet. More than one fellow has run into a church doing it.—Exchange.

Young Lady—Conductor, will I have time to say good by to my friends?
Conductor—I'm afraid not, miss. This train leaves in an hour.—The Pathfinder.

Employer (critically)—This letter has a good many incomplete words, Miss Pounder.
New Stenog—Well, you see, sir, whenever I take dictation from a handsome man, I lose my 'e's' and drop my 'i's'.—Boston Transcript.

"Poor Bill! He got his wish and died with his boots on."
"Yes, and with good measure, at that."
"What do you mean, with good measure?"
"He also died with one boot on—the accelerator."—Exchange.

Mistress: "So you have a situation with my friend, Mrs. Long, Mary? Did you tell her you have only been with me for two months?"
Mary: "Yes, mum, and she said that if I could stay with you for two months that was a good enough reference for her."—Montreal Star.

To fix an illusive date in Mary Ellen's memory her teacher drilled her—patiently, persistently—in the old rhyme, "In fourteen hundred and ninety-two, Columbus sailed the ocean blue."
On the morrow when her teacher called upon her recite, with the utmost assurance she joyously announced, "In fourteen hundred and ninety-three Columbus sailed the deep blue sea."—Christian Science Monitor.

While fishing in a tributary stream of Pitt river, Charles Grant, of Redding, Cal., had the surprise of his life when he hooked a deer instead of a trout. The frightened animal was released by Grant and went scampering over the hills.

Rivaling thrilling movie stunts, a gondola car loaded with forty tons of pig iron, broke away from a freight train at Boyertown, Pa., and tore down the line for sixteen miles before it slowed up and stopped on an upgrade. It is not always the loveliest creature that feeds on the daintiest diet. The chuckwalla lizard of the southwest, the second-largest lizard in the United States, is not exactly a Ziegfeld beauty among the animals, yet his appetite runs very strongly to flowers. A specimen recently captured in the Grand Canyon had in its stomach 116 flower-heads of three species of composite plants, and three flowers of the yellow bean bush. These represented the breakfast of the chuckwalla. In his second stomach—the reptile has two—was another mass of flower tissue, but more advanced in digestion. The chuckwalla has for years been a favorite dish among the Indians and many a lost prospector has overcome the white man's repugnance to eating "varmints," to find with surprise that this big lizard is made of good meat. After the recently-captured specimen had yielded up its skin for museum purposes, its flesh was roasted and eight persons had a chance to find out what chuckwalla meat tastes like.

THE CRIME WAVE AND THE HOME

(Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Those of us who are not so deep in the counsels of the Almighty or so fully informed of His purposes and methods as your professional "reformer" is apt to be are sometimes sorely put to it to understand why things are as they are.

The cheap and lazy sophistry which begs the question by mouthing the pretense that "whatever is, is right," rather irritates such as can't help seeing so many things which are, yet are manifestly and monumentally wrong.

Such, for instance, as Russian bolshevism, and Papuan cannibalism, and Palestinian racial hates, and lynch law, and the daily miscarriage of justice in our courts.

Such, for other instances, as the sending of men like Borah and Norris and La Follette and Cole Blease to the United States senate; such as the deliberate and repeated action of the citizens of New York city and Philadelphia in regularly committing their local governments to the hands of known grafters, treasury-robbers, corruptionists.

Such as that impairment and degeneracy of public and private morals which has come to be called "a crime wave".

Every self-appointed expounder of omnipotence has his custom-made, ready-to-wear explanation of this crime wave. Many of these lucubrations remind one of "Ike" Bromley's famous characterization of a rival editor who "mistook for remorse the regurgitations of a sour stomach."

You and I, who do not profess to be wiser than omniscience, are more grievously puzzled.

If, instead of ascribing that crime wave to some mysterious dispensation of Providence, we imputed its origin to purely human greed and dishonesty?—but that would trench dangerously on the borders of heresy and must, of course, be avoided.

Nevertheless, while I own up to being as much in the dark as any one else as to the ultimate cause and possible cure of the crime wave, I want, very modestly and tentatively, to suggest two or three ideas which may throw a candle-power ray on one phase of it.

A truck-gardener, bringing his produce to Kansas City for sale, reported to The Star of that city, the other day, that his route was infested by piratical gangs of small boys. "If the drivers do not see them," he said, "they slip in behind the trucks, slit the canvas covers or sacks in which vegetables are contained, let the produce drop on the road, and pick it up when the trucks have passed on." He himself lost 15 dozen ears of corn on one trip, and a neighbor reported the loss of several bushels of string beans, just when they were at the highest price of the season.

Now, just analyze that minor item of current news. Small boys hiding along the highways, watching their chances to steal corn—and beans. Remembering one's own boyhood with its eternal hunger and its utter irresponsibility, one can understand a "gang" of youngsters tagging after a truck hoping that an ear or two of green corn might drop off. Some of us seem to remember when it didn't seem either wrong or dangerous to raid a corn-field for a few "roasting ears" to take to our lairs and scorch over a brush fire till the kernels were black and charred and oh, so sweet! And there is no very felonious distinction between doing that and picking up a dropped ear from the roadway. Or even from giving it some excuse for dropping from the load.

But beans? String beans? Green, tasteless pods, utterly inedible except after long boiling in a pot and expert seasoning? Who ever heard of a boy who would even carry off a bag to his secret camp in the woods, if he was given it with the giver's blessing thrown in?

The budding Dick Turpins who stole the Kansas farmer's beans off his truck, stole them to take home for mother to cook. If they didn't get enough, first time, the probabilities are that they were sent back to collect some more.

One thing is absolutely certain, the parent to whom those beans were carried knew that they had not been bought or paid for. Yet the fact that thefts of such vegetables were not sporadic and unusual, but so regular and frequent as to become serious losses to the truck gardeners, does not indicate any serious attempt on the part of the parents to check the thieving tendencies of their offspring.

Instead, it strongly suggests that they were tacitly, if not explicitly, encouraged by their parents to keep on picking up anything they could lay their hands on without too much danger of being caught. They were being initiated into if not instructed in the great art of how to get something for nothing.

"To get something for nothing." This desire may not explain all the mysteries of the crime wave, but it certainly throws a ray of light on some of its phases.

There is no wide ethical difference between the Fagin who sends his apprentices in crime out to steal handkerchiefs or watches and the cook who sends her boys out to steal string beans for dinner. What difference there is lies in degree, not in quality. Stealing is stealing, whether it involves $1,000 in cash or two pounds of string beans in a paper bag.

The ominous feature of it is that petty stealing is almost sure to lead up to larger and larger thefts. "Great oaks from little acorns grow."

A grizzled old warrior, with the right to wear heaven knows how many decorations for valor, once said that one of the things which actually frightened him was to see a small boy stealing sugar from mother's sugar-bowl. It was not that the mere taking of the sweet lumps was so nefarious an offense, but the fact that stealing mother's sugar is often but the first step on the road to stealing Mrs. Vanastorbilt's diamonds. As the twig is bent, the tree's inclined.

A good many of our most thoughtful educators are coming to see and say that we've been giving too much attention in our schools to such things as fractions and free-hand drawing, and too little to such things as right and wrong. We may look forward with hope if not confidence to some improvement in the schools in this direction.

But the schools can never take the place of the home in the starting of children along the right road. The schools may help train young ideas but the seed of those ideas is sown in the home.

If father and mother are lazy or lax or even short-sighted and weak, worst of all, if they're too engrossed in their own pursuits to start their children right, all the efforts of the schoolmaster will be of small avail.

All the education of all the academies and colleges will never counterveil the tendencies implanted in the home during infancy and pre-school days. Nor will either school-master or school-ma'am ever be able wholly to correct a wrong start. One may prune and train ever so carefully or assiduously without being able to make an oak out of poison ivy.

Now, I couldn't be dragooned into saying or thinking that all the crime in the world is due to faulty home-training But some of it is. And the responsibility for that portion rests squarely and heavily on the shoulders of those who control the home.

The attempt to remake human nature into something more nearly divine by one sweeping gesture or any combination of regulatory laws is manifestly and foolishly futile.

"Heaven is not reached at a single bound
But we build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the lofty skies
Step by step, and round by round."

An airplane has recently flown around the world and another has made the astonishing speed of almost 370 miles an hour over a measured course. Yet it is little more than a quarter of a century since the first airplane wabbled uncertainly 50 feet from a sand-hill on the North Carolina coast. The development of the whole great mail plane system has come, not in one mighty stride, but by a thousand little improvements and adaptations, each one small in itself, but tremendous in their cumulative effects.

We can't abolish crime by any "Be it enacted," nor by any tidal wave of universal reformation. We must attack it at its beginnings. No other agency is so magnificently adapted to this purpose as the home. No other, sad to say, seems of late so utterly neglected.

When I say "the home," I mean with special emphasis the farm home. There are still eight or ten million such in this broad land. Of the city home I have less knowledge, and the little I have minimizes my hope of much help from that quarter. But the farm home, by reason of its isolation and its comparative independence of outside influences seems to me as nearly ideal a nursery for better men and women as this un-ideal world affords.

The farm born child starts life under the immediate tutelage of Nature. And Nature, however harsh or even cruel she may seem at times, is always honest. She never grows melons on pussley vines, nor hickory nuts on alder bushes. She never turns Timothy into quack-grass nor makes water run up-hill. Daily and nightly association with her is unlikely to change honesty of purpose and method into rascality or crime.

It has often been said that the real leaders of city life are imported from homes on hilly back farms. All the more reason, if this be true, that they get their start along honest lines.

THE FARMER

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS

NORTHERN LAWNS SHOULD BE SEEDED IN THE FALL

The urge to indulge in growing green things usually reaches the point of action in the average individual in the spring, about the time the mail man delivers the seed catalogue.

As a result of this "spring fever" many lawns are seeded in the spring instead of in the fall. Seeding northern lawns in the spring is a fundamental error, according to R. A. Oakley, of the United States department of agriculture.

Northern turf grasses, Doctor Oakley explains, may be likened to winter wheat in certain vegetative habits of growth. Winter wheat, as is well known, requires for its best production fall sowing in order that it may stool out before the severe winter arrives and be ready for the business of making a crop the following spring. A careful study of the northern lawn grasses, he says, shows that they should be sown in the late summer or early fall if they are to compete successfully with the noxious weeds the next spring and subsequently.

Seed of most southern lawn grasses, however, should be sown in the spring, consequently southern lawns usually escape the error that so badly handicaps many northern lawns.

WILD GARLIC CONTROL STARTS WITH FALL PLOWING

Timely plowing late each fall and again early in the spring, followed by the growing of thoroughly cultivated row crops, are the essential steps in the so-called cultural method of controlling wild garlic, says the United States department of agriculture. In most places this system must be followed for at least three years in order to obtain a satisfactory cleanup of the weed.

Details of the method are given in Leaflet 43-L, Wild Garlic and its Control, just issued by the United States department of agriculture. The leaflet also gives a description of the plant and of other plants often mistaken for garlic. Farmers should be able to recognize wild garlic, the department says, as it is more difficult to eradicate than the other species.

Grazing with livestock, especially sheep, for several seasons, as closely as may be safe without serious injury to the pasture, aids in keeping down the growth of garlic in steep, rocky, or wooded pastures that can not be plowed. When dairy cows are pastured in garlicky fields, it is necessary to remove them from the pasture four to seven hours before milking to eliminate entirely the garlic flavor and odor from the milk. Milk cows should not be turned into such pastures in the spring until suitable forage plants are large enough to furnish good grazing.

PIGS DO NOT "EAT LIKE PIGS" WHEN FED FROM SELF-FEEDER

"Hoggishness" and "eating like a pig" are traditional phrases to describe unmannerly greediness and gluttony. Recent experiments in the feeding of pigs suggest that the phrases do not always apply. When pigs are fed by hand they do, in fact, rush in to make sure of their share of the feed. But, put hogs in a pasture and they graze leisurely and in contentment.

If, instead of feeding by hand, the owner installs a self-feeder from which the hogs and pigs may eat what they want, when they want it, and in whatever quantity they desire, they soon lose their gluttonous ways.

Commenting on a series of comparative feeding tests in which sows were self-fed and hand-fed, E. Z. Russell of the United States department of agriculture, said a noticeable fact about the sows in the self-fed lots was that "there never was any crowding at the feeders. Scarcely ever were there more than two or three sows eating at the same time, even when a dozen or more sows were being fed from the one feeder. Only a small quantity would be consumed at one time. It was taken slowly and apparently thoroughly masticated and digested."

Probably this moderate eating and thorough digestion accounts for some of the good results of self-feeding. The natural presumption of most persons who have seen hogs eat would be that they would waste a great amount of grain and would overeat. The first thought would be to question whether the saving in labor would not be more than balanced by waste of feed. Instead of this, careful experimentation shows that the labor cost is only one saving from self-feeding. Self-fed hogs eat less grain than is usually fed by hand. They make better gains from the quantity consumed, and the quantity of grain consumed per pound of gain is lower than with hogs fed on a platform in a feed lot.

PROPER MOWING ENDS CRAB GRASS MENACE

Any trick in horticultural practice which will save hand digging of weeds from the lawn is worth noticing. Chemical weed killers in general cannot be used on the lawn, yet there is one especially compounded for chickweed which is safe and very effective.

Crab grass may be eradicated by destroying all the seed, because this kind is an annual. Just how this is done is explained in the following extract from Your Garden.

"In the garden, crab grass will grow one or two feet high before it goes to seed. If the lawn is mowed, it will grow horizontally and go to seed. But if you coax it along for the first three weeks in August by now mowing, it will grow up four to six inches and start to go to seed. Then use the grass catcher on the mower, mow both ways, rake the creeping stalks erect and mow again, being careful that the mowings all get collected.

You will find that you have the seed for next year's crop in hand for destruction and none in the lawn, if you have done the job thoroughly. The lawn will not become reinfested for two or three years at least. This method leaves no bare spots and at no time disfigures the appearance of the lawn."

LATHAM RASPBERRY PRUNING TESTS HELD

Latham is a relatively new red raspberry which is very vigorous and productive, although it is claimed that the fruit lacks the high quality of the Cuthbert. Its hardiness and resistance to mosaic and other diseases, however, are greatly in its favor.

Growers of this variety have been uncertain as to the proper amount of early spring pruning. Accordingly, the Minnesota agricultural experiment station tested various methods, cutting the canes back to the hights of 15 inches, 36 inches and 60 inches. The shortest canes bore much less fruit, but there was little difference in the yields of the 36 and 60-inch canes, the latter bearing a slightly greater weight of fruit but smaller berries. Thirty-six inches was considered the best height to prune Latham in Minnesota.

BLIND RESTAURATEUR ASPIRES TO POLITICS

AUSTIN, Tex.—(AP)—Until the legislature ejected his cold drink and lunch counter from the Texas capitol, A. F. Nichols, a blind man, served hungry solons.

Now he wants to be one of them. In announcing his candidacy for the house of representatives, Nichols said it was not motivated by the removal of his business.

"Just decided I could be of service to my state," he commented.

UNION

The section of state road which has been under construction from Charlton to the state (Connecticut-Massachusetts) line, just a short distance from Mashapaug, is nearing completion. When this section is finished there will be a fine automobile road direct from Hartford to Worcester. This road passes through Sturbridge instead of Southbridge, Mass. A small bus has been running from Worcester to Hartford and passing through Union and Stafford Springs, for some weeks.

Tuesday brought a much needed rain. It came in gentle showers so the thirsty earth could absorb every drop. Cattle, and even the wild birds and game animals, have not had all the water they have wanted for several weeks. One farmer in the east part of town has been getting water from a brook in Woodstock for his cattle, bringing two truck loads a day. This method seemed preferable to driving the herd over the highway to the brook. Many have had to get barrels of water from brooks and ponds for household use during the weeks past.

Summer cottages at Lake Mashapaug are beginning to close up for the season, especially those who had children who were returning to school. It has been a lovely sunny summer for those in cottages around the lake and there was plenty of water near at hand.

Dr. and Mrs. Samuel McCune Lindsay are returning to New York this week. The former has been professor of social legislation in Columbia university for several years.

Mrs. W. Y. Brown, who summered at Mashapaug, returned to her home in Philadelphia last week. She celebrated her ninetieth birthday Sept. 17 and friends here sent greetings for her to receive on that day.

Mrs. Sarah Ballow returned home Sunday evening after a very enjoyable vacation spent at the cottage of her daughter, Mrs. George Howard, on Willimantic Camp Ground. Mrs. Ballow attended the camp meetings, then remained for a visit.

Prof. and Mrs. F. Alexander Magoun are entertaining Dr. and Mrs. Doak Lowry of Evanston, Ill., this week.

Miss Mary E. Arard is making her home in Bridgeport while teaching in Stratford for her second year. She has a special class in cooking and sewing.

MOOSUP

Miss Elsie Maggia returns Friday to resume her studies at Storrs college, this being her junior year.

Miss Irene Caron of New London has been calling on friends in town.

W. C. C. Hill and Fred Dawley were in Allentown, R. I., Saturday.

Sorrow for Dr. Adams' Death

"YACHTS" WILL RACE ON NEVADA DRY LAKE

TONOPAH, Nev.—(AP)—There is not an open body of water within 100 miles of Tonopah but plans are being formulated here for the organization of the Tonopah Yacht club.

The "yachts," sure enough, will have regulation sails but will skim on bicycle wheels over a dry lake bed, covering 15 square miles on the edge of the city. The lake bed is almost as hard as concrete and is level, with a good breeze prevailing at all times.

Falling Hair The Result of Nervous Scalp

9 Out of 10 Men and Women Have Nervous Scalp, Probably the Commonest Cause of Dandruff and Thin, Faded, Brittle, Falling Hair.

Nervous scalp is commonly the condition causing a too oily, too dry, tight, tender, itchy dandruff-caked scalp, and thin, sickly-looking hair.

To correct and prevent nervous scalp and the harm it does to even naturally fine heads of hair, Parisian Sage was scientifically developed.

From the very first application, Parisian Sage has a wonderfully soothing, relaxing effect on the scalp nerves, increases the blood supply to the dying hair-roots, insures them the nourishment they so badly need for vigorous new hair growth.

Parisian Sage is easy to use, perfectly harmless, and not the least bit sticky or greasy.

If you want a clean, cool scalp, free from every trace of dandruff—if you want a fine, thick head of live, attractive hair—hair that looks well all the time—get a bottle of Parisian Sage today at Lee and Osgood's or any drugstore, and use it according to the simple directions.

Honduras broke the world's record for any country's annual shipment of bananas by exporting 27,462,141 bunches last year.

No one can deny the importance of having the hair arranged in the style best suited to the individual type. Much of the effect is lost, however, unless the hair is kept soft, abundant, lustrous.

A million busy women and girls know the easiest way to keep the hair in perfect condition is with Danderine. The first application will show you how marvelously it removes excess oil from the hair; cleanses it; makes it sparkle with new life and lustre. It's so simple to use Danderine. All you do is put a little on your brush each time you arrange your hair! The consistent use of Danderine will dissolve the worst crust of dandruff; soothe, heal the scalp; stimulate the growth of long, silky abundant hair.

Danderine isn't sticky or oily; doesn't show. It makes the hair easy to manage holds it in place for hours. "Set" your waves with it and see how much longer they stay in.

MICHAEL MCMANUS, MASON, INJURED WHEN SCAFFOLD FALLS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., Sept. 19—Michael McManus, 54, of 56 Catherine street, Worcester, Mass., while mounting to a temporary scaffolding at one of the brick piers being erected at the front of the business block on the Colonial club site, Main street, got a bad fall to the ground about 11:30 a. m. Thursday, when the platform collapsed. He was thrown a distance of 10 or 12 feet and a number of bricks landed on him, one making a deep laceration on his head. PLENTIFUL SUPPLY OF CALL MONEY SENT BULLS ON RAMPAGE IN MARKET

NEW YORK, Sept. 19—(AP)—Retention of a 5 1-2 per cent discount rate by the Bank of England and a plentiful influx of call money sent bulls on another wild rampage on the stock market today, but it proved short-lived. A wave of selling swept into the market late in the session which wiped out much of the day's advance and turned price trends confusingly irregular.

Although most estimates indicated that the federal reserve weekly call loan figures, to be released after the close, would show little change, traders became apprehensive as the hour for the federal reserve reports drew nearer, and sold heavily.

The feeling that the federal reserve reports might contain bad news was amply justified. For, despite estimates to the contrary, the call loan compilation disclosed an increase of $95,000,000 to another new high record.

A few warnings have emanated from conservative quarters of late that heavy distribution was going on under cover of the sharp up-bidding of leading issues, and odd lot houses have stated that the public has been coming into the market with renewed eagerness. Many traders, therefore, interpreted the loan figures as indicating that stock has been passing from strong to weak hands, for the increase in loans occurred during a week of sagging prices and heavy selling. The figures, cover the period ended last night, so yesterday's upturn could not account for any part of it, for yesterday's trades weren ot settled until today.

After renewing at 10 per cent, the call money rate was shaded point by point to 6, indicating that the 10 per cent rate had attracted a large volume of funds, and that the tightening effects of the mid-month settlements, appearing sooner than expected, were also passing earlier than usual. Time money, however, remained unchanged at 9 per cent.

The loan figures showed that out of town banks were the principle contributors, putting $36,000,000 into the market. Income tax payments evidently checked the flow of funds from individuals and corporations, as loan for "others" gained but $10,000,000. The federal reserve condition statements disclosed a slight reduction in reserve credit outstanding. Moderate increases in holdings of accentances and government securities bought in the open market were offset by reduced rediscounting.

The increase in loans comes on top of four successive weeks of large increases. In five weeks more than $600,000,000 have been added to the total, which, with this week's addition, reaches $6,569,000,000, a little more than $2,000,000,000 above the total a year ago. Confirmed bulls have endeavored to explain away the rises in loans by the heavy volume of new financing, but many traders fail to see how this could more than offset the normal liquidation of loans in a declining market, such as has been experienced in the past fortnight.

Outside of developments in credit, the days news was meagre. The movement toward branch and chain banking moved forward apace. National City proposed to acquire Corn Exchange, giving it a total of about 100 branches in the New York metropolitan area. Bank of Manhattan Co., arranged to form a holding company which will permit chain banking. Crocker Wheeler announced a 10-for-1 split-up. J. I. Case announced offering of valuable rights after the close.

Commercial Solvents was a sensational performer, shooting up 106 points to 700 then reacting to close at 645. Air Reduction rose more than 11 points to a new peak, and American International, American Telephone, American and Foreign Power, Atlantic Gulf, Best & Co., F. G. Shattuck, Newport, Co., Republic Steel and Woolworth reached new peaks with substantial gains, some of which were lost before the close. General Electric and Montgomery Ward made fair gains. Merchandising shares were prominent in the upturn, and rails were firm.

Such leaders as U. S. Steel and Radio closed 3 and 2 points lower, and oils were inclined to ease. Standard of New Jersey slipping back a point in a heavy turnover. Auburn Auto dropped 14 points, and Cutler Hammer, American Water Works, Johns Manville, Western Union, and Standard Gas were among issues to lose 3 to 6 points. Motors eased. Chrysler selling within about a point of the year's low.

Commodities moved in narrow ranges. Wheat and corn sagged less than a cent a bushel on bearish weather and crop reports. Cotton closed practically unchanged.

Foreign exchanges were irregular, sterling holding at the lowest rates of they ear, with cables at $4.84 5-8, while the Japanese yen continued to climb, reaching within 1 1-2 cents of parity.

The board also approved construction of a $5,000,000 freight terminal at Dubuque, Ia., and of about 12.1-2 miles of four-track line in the Chicago suburban territory, to cost about $2,000,000.

The Perryman Electric Company, Inc. announced today that it had sold its entire production of radio tubes for the next six months and had stopped taking orders for the remainder of the year.

Stockholders of the Straus Investing corporation have approved a 2-for-1 split-up of the original authorized issue of 300,000 shares of common stock.

Structural steel awards totaled 50,000 tons last week, compared with 44,000 in the preceding week. Inquiries for about 57,000 tons were reported, as against 25,000 tons in the previous week.

The net operating income of the Chicago & Alton railroad for last month was $445,451, compared with $424,657 in August, 1928.

A substantial majority of the stocks of Abraham and Straus, Wm. Filenes Sons Co., and F. & R. Lazarus & Co., have been deposited under the plan to merge the three companies, it was announced today. A new holding company will be incorporated in Delaware with 2,000,000 shares of no par common capital stock authorized. One share of the stock will be exchanged for each share of Filenes deposited, 1 1-2 shares for each share of Abraham and Straus and 19 shares for each 37 shares of Lazarus. TENNESSEE TO LOSE ITS FOOTBALL COACH

KNOXVILLE—(AP)—The University of Tennessee stands to lose a good football coach and West Point, or some other institution of higher learning, gain one.

After the end of the present football season, the assignment of Major Robert Neyland, R. O. T. C. commander at the university and coach of football, will have ended. In fact, he was allowed by the government to remain at the university a year longer than his regular assignment, but if he is to remain with the university after this season, he will doubtless have to resign from government service. Twelve years more in the army would entitle him to retirement with pension.

The possibility that he will continue in the service and accept a coaching position of some sort at West Point is brought up by some while others believe the coach will go to some eastern university for a fancy figure. He has received several offers.

His Tennessee team won 22 games, lost two and tie one, in three seasons of play.

Baseball Most Popular

CORVALLIS, Ore.—(AP)—Baseball, with 30 per cent of the male students participating, is the most popular sport at the University of Oregon. Track, with 63 entrants, headed varsity sports with football next, 52 signing up for the game.

Many Ducks Poisoned

SALT LAKE CITY—(AP)—Alkali poisoning in the streams has caused hundreds of thousands of wild ducks to perish near here this year. Sportsmen have been trying to frighten the fowls out of the area into fresher waters.

Adopts Freshman Rule

SPOKANE, Wash.—(AP)—Gonzaga university, consistently the possessor of one of the Pacific coast's strongest football teams, will apply the freshman rule, for the first time this season, to non-conference games.

Looks Toward 100

JOPLIN, Mo.—(AP)—Col. A. J. P. Barnes, 86-year-old civil war veteran, has set his goal at 100 years. He is doorkeeper of the state house regularly here when not at the capital.

LET CLOROX DO THE JOBS YOU DREAD

"I couldn't keep house without CLOROX"

Thousands of women from Coast to Coast are telling each other that Clorox is a priceless household aid. And well they may! For Clorox does heavy duty all over the house. In the kitchen it bleaches the grayest wooden drainboards, cleanses porcelain, tile and enamel, removes stains from pots and pans. In the laundry it bleaches, and removes stains—even scorched spots and mildew—from white cottons and linens, making them spotless. . . In the pantry it polishes glassware and removes stains from crockery and china. In the bathroom it makes porcelain sparkle, cleanses and deodorizes toilet bowls and removes stains from painted surfaces. In short, it is the modern woman's "elbow grease." Directions for these and other uses on bottle.

TELETYPE APPARATUS FAVORED BY CITY MANAGER

It is almost a certainty that the New London police department efficiency will be improved greatly by an act of the city council for it is planned that a teletype apparatus will be installed at police headquarters. A recommendation to the city manager has been made that the teletype be installed and it remains for the council to approve the recommendation. The teletype is the output of the Southern New England Telephone company and would connect the department with 17 other departments in this state, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. Included in the departments with which the local teletype apparatus will be hooked up, if present plans are carried out, are the state police and state motor vehicle departments, the police departments of Willimantic, Middletown, Waterbury, New Britain, Meriden, New Haven, Bridgeport, Branford, Stamford, Springfield, Mass., and Westerly. The teletype is similar to a typewriter and whenever a communication is broadcast from any department having this apparatus it is received by every such department. If a fugitive is sought by one department the others receive the alarm at the same instant and in that way much time is saved by the broadcasting of the information to all departments. The cost of installing and maintaining the apparatus is but $50 per month.

NEW LONDON, Sept. 19. — Mrs. Rose Staplin, wife of E. W. Staplin, 65, of Gilead road, Waterford, died at Bishop De Goesbriand hospital, Burlington, Vt., last night as a result of injuries sustained Friday last when the automobile in which she was riding with her husband and son, Theodore R. When near Burlington a herd of cattle suddenly appeared in the highway and in an effort to avoid plowing into the cows, Theodore Staplin, who was driving, guided the car to one side of the highway. The suddeness of the turn caused the auto to skid and leave the road, resulting in the machine plunging down an embankment and overturning. All of the occupants were taken to the hospital, and Mrs. Staplin's condition from the time she was admitted was so serious that her recovery was not anticipated. Her husband sustained a fractured leg and injury to his eye that may yet result in loss of vision. He is still at the hospital. HARD DAILY LABOR FOR CADET MASCOT

Instead of being the pampered pet of the cadet corps he pulls a post garbage wagon when not holding forth in his infrequent periods of glory as West Point's football mascot.

Only on the occasion of the Army's biggest games is the monotony of his somewhat lazy existence in the shafts of a refuse cart broken—perhaps not more than half a dozen times in a season. Then he comes into his own as honored participant in all the color and pageantry for which such contests are noted.

On the day of the game he is relieved of this regular assignment, placed in the hands of a hostler, who shines and sleeks him appropriately and drapes over his back a blanket in Army colors. An extra portation of oats is included.

Whether on trips to far places with the squad or at home then, he prances with a lighter step, his head is held proudly higher. Oftentimes he leads a parade of corps around the gridiron before the starting whistle. During the game he sometimes is permitted to stand on the sidelines a short while and later to head a parade of victory.

Then, he is led back to his nameless existence with the garbage wagon, there probably to await in equine anticipation his next call to glory.

The Army has no place for idlers, such as a full-time football mascot would be, so the mule must earn his keep.

UNIVERSITY OF MEXICO STARTS FOOTBALL TEAM

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—(AP)— The Universtiy of Mexico, which only recently was inoculated with the football germ, may produce some stellar teams within a few years.

Reginald Root, former Yale star, admittedly faces a big task in drilling his pupils in gridiron fundamentals. Yet he will find them apt athletes, as coaches of prep school elevens in San Antonio will testify.

With its large Mexican population, San Antonio has several junior schools attended exclusively by children of Mexican percentage. Their grid teams usually make serious bids for the city championship. They excel particularly in basketball.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

There have been many children on the screen but never a pair so naive and frank, and so typical of Young America of today than Tom Browne and Patricia Deering, the "screen children" of Walter Huston in his dynamic all-talking picture "The Lady Lies," now showing at the Broadway. Aged 14 and 16, these two youngsters, in the course of this thrilling story of a man's infatuation, attempt in the headstrong way of youth to straighten things out and their childish attempts to win their loved daddy away from the woman he loves, will tug at your heartstrings, while at the same time you are laughing at their crude but forceful methods. Huston was never better in any of his many strong characters, while Claudette Colbert is so alluringly sweet as to be breath-taking. The film runs the scale of emotion, and while daring and sophisticated, is so delicately handled and the dilgoe so real and so wonderfully produced that yesterday's audiences not only saw the picture—they lived the story. This is not a picture, but a slice of life presented in a startlingly realistic manner, with plenty of fast, peppy humor to balance the vividly dramatic situations which abound in the production. Selected vitaphone specialties, featuring the All-Girl Revue, the Palm Beach Four, and McKay & Ardine, are also shown, together with the latest Fox Movietone News. Sunday's program promises a treat, with Charles (Buddy) Rogers and Nancy Carroll, film sweethearts of "Close Harmony," again sweethearts in a stirring romance-drama of the stage "Illusion," from the famous novel by Arthur Train. The above feature productions are selected from the "New Show World" all-hit program, under contract to the Broadway, the original vitaphone theatre of Norwich, a program which promises unbounded enjoyment for Broadway patrons this fall and winter season.

Broadway Theatre.

Nero fiddled while Rome burned, so it is reported.

But Charles King, famous Broadway musical comedy star who is now singing and dancing in Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's all-talking, all-singing and all-dancing production, "The Broadway Melody," now playing at the Breed theatre, staged a comedy dance act on the deck of the transport Zeelander during a submarine attack off the coast of St. Nazaire, France, during the world war and was nearly made an admiral because of his bravery.

"Why, I was entertaining some of the boys when an announcement of a submarine attack cleared the decks. I was so scarced I kept right on dancing, wondering what to do, when one of the boys dragged me down a gangway," said King, "I didn't do any more dancing the rest of the trip."

Featured with King in the M-G-M production are Bessie Love and Anita Page. Harry Beaumont directed with a large cast of notable players in support.

Charges Police Graft

Astounding charges of a colossal liquor protection ring among Los Angeles police have been made by J. P. Westman, alias Harry McDonald, self-styled bootleg king, shown here, who claims he has paid $500,000 in bribes to the ring over a period of five years. A grand jury has been investigating the charges which involve 62 police officers.

Many a man's empty pockets are due to his wife's fondness for change.

'DOWN WENT McGINTY' MAN NOW RUNS A CANDY STORE

TAMPA, Fla.— (AP) —Across the street from a local high school is a little notion and candy store well patronized by pupils because the proprietor is always jolly and always whistling a vaguely reminiscent tune.

Said proprietor is Joe Flynn, one time headliner with the vaudeville team of Sheridan and Flynn, and the tune he whistles brought him wide fame in a past generation.

"It is "Down Went McGinty," Joe Flynn's 20-minute song writing effort of a "broke" period in his life, which started him on a successful stage career of 20 years.

Flynn retired from the stage 15 years ago and explains his present semi-ascetic life as a seeking for the peace and quiet which he never received as a youth.

TREE IRKS BATTER: HE CHOPS IT DOWN

CHARLOTTE, N. C.— (AP) —Roy Luebbe, catcher for the Charlotte Hornets of the Sally league, believes in personally removing things that affect his batting eye.

Luebbe was seen chopping away at a tree outside the left field fence of his home diamond. He explained that its leaves, moving in the wind, distracted him when he was at the plate.

INVALID USES TRUCK AS INSURANCE OFFICE

ST. LOUIS—(AP)—Richard Conley may be the country's only insurance broker to ride in his office, yet he finds it a paying business.

A small truck is Conley's headquarters for his work as notary public, insurance broker and real estate dealer. An invalid, he resorted to truck transportation to call on clients. Last year he earned $6,000.

Conley studied law after his spine was smashed in an accident several years ago. Later he went into insurance and real estate. Despite his handicaps, Conley is an ardent baseball fan and likes to fish.

Game Preserve, 55,000 Acres

SAN ANTONIO, Tex.—(AP)—Eight ranches, at the cost of about $1,500,000, have been joined for a game preserve of 55,000 acres by O. R. Seagraves, capitalist.

STONINGTON BOAT OWNER SUES FOR $3,000 DAMAGES

For damage sustained by his boat "Edna" when it was in collision on the high seas, Edward Dybing of Stonington has brought suit in the superior court against Albert Jones of Mystic, owner of the boat "Nellie." Dybing claims that it was because of the negligent way in which the "Nellie" was navigated on June 15, 1929, that the collision occurred and he asks $3,000 damages. The suit has been filed with Clerk John H. Walker of the superior court and is returnable in October.

A business man's idea of tough luck is to be compelled to attend a social function.

GABRIELLE GOES TO REFORMATORY FOR BURGLARY ATTEMPT IN PAWCATUCK

Charles Gabrielle, 19, of Westerly, was sentenced to the state reformatory when he was found guilty in the superior court here Thursday afternoon of attempted statutory burglary on Aug. 12, at the filling station of Ralph W. Lawton, 20 Liberty street, Pawcatuck, Stonington.

His self-confessed accomplice, Charles Yeconette, 14, also a Westerly boy, who turned state's evidence, was committed to the state school for boys, sentence suspended, and put under probation to be turned over to the Westerly authorities with information of the action that had been taken in the court here.

The trial was held before Judge Earnest C. Simpson, with State Attorney Arthur M. Brown prosecuting and Attorney Charles L. Stewart as public defender representing Gabrielle. Attorney John F. Gallagher, of Westerly, was counsel for Yeconette, whose case was settled in chambers.

The first witness called was Simeon R. Shortman, of Pawcatuck, Stonington, a supernumerary policeman, who was on duty on the night of Aug. 12. That night while passing the Ralph W. Lawton filling station at 20 Liberty street, about 1:55 a. m., he heard a ripping sound, he said, and found Gabrielle behind the building and Charles Yeconette under the building, hiding behind two oil tanks. He took the two men to the lockup, and notified Lawton. At that time nothing was found but later warrants were issued for Gabrielle and Yeconette.

On cross examination by Attorney Stewart, the officer said he found nothing by which the building had been broken into. The next morning, he said, he saw chisel marks on the cellar door. The two prisoners were released after they had been held in custody at the time for about an hour and a half.

State Policeman Frederick L. Johnson, attached to the Groton barracks, testified to arresting Gabrielle on Aug. 17, in a raid at Pawcatuck. The answer was admitted by Judge Simpson over objection from Attorney Stewart.

Ralph W. Lawton, proprietor of the filling station, testified that the lock on his door was in perfect condition on the night of August 12 but the lock was broken and the door was splintered when he saw them on the morning of the 13th. The marks were fresh.

On cross examination Mr. Lawton said there were four sets of marks on the door, and that three sets of these marks had been on the door before Aug. 12.

Charles Yeconette, 14, of Westerly, took the stand and told of Gabrielle taking him for an automobile ride on the night of Aug. 12, about 6:30, riding for about six hours. After they got back they had coffee and then went to Lawton's filling station. The witness said Gabrielle talked to him about getting into the filling station to get some money while they were on the ride. Yeconette said he was using the toilet while Gabrielle was near the building and he heard a noise but he couldn't tell what kind of a noise it was. He saw Gabrielle throw something away but couldn't tell what it was. Yeconette said Gabrielle told him, if they were caught, to tell the cop he was using the toilet for an excuse.

On cross examination Attorney Stewart brought out from Yeconette that he lied when first told about the case to officers and had been arrested before, once for stealing money from automobiles, another time for trying to break into a building and another time for stealing pictures from a theater. He has been to the state reform school in Rhode Island and is now on probation from the Westerly court.

Judge Simpson gave Yeconette a lengthy examination after the two attorneys had concluded with him.

State Attorney Brown then rested and Attorney Brown moved for the discharge of Gabrielle, arguing that there was insufficient evidence to convict Gabrielle and that the principal evidence against the men was from an admitted liar and thief.

Judge Simpson denied the motion and after a short recess the defense was taken up.

Officer Robert Kessel, of Westerly, was the first witnes. He said he had known Yeconette for ten or twelve years and his reputation for truth and veracity was not on a par with boys of his age.

With this testimony the defense rested and the arguments were made by State Attorney Brown and Attorney Stewart.

Judge Simpson found Gabrielle guilty and State Attorney Brown moved for sentence, stating that Gabrielle is now under a deferred sentence of seven years in Rhode Island and told of his previous record in being sent to the state school for boys in Rhode Island and has been convicted twice of automobile law violations, besides the conviction under which he has a deferred sentence, Mr. Brown said he thought Gabrielle ought to go to the reformatory.

Judge Simpson committed Gabrielle to the reformatory at Cheshire and the case of Yeconette was taken up in chambers, after which court took an indefinite recess, this concluding the business of this session.
